PREFACE

In the years 1926-1929, there were published by me in the Indian Antiquary and the Journal of the Bombay Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society some articles under the general title of 'Vedic Studies.' As it has been thought that it would be more convenient to students if these articles were collected together and printed in the form of a book, I have done so here with the kind permission of the editors of those journals. Four articles however are new, and slight alterations have been made here and there in some of the others.

Owing to unexpected delays, the printing had to be done at a time when I was unable to read the proofs with the care which such work demands. In consequence, there is a fairly large number of typographical errors in the book; and their number would undoubtedly have been larger had it not been for the kindness of Mr. S. Sitaramayya and some other friends who obligingly took on themselves the task of reading some of the proofs. Such of the errors as I have noticed are corrected in the Errata given on the next page: some of them are due to the diacritical marks breaking off in the course of printing, and may not be found in all copies.

As is indicated by the title itself, I am in this book following the path trodden by the eminent German scholars Pischel and Geldner in their Vedische Studien which consists of articles devoted to the interpretation of obscure or misunderstood Vedic words. Like them (see op. cit., I, xxx), I have endeavoured to avoid reading un-Indian meanings into the Rgveda, and, as far as possible, to elucidate the meaning of Rgvedic passages by means of other RV passages. I venture to believe that I have adhered to this principle more closely than the above-named scholars; and this, as also the difference of personal outlook, will perhaps explain why my interpretations of some words (e.g. dán, padbhíh, admasád, nireká) differ from those given by them.

The abbreviations used to denote Vedic texts are the same as, or very similar to, those used by Bloomfield in his Vedic Concordance and explained on pp. xvi—xxii of the Introduction of that book.

A. Venkatasubbiah

nitya

This is a very familiar word that occurs about thirty-eight times in the RV and very frequently in the other Vedic texts and in later literature. The commentators, Indian as well as European are at one in interpreting this word as (1) sviva, sahaja, own, and (2) dhruva, lasting, constant, perpetual, uninterrupted imperishable, eternal, etc. In assuming the second of the above two meanings for this word in the RV, the commentators have been no doubt guided by the circumstance that the word nitya has that meaning in later texts. as a matter of fact, this latter meaning is not appropriate and does not yield good sense in a number of passages for instance, in 1, 66, 1: āyúr ná prānó nítyo ná sūnúh and 1, 185, 2: nítyam ná sūnúm pitrór upásthe dyávä ráksatam prthiví no ábhvat where nítvah sūnúh is explained by Sāyana as dhruvah ātmajah, and by Ludwig as 'ein überlebender Sohn' (1, 66, 1) and 'lebender Sohn': in 1, 166, 2: nítvam ná sūnúm mádhu bíbhrata úpa krilanti krīlā vidátheşu ghŕsvayah where nítyam sūnúm is translated by Ludwig as 'einen nicht absterbenden Sohn'; in AV. 7, 109: káh prísnim dhenúm várunena dattám átharvane sudúghām nítyavatsam, Śānkh. GS. 3, 2, 5: enām sisuh krandaty ā kumāra enām dhenuh krandatu nitya-vatsā and ibid. 3, 2, 8: āsyandantām dhenavo nitya-vatsāh where the expression nityavatsā dhenuh is explained as 'cow with constant calf' by Whitney (AV. Translation) and 'unceasingly fertile cow' (SBE. 29, 93) and 'immer fruchtbare Kuh' and 'beständig fruchtbare Kuh' by Oldenberg (Ind. Stud. 15, 71); and in 10, 39, 14: ny àmpkṣāma yóśaṇām ná márye nítyam ná sūnúm tánayam dádhānāh where nítya is found as the tertium comparationis in a simile.

The other meaning 'own' is still less appropriate here; and it therefore becomes clear that in these and other similar passages the word nitya has a meaning different from the two mentioned above.

What this meaning is, can be found out with the help of 1, 66, 1; 1, 166, 2 and 10, 39, 14, all which verses contain similes with nitya as tertium comparationis. In the first of these verses it is said that Agni is nitya as a son  $(s\bar{u}n\dot{u})$ ; in the second, that honey  $(m\acute{a}dhu)$  is nitya as a son  $(s\bar{u}n\dot{u})$ ; and in the third, that a hymn of praise  $(st\acute{o}ma)$  is nitya as a son  $(s\bar{u}n\dot{u})$ . A comparison therefore of the adjectives which these words— $s\bar{u}n\dot{u}$ ,  $m\acute{a}dhu$ ,  $st\acute{o}ma$  and  $agn\acute{u}$ —receive in the RV, will show what characteristics are common to the things denoted by them and will thus determine the sense of nitya.

Of these words, sūnú receives the following adjectives, -trayayayya, priy á, márjya, vijavan, súci, suscva, hŕdya and nitya; and mádhu, the following,—ádhigartya, ásnápinaddha, kámya, górjika, ghrtá, cáru, tridhátu, divyá, daívya, pakvá, párisikta, púskare nísikta, prátibhrta, priyá, madirá, vāraņá, saraghá, suksáya, sutá, somyá, spārhá and nítya; while stóma has the following adjectives-áksitoti, agrivá, ántama, ántara, ápūrvya. ámanda, amrta, uruvyác, étasa, éva, kámya, krátumān, giyámāna, gír (?), dŕšika, dyutádyāman, dyumnín, dhanasá, námasvan, návajata, návya, nútana, purutáma, pūtú, pūrvyá, préstha, mádhumattama, madhyamá, mánasa vasyámāna, mandin, mahát, ratnadhātama, rudriya, (?), vánīvan, vājáyan, váhistha, vidúsā árdhya, sámtama, śasyámāna, śukrá, śúci, śūşá, śūşyà, satrājít, sādhú, sidhrá, suvrktí (?), havişmān, hrdā taştá, hrdisprk, and also nítya.

It will be seen that the only adjective (besides nítya) common to the three words  $s\bar{u}n\hat{u}$ , mádhu and stóma is priyá (in the case of stóma, we find instead of priyá its superlative form préstha) and the only characteristic that is common to the things denoted by these words is priyatva. priyá is used as an epithet of agní also in 1, 143, 1; 5, 23, 3; and 6, 1, 6, while Agni, further, is called priyāṇām présthah once and purupriyáh many times. Thus the only adjective (beside nítya whose meaning we are engaged in finding out) and the only characteristic that are common to the above-mentioned four words and the things denoted by them, are priya and priyatva¹; which makes it probable that rítya means priyá in the above passages. The probability, in this instance, is converted into certainty by the parallelism of priyá and nítya in 1, 91, 6c: priyástotro vánaspátih and and 9, 12, 7a: nítyastotro vánaspátih.

nitya thus means priya, dear, pleasing, beloved, favourite. It has this meaning in the following passages:

1, 73, 4: tám tvā náro dáma á nítyam iddhám ágne sácanta kṣitiṣu dhruvásu | ádhi dyumnám ní dadhur bhūry asmin bhávā viśváyur dharúno rayīnām ||

"Men have worshipped in their stable dwellings, O Agni, thee that art dear and flaming: they have placed much splendour in him. Do thou become the bearer of riches, the vivifier of all." Compare the many passages where Agni is called priyá, namely, 1, 26, 7; 1, 75, 4; 1, 91, 3; 1, 128, 7-8; 1, 143, 1; 2, 4, 3; 5, 1, 9; 5, 23, 3; 6, 1, 6; 6, 2, 7; 6, 16, 42; 6, 48, 1; 7, 16, 1; 8, 84, 1; and also 6, 15, 6 (priyám-priyam); 1, 186, 3 and 8, 84, 1 (préstham) and 8, 103, 10 (priyánām préstham); compare also the passages where he receives the epithet purupriyá (see Grassmann, s.v.) and mandrá (see ibid., s.v.).

¹ This seems to have been felt by Grassman also who in 1, 66, 1, has translated nityo nā sānūh as 'wie eigener Sohn, lieb.' Sāyaṇa too, similarly explains nityam nā sānūm in 1, 166, 2, as nityam aurasam priyam putram iva.

- "The bright ones, for their protection from everything, set him down in the dwelling, Agni, beautiful to look at, who sat down in the house, dear and capable." The verse occurs in the first hymn of the seventh Maṇḍala whose authorship is ascribed to the Vasiṣṭhas: and as the word vásiṣṭha is the superlative of the word vásu, Sāyaṇa is perhaps right in saying that the word vásavaḥ here refers to the Vasiṣṭhas.
  - 3, 25, 5: ágne apám sám idhyasc duroné nítyah sūno sahaso jātavedah | sadhústhāni maháyamāna ūtí ||
- "Thou, the glorifier of dwelling-houses with thy protection, the beloved, art kindled in the abode of the waters, O Agni Jātavedas, son of strength."
- "They worship him with adorations, Agni, the wise, the hotr, the ornament of the sacrifices, who extended the two worlds according to divine ordinance. They adorn (him), the beloved (like a) race-horse, with ghee."
- 10, 12, 2: devó deván paribhúr rténa
  váhā no havyám prathamás cikitván | dhūmáketuḥ samídhā bhárjiko
  mandró hótā nítyo vācá yájiyān ||
- "The god (sc. Agni) encompasses the gods; bear thou, (O Agni), our offering (to the gods) according to divine ordinance, thou that art knowing, the first, smoke-bannered and with brightness as thy ornament (when kindled) with fuel, the pleasing beloved hotr that worshippest (the gods) better (than human hotrs) with thy voice." Compare 6, 1, 6: saparyényah sá priyó vikşv àgnír hótā mandró ní ṣasādā yájiyān | tám tvā vayám dáma å dīdivāmsam úpa jñubādho námasā sadema and

- 1, 26, 7: priyó no astu vispátir hótā mandró várcnyah where the expression priyó mandró hótā corresponds to nítyo mandró hótā in this verse. Compare also 1, 44, 3: adyā dūtám vṛṇīmahe vásum agním purupriyám | dhūmáketum bhārjīkam vyùṣtiṣu yajñānām adhvarasríyam ||
  - 1, 66, 1: rayir ná citrá súro ná samdýg āyúr ná prānó nítyo ná sūnúh ||
- "(Agni); brilliant like wealth, (effulgent) like the sun in appearance, vivifier like the prāṇa (the life-breath), dear like a son." Compare 1, 69, 5: putró ná jätó raṇvó duroṇé "pleasing in the house like a son that is born."
  - 3, 15, 2: trám no asyā uşáso vyùṣṭau
    tvám sūra údite bodhi gopāḥ | jánmeva nítyam tánayam juṣasva
    stómam me agne tanvā sujāta ||
- "Become our protector when this dawn dawns and the sun rises; cherish, O Agni well-born of thy own self, this (dear) praise of mine as a father (cherishes) his dear son." I follow Sāyaṇa in understanding jánman as father in spite of its being accented on the root-syllable; compare 7, 54, 2: pitéva putrân práti no juṣasva and 10, 22, 3: pitâ putrâm iva priyâm. Compare also 5, 42, 2 and 10, 119, 4 putrâm iva priyâm. To nîtyam stômam here corresponds priyâm brâhma in 1, 75, 2; 5, 42, 2; 5, 85, 1; priyâm mânma in 6, 68, 9; 10, 54, 6; 10, 96, 11; 2, 41, 18; priyâ manīṣâ in 6, 67, 2; prêṣṭhā matîḥ in 7, 88, 1; prêṣṭhā suṣṭutîḥ in 4, 43, 1; prêṣṭhām nâmaḥ in 7, 36, 5; and prêṣṭhaḥ stômaḥ in 7, 34, 14; mandrâ giḥ in 7, 18, 3 and mandrâ hṛdâḥ in 8, 43, 31.
- 10, 39, 14: etám vām stómam asvinav akarmātakṣāma bhṛgavo ná rátham | ny àmṛkṣāma yóṣaṇām ná márye nítyam ná sūnúm tánayam dádkānāḥ ||
- "We have made this praise for you, O Asvins; we have cut them (into shape) as Bhrgus a chariot.

Holding it (carefully) as (parents do) a dear son, we have polished and embellished it as (one adorns) a woman for a young man."

- 1, 185, 2: bhúrim dvé ácarantī cárantam padvántam gárbham apádī dadhāte | nítyam ná sūnúm pitrór upásthe dyávā rákṣatam pṛthivī no ábhvāt ||
- "The two, unmoving and footless, bear much offspring that has feet and moves. Like a dear son in the lap of his parents—protect us, O Heaven and Earth, from the evil being." There is an anacoluthon in the second half-verse; the meaning is, 'O Heaven and Earth, protect us from the evil being and give us shelter as parents shelter a dear son in their lap and ward off from him all harm.' Compare 6, 75, 4: mātéva putṛám bibhṛtām upásthe | ápa sátrūn vidhyatām samvidāné.
  - 7, 1, 21: tvám agne suhávo raņvásamdṛk
    sudītī sūno sahaso didīhi | mā tvé sácā tánaye nitya ā dhan
    mā vīró asmán náryo vi dāsīt ||
- "Thou, O Agni, art easy to invoke and of pleasing appearance; shine with bright gleams, O son of strength. Let not evil befall our dear son (when he is) with thee; may we not want a valorous son."
  - 1, 166, 2 nítyam ná sūnúm mádhu bíbhrata úpa krilanti krīļā vidátheşu ghṛṣvayaḥ | nákṣanti rudrā ávasā namasvinam ná mardhanti svátavaso haviskṛtam ||
- "Carrying honey that is dear as a son, the swift terrible (Maruts) bound forward in battles. The sons of Rudra come with protection to the adorer; they, strong of themselves, do not injure him that offers oblations (to them)." The 'honey' (mádhu) that the Maruts are here represented as carrying is without doubt the same with which they besprinkle the earth; compare 5, 54, 8:

pinvanty útsam yúd ináso ásvaran vy ùndanti pṛthivim mádhvo ándhasā. madhu receives the epithet priyá in eight passages; see Grassmann, S. V. priyám (n.); cp. also kámyam mádhu in 9, 72, 2. With the first pāda, nítyam ná sūnúm mádhu bíbhrata úpa, compare nítyam ná sūnúm tánayam dádkānāḥ in 10, 39, 14 explained above.

7, 1, 12 : yám aśvi nityam upayāti yajñám prajávantam svapatyám kṣáyam naḥ | svájanmanā śéṣasā vāvṛdhānám ||

This verse is obscure: I understand it as a continuation of the preceding verse', 'May we not sit down in the empty dwelling of men; may we not sit round thee without son, without offspring; (may we sit) in houses full of children, O thou that makest houses to prosper' and translate: "(May we sit down in) our dear dwelling with good offspring, with children, which is prospering with issue born of us, which is the seat of sacrifices, and to which (Agni), who has horses, goes." I follow Sāyana in taking yajñám as an adjective of kşáyam and meaning yajñāśraya. There seems to be no doubt that  $yaj\tilde{n}\acute{a}$  is an adjective here of  $ks\acute{a}ya$ , and that being so, it can be best interpreted here as yajñāśraya or yajanīya. The words  $ya/\tilde{n}a$  and ksaya occur together again in 1, 132, 3, which too, is obscure. As regards aśvi, Oldenberg's observations (RV. Noten, II, p. 4) that it refers to a human and not to a god do not seem to me to be convincing; and I still think that it refers to a god, to wit, Agni. Compare 5, 6, 1 (explained below) which describes Agni as 'the home to which the swift horses go,' that is, as the treasure-house of horses; compare also 5, 6, 2.

- "The husband and wife, O gods, who thinking al press and wash (Soma and mix) with pleasing admixtu The admixture referred to is that of milk, sour r (dadhi) or barley; compare 9, 101, 8: sám u priyá anū; gávo mádāya ghişvayah where the admixture of m gāvah, receives the epithet priyá.
  - 4, 4, 7: séd agne astu subhágah sudánur yás tvā nítyena havísā yá ukthaíh | píprīsati svá áyusi durqné visvéd asmai sudínā sásad istíh ||
- "May he, O Agni, be fortunate and rich v wishes to sacrifice to thee with pleasing oblations a hymns in his house through his life. Let all (days) fortunate days for him—such is the prayer." I meaning of sudānu is not clear: Oldenberg translates (SBE., 46, p. 331) as 'blessed with good rain,' Grassma (Ueber.) as 'reich an Gut' and Geldner (Glossar) 'reich-beschenkt.' There is no doubt that the two limentioned meanings express very nearly what the p must have had in his mind; and I have therefore, default of a more accurate knowledge of the meaning the word, here rendered it as 'rich.' With regard nityena haviṣā, compare priyām haviḥ in 10, 86, 12-priyātamam haviḥ in 9, 34, 5 and jūṣṭam haviḥ in 3, 59
  - 1, 66, 5: durókaśocih krátur ná nítyo jāyéva yónāv áram vísvasmai ||
- "(Agni), of unaccustomed brilliance, dear like ideal, like a wife in the house, ready for everything."
  - 8, 75, 6: tásmai nūnám abhidyave vācā virūpa nitya výsue codasva sustutim ||
- "Send forth now, O Virūpa, a well-made (hymn praise with thy dear pleasing voice towards the stre (Agni), the heavenly (?)." Regarding nityā vāk he compare mandrā vāk in 8, 100, 11.

- 9, 12, 7: nítyastotro vánaspátir dhīnām antáḥ sabardúghaḥ | hinvānó mānuṣā yugá ||
- "(Soma), the lord of the forest, fond of praises, who milks nectar amidst the praise-hymns and stimulates the generations of men." As mentioned above, to nityastotro vánaspátih here corresponds priyástotro vánaspátih in 1, 91, 6.
  - 5, 6, 1: agním tám manye yó vásur ástam yám yánti dhenávah | ástam árvanta āsávóstam nítyāso väjína ísam stotŕbhya á bhara ||
- "I praise that Agni who is a Vasu, to whom the milch-cows go home, the swift horses go home, the dear patrons go home; bring food (nourishment) to thy praisers." The word vā/inaḥ in the fourth pāda which I have translated as 'patrons' denotes the rich men who institute sacrifices, the yajamānāḥ as Sāyaṇa has correctly explained and not priests (Grassmann, RV. Ueber) or race-horses as Ludwig and Oldenberg (SBE., 46, p. 379) think. This is shown clearly by the following verse, só agnír yó vásur grṇé sáṁ yám āyánti dhenávaḥ sám árvanto raghudrúvaḥ sáṁ sujātásaḥ sūráya iṣaṁ stotýbhya á bhara which is parallel to the preceding one and where the fourth pāda mentions explicitly the sujātásaḥ sūráyaḥ.
  - 1,71,1: úpa prá jinvann ušatīr ušántam pátim ná nítyam jánayah sánīļāh | svásārah šyāvīm áruṣīm ajuṣrañ citrám ucchántīm uṣásam ná gávah ||
- "The loving (women) have stimulated (to activity) their lover as wives in the same bed (literally, in the same nest) stimulate (to amorous activity) their dear husband. The sisters have cherished the Dark and the Bright as the cows have cherished the brightly dawning Dawn." The 'loving women,' usatih, denote in all probability, the prayers that are addressed to Agni—who is referred to here by the word usantam—and that are supposed to arouse him to activity, so that Agni will bring the gods to the sacrifice, carry offerings to them, etc.; see Bergaigne II, p. 68. The import of the second half-verse is obscure; see however Oldenberg, SBE., 46, p. 75 f. and RV.Noten I, p. 73. With regard to nityam pátim compare jústam pátim in 9, 97, 22; åd īm āyan váram á vāvasānā jústam pátim kaláse gāva indum where I believe, differing from Grassmann (s.v. vās), that the word vāvasānāh should be derived from the root vas (to wish, to desire: vasa kāntau) and be interpreted in the same sense as ušatīh in this passage and in 1, 62, 11. Compare also 1, 62, 11 and the verse that follows here, 1, 140, 7.

- 1, 140, 7: sá samstíro vistírah sám grbhāyati
  jánánn cvá janatir nítva á saye |
  púnar vardhante ápi yanti devyàm
  anyád várpah pitróh krnvate sácā ||
- "He (sc. Agui) clasps (the plants, etc.) that have been laid together and have been laid out. Being intimate with them that are intimate with him, and being their dear (lover), he lies with them. They grow up again and attain to godhead; they together give another form to their parents (that is, to Heaven and Earth)."
  - 1, 141, 2: pṛkṣó vápuḥ pitumān nitya ā saye
    dvitīyam ā saptásivāsu mātṛṣu | tṛtīyam asya vṛṣabhásya doháse
    dása pramatim janayanta yóṣaṇaḥ ||
- "The beloved (Agni), strong, rich in food, rests in the brilliant (sun): secondly, in the seven auspicious mothers; thirdly the ten women (that is, the ten fingers) have engendered him who looks after (us), in order to milk this bull." I have followed here the suggestion of Grassmann and PW. about reading saptá sivásu and dása prámatim in the text though the text as it stands—saptásivāsu (seven-fold auspicious) and dásapramatim

(having ten to care for him; cared for by ten)—is not unintelligible. The words dvitiyam and trtiyam seem to indicate that the first pada refers to the first 'birth' of Agnias the sun that shines in the sky. It is therefore possible to understand vápuh, brilliant, as referring to the bright sky (dyoh) and to translate "The beloved Agni, strong, rich in food, entered in the brilliant sky." With reference to the sun being 'rich in food,' compare Chan. Up. 3, 1, 1: asau vā ādityo devamadhu and also the first ten khandas of that chapter. In the first pada, the author of the Padapātha has decomposed nitya å saye into nityah å saye; and the translation given above follows this view. But the words dvitivam a saptásivasu matisu that follow seem to indicate that nitya too should be regarded as a locative so that the padaccheda would be nitye å saye. The meaning in this case would be: "The brilliant (Agni), strong, rich in food, has entered in his own (place), that is, is in the sky "; see Macdonell's Vedic Mythology, p. 92 and the passages referred to therein.

- 10, 31, 4: nítyas cākanyāt svápatir dámūnā yásmā u deváḥ savitā jajāna | bhágo vā góbhir aryamém anajyāt só asmai cārus chadayad utá syāt ||
- "May the friend of the house, lord of his self, the beloved, for whom god Savitr has begotten, be pleased; may Bhaga or Aryaman ornament him with kine (or, anoint him with butter); may he shine beautifully, may he be our shelter."
  - 4, 41, 10 : ásvyasya tmánā ráthyasya puştér nítyasya rāyáh pátayah syāma | tá cakrānā ūtíbhir návyasibhir asmatrā rāyo niyútah sacantām ||
- 'May we be lords of prosperity in horse-herds and chariots and of beloved wealth. The two, (Indra and Varuṇa) helping us newly with their protection—may riches come to us (together, like) a team of horses." There is an anacoluthon in the second half-verse where the nominative dual tā has no predicate. With respect to nityasya rāyāh, compare priyām vāsu in 4, 8, 3 and 7, 32, 15, etc., vāmām vāsu in 6, 10, 5 and spārhām vāsu in 2, 23, 9, etc., sprhayāyyo rayāh and puruspṛham rayām (see Grassmann, s. v. spṛhayāyya and puruspṛh).

- "O Pūṣan, brilliant, immortal, our dear wealth (namely), our kine, has gone away somewhere, to some meadow; be our gracious helper and most liberal in the winning of the wealth (that is, graciously recover them for us)." The prayer is addressed to Pūṣan, who is the recoverer of lost goods; see Macdonell's Ved. Mythology, p. 36. With nityam rėknah here, compare priyām rėknah in 10, 132, 3.

"Whom, while in the womb, enemies that want to injure and can injure, do not injure. The blind, not seeing, did not harm; his dear well-wishers protected him with watchfulness." pretarah, which I have rendered as 'well-wishers,' literally means 'lovers, pleasers.' It is preferable to construe abhikhyā, literally, with sight, that is with forethought, with watchfulness, with arakşan rather than with andhā apasyā ná dabhan (as Grassmann in RV. Ueber, Ludwig and Oldenberg, SBE. 46, p. 173 have done); for the translation 'The blind, not seeing, did not injure him with their look' hardly yields good nítyāh pretārah means the dear well-wishers of Agni (who is the deity of this verse), that is, the priests who are dear to Agni and to whom Agni is dear. Compare 1, 26, 7: priyó no astu vispátir hótā mandró várenyah | priyáh svagnáyo vayám.

"Efficacious, O Agni, and winners (of wealth) are the prayers of us' whom thou, the dear hotr in the house protectest. He, the red-horsed, is holy and has much food: may everything pleasing happen to him (the sacrificer, yajamāna) every day." In the light of the foregoing, I have taken nítyahotā (with accent on nítya)

&#x27;Is it possible, however, that there is a word asme derived from the radix a—meaning this (idam)? The correlation of yat in this verse and in verse 8, 63, 12 would seem to show that this is the case with the word asme in these verses. Likewise, the asme in verses 1, 24, 7; 1, 71, 2; 1, 102, 2; 8, 51, 10 and 10, 61, 25 seems to be of this character.

as a karmadhāraya compound; it is, however, also possible to regard it as a bahuvrīhi compound meaning 'he to whom the priest, hote, is dear'; compare priyāḥ svagnāyo vayām in 1, 26, 7 cited above; compare also the following passage:

Maitr. Sam. 1, 1, 12: nityahotāram tvā kave dyumantah sam idhīmahi |

The corresponding passage in the other Yajus-samhitās reads vitihotram tvā kave dyumántam sám idhīmahi | ágne bṛhántam adhvaré where vitihotram means 'to whom the hotra, the office of the hotṛ, is dear'; compare Uvaṭa on VS. 2, 4: vītiḥ abhilāṣaḥ hotṛ karmaṇi yasya saḥ vītihotraḥ. I therefore take nityahotāram here as a bahuvrīhi and translate: "We, the bright, kindle, O wise one, thee to whom the hotṛ is dear." Or is the word hotṛ here used in the abstract sense of hotra or hotṛtva—bhāva-pradhāno nirdesaḥ? If so, nityahotāram would be the exact equivalent of vitihotram.

Šankh. GS. 3, 2, 5: enām sisuḥ krandaty ā kumāra enām dhenuḥ krandatu nitya-vatsā |

"The child, the young one, cries near it; may the milch-cow to whom the calf is dear, low near it." The milch-cow lowing to her calf is a familiar figure of comparison even in the RV; compare 9, 12, 2: abhi viprā anūṣata gắvo vatsám ná mātáraḥ | indram 'the priests call out to Indra as mother-cows low to their calves;' 2, 2, 2: abhi tvā náktīr uṣáso vavāśirégne vatsám ná svásareṣu dhenávaḥ 'to thee, O Agni, they called out at nights and at dawns as the milch-cows low to their calves in evenings'; 8, 88, 1: abhi vatsám ná svásareṣu dhenáva indram girbhir navāmahe 'we call out to Indra with our hymns of praise as milch-cows low to their calves in evenings'; 6, 45, 25; 8, 95, 1; etc.

"The child, the young one cries to it; may milchcows to whom the calf is dear, pour forth (milk from their udders) near it." Oldenberg has here interpreted the verb syandantām in the sense of 'flocking' (SBE., 20, p. 93): but the reference here is to the return home of milch-cows after grazing in the pastures, eager to rejoin their calves and therefore lowing to them (this idea is expressed in Sankh. GS. 3, 2, 5, explained above, by the word krandatu), and, as the Indian poets express it, with udders oozing milk; compare Raghuvamśa, 1, 84: (anindyā Nandinī nāma dhenur āvavṛte vanāt) ... bhuvam kosnena kundodhni medhyenāvabhrthād api | prasravenäbhivarsanti vatsäloka-pravartinä || and Harşacarita (Nirnayasagara edition. p. 80): divasa-vihrtipratyāgatam prasnuta-stanam . . . dhenu-vargam udgata-ksīram. Compare also 2, 34, 8: dhenúr ná šíšve svásarcsu pinvate jánava ratáhavise mahim ísam 'they (sc. the Maruts) ooze with copious food for every man who has offered them oblations as a milch-cow oozes milk for her calt in evenings': 10, 75, 4: abhi tvā sindho šíšum in ná matáro vašrá arsanti páyascva dhenávah 'they (the rivers) run towards thee, O Sindhu, as milch-cows. lowing and with (oozing) milk, run to their calves'; 9, 94, 2; dhíyah pinvānāh svásare ná gáva rtayántīr abhí vāvašra indum 'the hymns of praise, following rta, lowed to Soma as cows overflowing (with milk) low (to their calves) in the evening'; 9, 68, 1: ásisyadanta gava a ná dhenávah | barhisádo vacanávanta údhabhih parisrútam usrívā nirníjam dhire; and 9, 77, 1: abhim rtásva sudúgkā ghrtascúto vāsrā arşanti páyascva dhenávah: and 10, 31, 11: prá krsnáya rúsad apinvatódhah.

AV. 7, 109 (104), 1: káḥ pṛśnim dhenúm váruņena dattām átharvaņe sud úghām nityavatsām | bṛhaspátinā sakhyám juṣāṇó yathāvaśám tanvàḥ kalpayāti ||

"Who, enjoying companionship with Brhaspati shall at his will make use of the spotted milch-cow, well-milking, fond of her calf, given by Varuṇa to Atharvan?" I understand tanvàḥ here as equivalent to ātmanaḥ so that tanváḥ kalpayāti means ātmana upakalpayati, 'makes ready for one's own use, that is, makes use of.' Whitney translates "Who, enjoying companionship with Bṛhaspati, shall shape its body at his will—the spotted milch-cow, well-milking." etc., which is unintelligible to me.

AV. 9, 4, 21: ayám pípāna indra id
rayim dadhātu cetanim |
ayám dhenúm sudúghām nítyavatsām
vásam duhām vipascitam paró diváh ||

"Let this burly one, a very Indra, bestow conspicuous wealth; let this (one) (bestow) a well-milking cow, fond of (her) calf: let him yield inspired will from beyond the sky"

This closes the list of passages where nitya has the meaning priya: it has the meaning svīya, sahaja, 'own,' in the passages that follow:

RV 7, 4, 7: parişádyam hy áranasya rékno nítyasya rāyáh pátayah syāma | ná séso agne anyájātam asty ácetānasya mā pathó ví dukṣah ||

This verse is not quite clear; but I believe that Yāska's interpretation of it (Nirukta, 3, 2) and of the verse that follows, is on the whole correct. I therefore translate, following him, "The wealth left by a stranger is to be avoided; may we be lords of our own wealth. There is no (such thing as) offspring that is begot by another. Do not foul the paths for me that am ignorant." As pointed out by Yāska, the 'wealth' mentioned in the first half-verse means 'son'; compare śeṣah in the second half-verse and in the verses that precede and follow this. The last pāda means, "Do not, hiding the right path, point out a wrong path to me who am already ignorant; do not misguide me by saying that another's son can be my son."

- 8, 56, 2: dása máhyam pautakratáh sahásrā dásyave výkah | nítyād rāyó amamhata ||
- "Pautakrata, the Cutter of the Foe, has given me ten thousand from his own wealth."
  - 9, 92, 3: prá sumedhá gätuvíd visvádevali sómah punānáh sáda eti nítyam | bhúvad vísvesu kávyesu rántá nu jánāu yatate páñca dhírah ||
- "Soma, the wise, the knower of ways, used (?) of all gods, being purified goes to his own seat; he takes pleasure in all praises; the wise one stimulates the five folks."
  - 1, 148, 3: nítye cin nú yám sádane jagybhré
    prásastibhir dadhiré yajňíyāsah |
    prá sú nayanta gybháyanta iṣṭáv
    áśvāso ná rathyò rārahāṇáh ||
- "Whom the worshipful (gods) caught hold of in his own place, carried with praises, and holding him and speeding like the horses of a chariot led him in the sacrifice." The reference here is to the original carrying off of Agni from his place in the highest heavens by Mātariśvan, Vivasvat, Bhṛgu, the devas, etc.; compare 10, 46, 9: dyāvā yām agnim pṛthivī jāniṣṭām āpas tváṣṭā bhṛgavo yām sāhobhiḥ | īļényam prathamām mātariśvā devās tatakṣur mānave yājatram and also Macdonell's Vedic Mythology, p. 71. The word yajñiyāḥ refers to the deities above-named.
- 1, 140, 12: ráthāya nāvam utá no gṛhāya nítyāritrām padvátīm rāsy agne | asmākam vīrān utá no maghóno jánāms ca yā pāráyāc chárma yā ca ||
- "Give us for chariot and for house, O Agni, a ship that has its own oars (that is to say, that is propelled of itself) and (moves on its own) feet, that will carry over our sons and our patrons and our people, and that is a shelter."

- 5, 85, 7: aryamyàm varuṇa mitryàm vā
  sákhāyam vā sádam íd bhrátaram vā |
  vesám vā nítyam varuṇáraṇam vā
  yát sīm ågas cakṛmā sisráthas tát ||
- "Free us from the sin, O Varuṇa, that we have at all times committed against our companion, friend, acquaintance, or brother or our own neighbour or stranger."
  - 7, 88, 6: yá afír nítyo varuņa priyáh sán tvám ágamsi krņávat sákhā te ¦ má ta énasvanto yakşin bhujema yandhí şmā vípra stuvaté várūtham ||
- "He, O Varuna, who being thy own dear friend and comrade, has committed evil towards you,-may we not, being sinful feel (thy might), O mighty one. Grant, O thou that art wise, protection (literally, cover) to thy praiser." The yah beginning the first half-verse has apparently no antecedent in correlation with it; but there does not seem to be any doubt that in reality it has for antecedent the plural vayam that is to be supplied in the third pada; the meaning therefore is: "Though, O Varuna, I, being thy own dear friend and comrade, have sinned against thee, do not, O mighty one, make me suffer for it, but graciously become, thou that art wise (and therefore knowest that I am not solely responsible for such sins) the shelter and protector of me that am now praying to you." Compare in this connection the following two verses likewise addressed by Vasistha to Varuna-7, 87, 7: yó mṛļáyati cakrúse cid agah 'who (Varuna) is beneficent and gracious even to one that has committed sins against him' and 7, 86, 6: ná sá svó dúkso varuņa dhrūtiķ sā sūrā manyūr vibhidako acittiķ | ásti jyáyan kúniyasa uparé svápnas canéd ánrtasya prayota "It is not my own impulse, O Varuna; it is predestination, drink, anger, dice, or ignorance (that has led me to sin); there is the elder close to the younger (who has to bear the responsibility, either for having prompted the sin or for not having prevented its commission); even sleep is the promoter of acts against the Law (rta)."

apapitvám cikitur ná prapitvám | hinvánty ásvam áranam ná nítyam
jyävājam pári nayanty ājaú ||

This verse is the last of a quartet of verses known as vasisthadvesinyah as they have been written, it is said, in disparagement of the Vasisthas. It is clear that the verse speaks of the stupidity of the Bharatas; but, for the rest, its exact sense has not yet been made out: see Oldenberg, RV. Noten I, p. 256. I translate tentatively as follows: "These sons of Bharata, O Indra, know neither the time for resting nor that for going. ride their own horse as if it were another's: in battle. they carry round ceremoniously the (bow) strengthened with bow-string." 'Riding their own horse as if it were another's 'means, not so much 'so ungeschickt und dem Tier ungewohnt wie ein fremder Jockey' (Geldner in Ved. St. 2, p. 160, n. 5) as 'using the horse unsparingly as if it were another's; not taking proper care of the horse'; for, it is natural on the part of the owner of the horse to use it carefully and not to beat it cruelly or make it strain its powers and go beyond its strength, while it is as natural for one who is not the owner to pay no attention to the horse or its capacity but to make it go as fast as it can be made by blows and other similar means to go. Compare the saying current in the Kannada country, bitti kudure āvarike cabbe, 'another's horse, and a rod cut from the avarike (cassia auriculata. Lin.; a shrub that is found almost everywhere; the rods cut from it are regarded as unusually tough) shrub

(to beat it with so as to make it go faster)' and the English proverb 'Set a beggar on horseback and he will ride it to death'. In the fourth pada, the European interpreters have understood the word jyavaja as referring to a horse and meaning 'strong (swift) as bow-string. This may perhaps be looked upon as an ordinary figure of speech in European languages in which things or persons are commonly described as being as tough or as strong as 'whipcord' or 'wire', as being 'wiry', etc.; but, I do not know of any instance in Indian literature where the horse is described to be as strong (or as swift) as bow-string. The idea in fact is, I believe, quite unknown and wholly foreign not only to Sanskrit literature but to other Indian literatures as well. believe therefore that Sayana is right in regarding the word as an epithet of dhanus understood here. The verb pari-nī does not mean simply 'to lead round; to carry round' a thing or person but to do so ceremoniously (hence, pari-nī means also 'to marry' as in the ceremony the bride is led by hand thrice ceremoniously round the fire). The sense therefore of the fourth pada is 'These stupid Bharatas, instead of using a bow, that is strung and ready for use, in battle to shoot arrows with, carry it ceremoniously in procession'! Compare the first pada of the preceding verse, ná sáyakasya cikite janāsah 'an arrow was not thought of, O men (by these Bharatas when they brought the strung bow to the battle-field).'

This closes the list of passages in the RV in which the word nitya occurs. It will have been noticed that I have interpreted this word either as (1) sviya, sahaja, 'own' or as (2) priya, 'dear' and that such interpretation has everywhere yielded good sense. It is however true that the meaning (3) dhruva also (which the word nitya has in the Brāhmaṇas and in later literature) is not inappropriate in some of the above passages, for instance, in 4, 4, 7; 4, 41, 10; 9, 12, 7; 1, 73, 4 and 7, 1, 2; but I have felt it unnecessary to adopt that meaning for the RV inasmuch as it is quite necessary to make use of the first two meanings in the RV and these two meanings are enough to explain all the passages (in the RV) in which the word nitya occurs. The assumption of the third meaning dhruva also for the RV would, in these circumstances, mean a needless multiplication of meanings.

As regards the first two meanings, too, it must be observed that in some passages it is difficult to choose between the two as either will do equally well in them. Thus, for instance, one can also interpret nityam ksávam nah in 7, 1, 12 as 'our own house', nityena havisā in 4, 4, 7 as 'by (his) own oblation', nityayā vācā in 8, 75, 6 as 'with (thy) own voice', nítyād rāyáh in 5, 8, 2 as 'from (his) desirable wealth' and nityain sádah in 9, 92, 3 as 'beloved seat'. In such passages, I have preferred one of them to the other and chosen what seemed to me, considering the context, to be the better of the two meanings. I believe, however, that the poet must have had both meanings in his mind when he 'wrote' such passages, and that the more correct course to follow would be to make use of both of them together in the explanation—a course that is occasionally followed by Indian commentators.3

I can not say how the (third) meaning dhruva came to attach itself to the word nitya 4; but it is easy to understand how the (second) meaning priya has developed from that of svīya, sahaja. What is one's 'own', is, in this world, generally, 'dear' to one, which explains how nitya originally meaning svīya, sahaja came to have the secondary meaning priya also.

It is remarkable that the converse also is true: what is 'dear' to one will generally be acquired and made one's 'own' or at least, will be the object of endeavours to acquire and make one's 'own'. Hence it has also come about that the word priya itself which primarily means 'dear, pleasing, agreeable,' etc., has the secondary meaning 'own'.

The number of passages in the Vedas where priya has the sense 'own' is indeed considerable; but, so far, in two or three passages only have the Vedic interpreters recognised that priya=own. One such passage is 1, 82, 2: ákṣann ámīmadanta hy áva priyā adhūṣata

*It is however of interest to note in this connection the analogy of the words rata and nirata. Both these words signify 'fond of, taking pleasure in' primarily, but they have also the secondary meaning 'engaged in; always or incessantly engaged in'. tapo-rata or tapo-nirata thus means 'fond of tapas, taking pleasure in performing tapas' and also 'engaged in tapas, always or incessantly engaged in performing tapas'; similarly dharmanirata, dhyāna-nirata, yajñādhyana-nirata mean 'fond of dharma, of dhyāna, of yajña and adhyayana' and also 'unceasingly or always engaged in the practice of dharma, of dhyāna, of sacrifice and study.' These words are thus synonyms of tapo-nitya, dharma-nitya, dhyāna-nitya and yajñādhyayana-nitya which too have the above two meanings.

It seems to me therefore that, as in the case of rata and nirata, so in the case of nitya also, the meaning 'always, unceasing' is a secondary meaning derived from that of 'dear'. One to whom the practice of tapas or the performance of sacrifice is pleasing will naturally endeavour to devote as much time as possible to such pleasing work; and hence the development of the secondary meaning 'always, unceasingly' from that of 'dear'.

Max Müller, in SBE. 32, p. 215, gives another explanation of how nitya came to signify 'always, unceasingly;' this explanation however seems to me to be unsatisfactory.

where Savana explains privah as svakivas tanuh avadhūsata akampayan; Ludwig, too, translates priyāh here as 'sich' while Grassmann (RV. Ueber.) and Oldenberg (RV. Noten, I, p. 83) adhere to the meaning 'dear'. Another passage is 1, 114, 7: må nah privås tanvò rudra ririsah (with which should be compared the parallel passage from AV- 11, 2, 29: svām tanvām rudra mā rīriso nah) where Sayana adheres to the meaning 'dear', but which has been correctly explained by Bergaigne (III, 152) as 'nos propres corps', by Ludwig as 'unsere eigenen leiber' and by Max Müller (SBE. 32, p. 423) as 'our own bodies'. Max Müller has also (op. cit., p. 425) added the following note: "Priya, dear, used like Gk. philos, in the sense of our own. See Bergaigne III, 152". With these exceptions, the word priva is everywhere explained as 'dear,' 'agreeable,' 'pleasant,' etc., by the exegetists, though, as said above, in a considerable number of passages, the word priya is used, not in that sense at all, but in that of 'own'. This is specially the case in the passages which contain compounds with priva as a component word:

8, 27, 19: yád adyá sűrya udyati
príyakşatrā rtám dadhá |
yán nimrúci prabúdhi visvavedaso
yád vã madhyámdine diváh ||

"Whether you uphold rta, O ye that are independent, when the sun rises to-day, or when he goes down, or at midday or at daybreak (literally, at the time of awaking from sleep), O ye that possess all wealth." The hymn in which this verse occurs is addressed to the Visve

Further, Oldenberg has suggested (SBE., 46, p. 62) that privá may have the sense 'own', in 1, 67, 6. Not only in 1, 67, 6 but in 3, 5, 5; 3, 7, 7 and 4, 5, 8 does privá in my opinion, mean 'own.' The sense of these passages, however, is obscure and I have therefore been unable to include them in those that follow, where privá='own'.

devāḥ or All-Gods to whom therefore the vocatives priyakṣatrāḥ and viśvavedasaḥ refer. priyakṣatrāḥ here does not mean 'whose rule is agreeable (freundlich herrschend; PW, Grassmann, Ludwig)'; but priya here—own, sva, and priyakṣatrāḥ—svakṣatrāḥ, 'ruling themselves, independent'. Compare 5, 48, 1: kád u priyāya dhāmne manāmahe svákṣatrāya sváyaśase mahé vayám which is likewise addressed to the Viśve devāḥ who are here called svákṣatrāḥ; compare also 1, 165, 5 where the Maruts are described as svákṣatrāḥ. priyakṣatra is thus a synonym of svákṣatra, svarāj, svápati.

"The anger of man, O (Agni) born of thyself, has no power over you; thou indeed art the ruler of the earth." priyajāta here does not mean 'als freund geborener' (Ludwig) or 'erwünscht geboren' (Grassmann), but is equivalent to svajāta, 'born of his own self', an epithet that is frequently applied to Agni; compare agne tanvā sujāta in 3, 15, 2; compare also the epithet tanūnapāt, 'son of self' used of Agni.

10, 150, 3: tvám u jatávedasam visvávaram grņe dhiyá | ágne deván á vaha nah priyávratān mṛlīkáya priyávratān ||

"I praise thee, Jātavedas, that hast all desirable things, with hymn. Bring to us, O Agni, the gods, whose are the ordinances—for grace, (those) whose are the ordinances: priyávratān=svavratān, those whose are the ordinances; that is, either (1) those who follow their own ordinances (cp. 3, 7, 7: devā devānām ánu hí vratā gúh 'the gods followed the ordinances of the gods') and not those of others; that is to say, those who are independent, sovereign; or what comes to the same thing, (2) those from whom come the divine ordinances which are followed in the universe; compare

"Offer, like food, a place for Agni, who sits on the altar, whose are the laws and who shines well. Adorn with the hymn, as if with an ornament, (Agni), the bright, the destroyer of darkness, the brilliant-coloured, who has a chariot of splendour". priyádhāmāya= svadhāmne= svavratāva in either of the meanings given above. Compare 3, 21, 2 where Agni is addressed as svádharman 'following his own laws'; regarding the second sense, compare the epithet vratapäh (see Grassmann, s. v.) that is applied to Agni; compare also 7, 6, 2: agnér vratáni pūrvyā mahāni; 2, 8, 3: yásya (sc. agner) vratám ná mivate; 1, 69, 7: nákis ta (agneh) etá vratá minanti; and 6, 7, 5: vaisvānara tava tani vratani mahany agne nakir  $\dot{a}$  dadharsa. In the second pada the word iva has really the force of ca and dhāsim iva yonim prabhara means dhāsim vonim ca prabhara.

There can be no doubt that the word priyádhāman has this same meaning in AV. 17, 1, 10 also: tvám na indrotíbhih śivábhih śámtamo bhava | āróhams tridivám divó grṇānáh sómapītaye priyádhāmā svastáye . . . . "Do thou, O Indra, be most beneficent to us with propitious aids—(thou) ascending to the triple heaven of the heaven, praised (that is, invoked) for drinking the Soma and for well-being, sovereign . . . "

TS. 1, 3, 8, 1: révatīr yajñápatim priyadhá visata! The Maitr. Sam. (1, 2, 15; p. 25, 1. 7) and the Kāṭh. Sam. (3, 6; p. 25, 1. 13) read revati predhā yajñapatim äviša, while the Vāj. Sam (6, 11) reads révati yájamāne priyám dhá áviša. It seems clear therefore that priya has become shortened to pre in predhä and that the anusvāra in priyamdhā is an intruder. The word itself is formed from priya with the suffix dhā (see Whitney's Grammar, § 1104). priyadhā here is equivalent to svadhā, and I translate: "O ye that have riches, enter into the sacrificer according to your wont". The commentator Bhaṭṭabhaskara takes révatīh as an epithet of paśvavayavāh while Uvaṭa and Mahidhara interpret revatī as referring to vāk.

priya, uncompounded, has the meaning sva, 'own', in the following passages:—

- 1, 114, 7: må no mahántam utá má no arbhakám må na úkṣantam utá må na ukṣitám | må no vadhìḥ pitáram mótá mātáram priyá må nas tanvò rudra rīriṣaḥ ||
- "Do not injure our great or our small ones, our growing or our grown ones, our father or our mother, or our own selves, O Rudra".
  - 1, 154, 5: tád asya priyám abhí pátho asyām náro yátra devayávo mádanti | urukramásya sá hí bándhur itthá vísnoh padé paramé mádhva útsah ||
- "May I attain the abode, where pious people rejoice, of him whose steps are broad. He is thus our relation; there is a spring of honey in the supreme abode of Viṣṇu". priyam pāthaḥ here has the same meaning as

The accent on -dha in the Vāj. Sam. causes difficulties; and Uvața and Mahīdhara hence regard priyâmdhå (å visa) as two words, priyâm and dhâh (=dhehi). But the Padapāṭha of the Maitr. Sam., too, (see Schröder's footnote 8 on p. 25) has  $predhâh \mid priyamdhå$  iti priyam-dhâh; and there is thus no doubt that priyamdhā (not -dhāh; the author of the Padapāṭha is wrong in reading -dhāh) is one word and that it is accented on the last syllable.

priyam dhāma in the passages given below; it means the own abode of Viṣṇu, viṣṇoḥ paramám padám as the fourth pāda expresses it, the Viṣṇuloka of later times.

- 1, 162, 2: yán nirníjā réknasā právrtasya rātím grbhītám mukható náyanti | súprān ajó mémyad visvárūpa indrāpūsnóh priyám ápy eti páthah ||
- "When they lead (it) in front of the offering covered with wealth and jewels (that is, of the sacrificial horse), the goat of all forms, bleating, goes directly forward to the own abode of Indra and Pūṣan".
  - 10, 15, 5 : úpahūtāḥ pitáraḥ somyāso
    barhiṣyèṣu nidhíṣu priyéṣu |
    tá ā gamantu tá ihá śruvantv
    ádhi bruvantu tè'vantv asmān ||
- "The Soma-deserving fathers are called (to appear and seat themselves) in their own seats on the barhis. May they come here, hear us, speak assuringly to us and protect us." This verse, as also the two preceding verses are addressed to the barhisadah pitarah, the 'pitrs that sit on the barhis'; hence the prayer to them to take their own seats on the barhis.
  - 9, 55, 2: índo yáthā táva stávo yáthā te jātám ándhasaḥ | ní barhíṣi priyé sadaḥ ||
- "O Indu, according to the praise addressed to thee (that is, the prayer) and to what has happened to thy juice, seat thyself on thy own barhis (that is, on thy own seat on the barhis)".
- 8, 13, 24 : tám īmahe puruṣṭutám yahvám pratnābhir ūtíbhiḥ | ni barhíṣi priyé sadad ádha dvitá ||
- "We pray to him who is often-praised, who is active with protection extending from old time; may he seat himself on his own seat on the barhis".

- 1, 85, 7: tè'vardhanta svátavaso mahitvanā
  nākam tasthúr urú cakrire sádaḥ | víṣṇur yád dhāvad vṛṣaṇam madacyútam
  váyo ná sīdann ádhi barhiṣi priyé ||
- "They that are naturally mighty grew with their might; they went to heaven and made a large seat. When Viṣṇu ran to the strong, intoxicating (Soma), they seated themselves in their own barhis like birds (in their nests)."
  - 1, 189, 4: pāhí no agne pāyúbhir ájasrair utá priyé sádana á susukván | må te bhayám jaritáram yavistha nūnám vidan má parám sahasvah ||
- "O Agni, do thou, shining in thy own abode, protect us with unwearied protections; O thou that art strong, the youngest, may not (thy) praiser suffer from any fear of thee or from any other fear." The expression priyé sádana á susukván here corresponds exactly to didivámsam své dáme, 2, 2, 11; didivim (várdhamānam) své dáme, 1, 1, 8; gopá rtásya dīdihi své dáme, 3, 10, 2; svá á yás túbhyam dáma á vibháti, 1, 71, 6; yó dīdáya sámuddhah své duroné, 7, 12, 1; and dīdyan mártyeşv á | své kṣáye sucivrala in 10, 118, 1.
  - 10, 13, 4: devébhyah kám avrnīta mṛtyúm prajāyai kám amṛtam nāvṛnīta | bṛhaspátim yajñám akṛṇvata ṛṣim priyām yamás tanvàm prārirecit ||
- "He held back death from the gods; he did not hold back immortality from men; he made Bṛhaspati the sacrifice and the ṛṣi; Yama let our own body (or self) remain".
  - 9, 73, 2: samyák samyáñco mahişā aheşata
    síndhor ūrmáv ádhi venā avīvipan | mádhor dhārābhir janáyanto arkám ít
    priyām índrasya tanvàm avīvṛdhan ||

- "The beautiful strong ones have moved well forward; the loving ones have moved in the wave of the sea; with the streams of mead producing a song, they have made Indra's own body grow."
- 10, 132, 5: asmin sv ètác chákapūta éno hité mitré nígatān hanti vīrān | avór vā yád dhất tanúșv ávaḥ priyāsu yajñíyāsv árvā ||
- "Sakapūta kills the brave men that have committed this sin in respect of this well-disposed Mitra when the courser placed his strength in the own worshipful bodies of these two (sc. of Mitra and Varuṇa)". The meaning of this verse is not clear and widely-divergent explanations are given of it by Sāyaṇa and Ludwig. It is difficult to say who is denoted by the term  $arv\bar{a}$  (courser) in pāda d and if the word sakapūta is really a proper name.
  - 2, 20, 6: sá ha śrutá indro nāma devá

    ūrdhvó bhuvan mánuṣe dasmátamaḥ |
    áva priyám arśasānásya sāhvāñ
    chíro bharad dāsásya svadhāvān ||
- "He, the god known by the name of Indra, of most wonderful might, raised himself aloft high over man; he, the mighty conqueror, brought down the own head of the evil-doing dasa."
  - 8, 12, 32 : yád asya dhámani priyé samīcīnāso ásvaran | nábhā yajñásya dohánā prádhvaré ||
- "When the united ones (priests?) made a sound (song?) in his own abode, in the navel of the sacrifice, by milking in the sacrifice."
  - 6, 67, 9: prá yád vām mitrāvaruṇā spūrdhán priyā dhāma yuvádhitā minánti | ná yé devāsa óhasā ná mártā áyajñasāco ápyo ná putrāḥ ||

- "When they, O Mitra and Varuṇa, become jealous of you and violate the own ordinances laid down by you—they, who are by repute no gods and no mortals, who, like the sons of Apī, are no performers of sacrifice." The second half-verse is not clear; in the first half-verse, the expression priyā dhāma yuvádhitā 'the own ordinances laid down by you,' is equivalent to 'your own ordinances; the ordinances laid down by you in person'.
  - 3,55,10: víṣṇur gopāḥ paramám pāti pāthaḥ priyā dhāmāny amṛtā dádhānaḥ | agniṣ ṭā viśvā bhúvanāni vcda mahád devānām asuratvám ékam ||
- "Viṣṇu, the protector, rules over the supreme realm, supporting his own immortal abodes; Agni knows all those worlds. The asura-hood (might?) of the gods is alone great."
  - 4, 5, 4: prá tắn agnír babhasat tigmájambhas
    tápiṣṭhena śóciṣā yáḥ surādhāḥ |
    prá yé minánti váruṇasya dhāma
    priyá mitrásya cétato dhruváṇi ||
- "May Agni, who has sharp jaws and who makes good gifts, eat up with his hottest flames those who violate the own immutable ordinances of Varuna and of Mitra who observes (or, who knows)."
  - 1, 87, 6: śriyáse kám bhānúbhiḥ sám mimikşire té rasmíbhis tá ŕkvabhiḥ sukhādáyaḥ ¦ té vāsīmanta işmíṇo ábhīravo vidré priyásya mārutasya dhāmnaḥ ||
- "For their glory, they (sc. the Maruts) united themselves with bright reins and brilliant (ornaments): they, with beautiful khadis and axes, impetuous, fearless, knew of their own Marut troop". The meaning of the fourth pada is not clear as the word dhāma used in it is ambiguous.

  - 4, 52, 7 : á dyám tanoşi rasmibhir ántárikşam urú priyám | úşaḥ sukréṇa sociṣā ||
- "Thou extendest the heaven with thy rays and also thy own broad sky with thy radiant effulgence, O Usas'. The sky, antarikṣa, is called "Uṣas' own" probably because Uṣas is an antarikṣa-sthānīya-devatā and the antarikṣa thus belongs to her.

1, 124, 4: úpo aharsi sundhyúvo ná vákso nodhá ivävír akṛta priyáṇi | admasán ná sasató bodháyantī śaśvatlamágät púnar eyúṣiṇām ||

"The breast (that is, the upper body) of Uṣas has come to view like that of a resplendent (young) woman; she has made manifest her own (greatness) like nodhas: waking the sleepers like the hotr, she has come again, the most frequent comer of those that come again. After priyāṇi, own, I supply the word mahimnaḥ following 7, 75, 1: vy ùṣâ āvo divijā rténāviṣkṛṇvānā mahimānam āgāt. The same word, or, if a neuter noun be deemed necessary, the word mahitvam or mahitvanam, it seems to me, should be supplied also in 4, 4, 5: āvíṣ kṛṇuṣva daivyāny agne (daivyāni=daivyāni mahitvāni; daivyāni viryāṇi; Sāyaṇa supplies tejāmsi) and 2, 23, 14: āvís tát kṛṣva yád ásat ta ukthyàm (yat= yat mahitvam; yad vīryam; Sāyaṇa has yad viryam). nodhas still remains an obscure word and its meaning is unknown.

priya means 'own' in the following passages also: TS. 5, 1, 5, 2: chándansi khálu và agnéh priya tanúh privávaivainam tanúvā páridadhāti "the chandāmsi. indeed, are the own body (self) of Agnı; he covers him with his own body (self) "; ibid., 5, 1, 6, 2: cṣā vā agnéh priyā tanūr yad ajā priyayaivainam tanuvā sansi jati "this namely, the she-goat, is verily the own body (self) of Agni; he unites him with his own body (self); ibid., 5, 7, 3, 4: eşā khálu và agnéh priya tanûr yád vaisvānaráh priyayam evainam tanúvam prátisthapayati "this, namely, Vaiśvānara, is verily Agni's own body; he establishes him in his own body" (compare vaisvānara iti vā agneh privam dhāma "Vaiśvānara is Agni's own body" in Tāndya Br. 14, 2, 3; and Ait. Br. 3, 8, 6-7); TS. 5, 3, 10, 3: etád và agnéh priyám dhâma yád ghrtám priyénaivaínam dhāmnā sámardhayati "this namely, ghee, is verily the own form of Agni; he makes him thrive with his own form"; KS. 20, 1: agner vā eṣā vaiśvānarasya priyā tanūr yat sikatāḥ "this, namely, sand, is verily the own body of Agni"; ibid., 21, 3: priyayaivainam tanvā samardhayati "he makes him thrive with his own body (form)".

Likewise, it means 'own' in VS. 2, 17: agnéh privám páthó 'pītam "Go to the own abode of Agni"; in VS. 8, 50: agneh, indrasya, visvesām devānām, priyam pātho 'pīhi "Go to the own abode of Agni, Indra, Viśvedevas" (compare svam pātho apītha 'go to your own abode' in ASS. 1, 11, 8); and AV. 2, 34, 2: pramuñcánto bhúvanasya réto gātúm dhatta yájamānāya devāh upákrtam sásamanam vád ásthat privám devánam ápy etu pathah "Do ye, releasing the seed of being, show the way to the sacrificer, O gods; what, brought hither and immolated, stood up, living, let it go to the own abode of the gods (compare TS. 3, 1, 4, 3: upākrtan šašamānám vád ásthāj jīvám devānam ápy etu pāthah and TS. 5, 1, 11, 4: ásvo ghrténa tmányā sámakta úpa devän rtuśáh pátha etu)." And similarly priya means 'own' in TS. 1, 5, 3, 2-3: saptá te agne samídhah saptá jihváh saptá rsayah saptá dhāma priyani and in ibid., 1, 5, 4, 4 : saptá sapta vai saptadhágnéh priyas tanúvah.

In the same way there can be no doubt that priya generally means 'own' in the expression priyam dhāma which occurs fairly frequently in the Yajus-samhitās and Brāhmaṇas and is interpreted by Böhtlingk and Roth (s.v. dhāma) as 'gewohnte Heimath, Lieblingsstätte, Lieblingssache, Liebhaberei, Lieblings-name,-preise, person' and by Geldner (Glossar, s.v. dhāma) as 'das liebe Wesen, die liebe Persönlichkeit, Lieblingsname, die liebe Person,' etc.; thus:

Kaus. Up. 3, 1: pratardano ha daivodāsir indrasya priyam dhāmopajagāma yuddhena paurusena ca | tam hendra uvāca pratardana varam te dadānīti ||

" Pratardana, son of Divodāsa, went to Indra's own abode by means of battle and valour. Indra said to him,

'Pratardana, I grant thee a boon.'" Indrasya priyam dhāma here does not mean 'Freundschaft, Gunst, Liebe' of Indra (as Geldner would have it) or 'gewohnte Heimath' of Indra (PW), but 'Indra's own abode', the domain that he rules over and that is known as Indraloka or svarga in later literature which Pratardana won through his valour in battle (see Macdonell in Vedic Index, s.v. Pratardana). The allusion here is to the well-known belief of the Indian writers that those who die in battle fighting valiantly go to heaven; compare Manu, 7, 89: āhavesu mitho 'nyonyam jighāmsanto mahīksitah | yudhyamānāh param saktyā svargam yānty aparānmukhāh, and Kauțilya's Arthaśāstra, 10, 3 (p. 365): vedeșv apv anuśrūyate—samāpta-dakṣinānām yajñānām avabhṛtheşu sā te gatir yā sūrānām iti . . . . yān yajñasanghais tapasā ca viprāh svargaisinah pātracayas ca yānti | ksanena tān apy apiyanti śurah pranan suyuddheşu parityajantah.

Ait. Br. 6, 20, 9-10: etcna vai vasistha indrasya priyam dhāmopāgacchat | sa paramam lokam ajayat | upcndrasya priyam dhāma (Aufrecht's edition reads lokam here which is incorrect) gacchatt jayati paramam lokam ya evam veda ||

"By means of this  $(s\bar{u}kta;$  hymn of praise), verily, Vasistha attained the own abode of Indra, he won the highest world; he who knows this goes to Indra's own abode, wins the highest world."

And similarly, in ibid., 5, 2, 5: etena vai gṛṭṣamada indrasya priyam dhāmopāgacchat; 5, 2, 12: gayaḥ plāto viśveṣām dcvānām priyam dhāmopāgacchat; 1, 21, 6: etābhir hāśvinoḥ kakṣīvān priyam dhāmopāgacchat; TS. 5, 2, 1, 6: eténa vai vaṭṣaprīr bhālandanò 'gneḥ priyám dhāmávārundaha; ibid. 5, 2, 3, 4: eténa vai viśvāmitro'gneḥ priyám dhāmāvārunddha; and in ibid., 5, 3, 11, 3: agnéḥ priyám dhāma, ṛṭūnām priyám dhāma, I take priya in the sense of 'own' and dhāma in the sense of 'abode.' With regard to the latter word, the meaning of

' Persönlichkeit, Wesen, Form', suggested by Geldner is however not unsuitable in these passages which can be translated as "By means of this (hymn of praise) Grtsamada attained verily the own personality of Indra", etc.; for, in similar passages in later literature that describe the virtue of hymns of praise (stotra) or of mantras, we read not only that the author of the hymn of praise and the others that made use of the stotra or mantra in question (compare upa agneh, indrasya, priyam dhāma gacchati ya evam veda in the above passages) attain the world of the particular deity (sāyujyam gacchati, salokatām āpnoti) that is addressed by the stotra or mantra but also that they become such deity itself (sarūpatām āpnoti). Compare for instance, Lalitāsahasranāmastotra (Nirņaya-sāgara ed., v. 289 ff.): pratimāsam paurnamāsyām ebhir nāmasahasrakaih | rātrau yas cakravājasthām arcavet paradevatām || sa eva lalitārūpas tadrūpā lalitā svayam | na tayor vidyate bhedo bhedakrt pāpakrd bhavet | ; Avyaktopanisat, Kh. 7: ya imām vidyām adhīte . . . dehānte tamasah param dhāma prāpnuyāt | yatra virāt nrsimho'vabhāsate . . . . tatsvarūpa-dhyānaparā munaya ākalpānte tasminn eva liyante; Tripurātāpinī Upanisat, 4: om namas sivāyeti yājusamantropāsako rudratvam prāpnoti; and Rāmarahasyopanisat, Ch. 5: rāmamantrānām krtapurascarano rāmacandro bhavati.

priya means 'own' in the other passages too given in PW. Thus, VS. 1, 31: dhāma nāmāsi priyám devānām "Thou art the gods' own form and name"; ibid., 2, 6: priyéṇa dhāmnā priyám sáda āsīda "Sit in thy own seat in thy own form"; priyā dhāmāni and priyā pāthāmsi in VS. 21, 46 ff. mean 'own abodes, own domains'; Sata. Br. 3, 4, 2, 5: te devā juṣṭās tanūḥ priyāṇi dhāmāni sārdham samavadadire "The gods took together portions from their own selves, from their own powers"; ibid., 10, 1, 3, 11: etad dhāsya priyam dhāma yad yaviṣṭha iti "This is indeed his own name, that of 'youngest'"; and ibid. 2, 3, 4, 24: āhutayo vā asya priyam dhāma "The oblations are indeed the own essence of him"; priyenai-vainam dhāmnā samardhayati, samsparśayati, pratyeti, etc.) "With his own body (or form, or nature, etc.) he makes him thrive (covers him, etc.)."

The word svá, which, like nítya, primarily means 'own,' seems likewise to be used in the sense of priya in some passages. Instances of such usage are:

2, 5, 7: sváh sváya dháyase

kruutám rtvíg rtvíjam |

stómam yajňám cád áram

vanémā rarimá vayám ||

"May the beloved (Agni), the priest, for the sake of dear food, make ready the (human) priest; may he then control the praise and sacrifice; we have offered (oblations)". The sense of this verse is obscure and 1, 31, 13 where the words dhāyase, vanoşi and mantram occur, scarcely helps here. But sva seems to mean 'dear, beloved' here; compare the passages given above where Agni is called 'dear'. Regarding svam dhāyah compare 10, 112, 4: priyébhir yāhi priyám ánnam áccha and note the repetition of the word priya here similar to that of sva in the above verse. Compare also 1, 58, 2: å svám ádma yuvámāno ajárah . . ataséşu tişthati where too perhaps sva means 'dear'.

3, 31, 21: ádedista vrtrahá gópatir gá antáh krsnán arusaír dhámabhir gát | prá sūnŕtā disámāna rténa dúras ca vísvā avrnod ápa sváh ||

"The destroyer of Vṛtra, the lord of cows, has given cows; with his bright troops he penetrated into the dark ones. Bestowing riches rightly, he has opened all the dear doors." To interpret the last pāda as 'he has opened all his own doors' hardly yields any sense; I therefore take svāḥ here as equivalent to priyāḥ. Compare 1, 142, 6: pāvakāsaḥ puruspṛho dvāro devir asaścātaḥ; 7, 17, 2: utā dvāra ušatīr vī śrayantām and 10, 70, 5: vi śrayadhvam . . . . ušatir dvāraḥ where the doors are called 'much-beloved, dear'. The 'dear' doors are, evidently, those that give access to the chamber or other receptacle that contains wealth (compare, rāyo duraḥ in 1, 68, 10: vi rāya aurnod dúraḥ purukṣūḥ); and the epithet 'dear' seems to be transferred to the doors from the wealth which as we know is often described in the RV. as being 'dear'; compare 4, 41, 10 given above and the passages cited in connection therewith.

- 10, 120, 8: imá bráhma brháddivo vivaktindrāya śūṣám agriyáḥ svarṣáḥ | mahó gotrásya kṣayati svarájo dúras ca vísvā avṛṇod ápa sváḥ ||
- "These mighty hymns Bṛhaddiva speaks out for Indra. He, the foremost, the winner of light, is the lord of the mighty and independent stone; he has opened all the dear doors". By the 'mighty and independent stone' is here meant the Vajra or thunderbolt of Indra with which he opens the doors of the receptacle containing riches and which is elsewhere called adri, farvata and asman: compare 4, 22, 1: yó (sc. indrah) asmānam sávasā bibhrad éti; 6, 22, 6: manojūvā svatavah párvatena | ácyutā cid viļitā svojo rujāh; and 1, 51, 3: saséna cid vimadāyāvaho vāsv ājāv ādrim vāvasānāsya nartāyan. The epithet svarāj, 'independent,' indicates perhaps that the Vajra is irresistible and overcomes all.
  - 8,70,11: anyávratam ámānuşam áyajvānam ádevayum | áva sváḥ sákhā dudhuvīta párvataḥ sughnāya dásyum párvataḥ ||
- "May the dear friend Parvata shake off him who follows another's ordinance, who is not human, who does not sacrifice, who is impious: and may Parvata (shake off) the Dasyu for swift death (?)".

"Seeing and milking the milk of the old one's semen, they (the Angirases) gladdened the dear (Indra). Their shout warmed the two worlds; they placed him the foremost in what is born (that is, in the creation); they placed heroes amidst the kine (or, in the kine)". I understand this verse as referring to the winning of the sun which also is one of the exploits of Indra in association with the Angirases; see Macdonell's Vedic Mythology, pp. 61 and 143. The 'old one,' pratna, is Dyaus or Heaven and his 'seed,' retah, is the sun; compare 8, 6, 30: ad it pratnásya rétaso jyótis pasyanti vāsarám; 1, 100, 3: divó ná yásya rétaso dúghānāh; 5, 17, 3: divó ná yásya rétasā brhác chócanty arcáyah; and 10, 37, 1: divás putráya súryāya śamsata. The second pada therefore means, 'making the sun appear'. In the first pada, the word svam has been interpreted by Geldner (Kommentar, p. 51), following Sāyaṇa, as svakīyam godhanam and the verb abhi amadan in the sense of 'rejoicing' (Glossar; sich freuen über). The combination abhi mad is however met with in another verse of the RV, namely, in 1, 51, 1: abhi tyám meşám puruhūtám rgmíyam indram girbhír madata where it has the sense, not of 'rejoicing' but of 'gladdening'. I believe that this is the sense here also, and that amadann abhi svam means 'they gladdened the dear (Indra),' that is to say, that they praised him; compare 1, 62, 5: grnānó ángirobhir dasma ví var uşásā sūryena góbhir ándhah. Compare also 1, 142, 4; 5, 5, 3; 8, 50, 3; and 8, 98, 4 where the epithet priya is used of Indra. In the last pada, the expression 'they placed heroes in the kine (or, amidst the kine)' is not very intelligible to me; Oldenberg (RV. Noten 1, p. 241) suggests that it means that 'they exerted themselves in such a way that the heroes were no more cut off from the possession of cows.'

AV. 6, 83, 4: vīhi svām āhutim juşāņó mánasā svāhā mánasā yád idám juhómi

"Consume the dear oblation, enjoying with the mind, hail, as now I make oblation with the mind."

AV. 3, 19, 3: nīcaiḥ padyantām ádhare bhavantu yé naḥ sūrim maghávānam pṛtanyān | kṣiṇāmi bráhmaṇāmitrān ún nayāmi svān ahám ||

"Downward let them fall, let them become inferior, who may fight against our liberal patron. With my incantation, I destroy the enemies; I raise those that are dear (to me)." Though the interpretation of svān as '(my) own people' is not unsuited here, the contrast between amitrān and svān shows that the latter word has here the sense of 'those that are dear to me; those whom I like; friends."

AV.7,77,5: taptó vām gharmó nakṣatu sváhotā
prá vām adhvaryús caratu páyasvān | mádhor dugdhásyāsvinā tanāyā
vītám pātám páyasa usríyāyāḥ ||

"The gharma is heated for you; let the dear hote approach; let the adhvaryu, rich in milk, move forward. Eat ye, O Aśvins, of this milked sweet; drink ye of this cow's milk." The word tanāyāḥ is obscure and I have followed Ludwig here in translating it as 'this.' Regarding svāhotā, compare what has been said above under nityahotā. Compare also 7, 73, 2: ny ù priyó mānuṣaḥ sādī hótā nāsatyā yó yájate vándate ca | aśnītām mādhvo aśvinā upākā ā vām voce vidātheṣu prāyasvān where the expressions priyo hotā, aśnītām madhvo aśvinā, and prayasvān are parallel to svahotā, madhor aśvinā vītam, and prayasvān (for, this is the correct reading, found, as is noted by Whitney in his Translation, in the Kausika-sūtra and the Vaitāna-sūtra and also in Sāyaṇa's commentary, and not payasvān) in the above verse.

10, 21, 1: ágním ná sváv; ktibhir hótāram tvā vṛṇīmahe | yajñāya stīrṇábarhişe ví vo máde sīrám pāvakásociṣam vívakṣase ||

"As Agni, we, with pleasingly-cut (hymns of praise), choose thee hote for the sacrifice where the barhis is spread—thee that art burning and that hast clear light." Compare priyā taṣṭāni, pleasingly-cut, pleasingly-fashioned (limbs) in 10, 86, 5 and the verses 1, 130, 6; 5, 2, 11; 5, 29, 15; 5, 73, 10; etc., which speak of hymns being 'cut' or 'fashioned' into shape. Concerning the refrain, vi vo māde . . . . vivakṣase, which is not here translated, see Oldenberg, RV. Noten II, p. 221 and the literature referred to therein.

"Drink of these (Somas that are mixed) with pleasing milk; and what is with Tugrya and that which is here, O Indra, are thine." svádhainavānām is equivalent to priyadhainavānām: the reference is to the milk which is added to the Soma juice. Compare 9, 101, 8: sám u priyā anūṣata gắvo mádāya ghṛṣvayaḥ | sómāsaḥ kṛṇvate patháḥ pávamānāsa indavaḥ; compare also 9, 32, 5: abhi gắvo anūṣata yóṣā jārám iva priyám; 9, 1, 9: abhì mám ághnyā utá śrinánti dhenávaḥ śisum | sómam indrāya pātave; 9, 9, 1: pári priyā diváḥ kavír váyāmsi naptyòr hitáḥ | suvānó yāti kavíkratuḥ.

VS. 22, 19: ihá dhítir ihá svádhrtih sváhā | "Here steadiness; here pleasing steadiness, hail."

In the above translations, I have assumed that the words svávrkti, svádhainava and svádhrti have really the word sva as a component, in which case priyavrkti, priyadhainava and priyadhrti are the best equivalents for them. I do not however feel certain that this assumption is correct; or rather, I feel inclined to believe that the word sva is not really a component of these words at all. We know that in Sanskrit there exist a number of words beginning really with su-but having a variant form beginning with sva-. As examples of such, I may cite the following from PW-svagupta, svagrhītanāman, svadhā, svadhita, svadhiti, svastha, svabrahmanyā, svabhadrā, svavāsinī, and svarāstra (proper name of a people), svapura (name of a town), svabhūmi (proper name), and svarenu (proper name) all which have also forms beginning with su- instead of sva-. The word sujana occurs in the form svajana in Ind. Spr. (II), 6672, svajana-durjanyah, and it is remarked in PW 'nicht selten werden svajana und sujana mit einander verwechselt.' Similarly, the PW gives references to passages where the word svaprakāša has the meaning 'clear,' that is, of suprakāsa. In the RV itself, we have the form svadhā, nectar, instead of sudhā and the form svávašastaram in 8, 60, 11 where the SV reads suyasastaram. inclined to think that the words svávrkti, svádhainava, and svádhrti also belong to this class and that they are but variants of the words suvrkti, sudhainava and sudhrti. Of these latter, the word suvrkti occurs frequently in the RV. It is derived from the root rc in PW but I believe that it really comes from the root vri 'to cut' (compare the word vrkta-barhis) and that the meaning is 'well cut, well-fashioned'; see what has been said above under 10, 21, 1. I would therefore translate the passages 10, 21, 1; 8, 32, 20; and VS. 22, 19 as follows: Agni, we with well-fashioned (hymns) choose thee hotr for the sacrifice," etc.; "Drink of these Somas that are well mixed with good milk," etc.; and "Here steadiness; here good steadiness, hail!". With regard to the VS passage, the commentator Uvața, I may here observe, has paraphrased svadhrti by sādhu-dhrti which seems to show that he too regarded it as a variant of sudhrti.

Wackernagel, in his Altindische Grammatik II, § 33b (p. 81), refers to the frequently-expressed opinion, the best exposition of which is by Zubaty' in KZ, 31, p. 52ff., that su- in compounds has, in addition to itself, an ablaut form sva-, and observes that the examples adduced by Zubaty' namely, svadhā-sudhā, svadhiti-sudhiti, and svadhita-sudhita are too few in number to justify such an opinion. The number of examples, however, is not, as he thinks, restricted to the three mentioned here; for we have already met with two more examples above svávrkti-suvrktí, svávašastara-suvašastara and we shall meet with some more presently. And, secondly, the statement that 'su- has in addition to itself an ablaut form sva- in compounds' gives but a partial and incorrect representation of the real fact, namely, that in Sanskrit, and in the Vedic language also, there occur a certain number of words beginning with su- that have got variant forms beginning with sva- or, alternatively, that there occur a certain number of words beginning with svathat have got variant forms beginning with su-. This does not mean that the first word in all such compounds is in reality su and that the form beginning with sva- is a variant of this; for there occur some compounds in which the first word is really sva and in whose case the form beginning with su- is a variant of such original form with sva-. Compare Tait. Up. 2, 7: asad vā idam agra āsīt | tato vai sad ajäyata | tad ātmānan svayam akuruta | tasmāt tat sukrtam ucyata iti; the word sukrta here stands patently for svakṛta and is thus a variant of it; compare Śankara's commentary thereon: sukrtam svayam-kartr ucyate and Sankarānanda's scholium, sukrtam svārthe 'yam soh prayogah | svena samskrtavat svakrtam. Compare also Mund. Up. 1, 2, 1: eşa vah panthāh sukrtasya loke (Sankara: sukrtasya svayam nirvartitasya karmano loke); ibid., 1, 2, 6: eşa vah punyah sukrto brahmalokah and also ibid., 1, 2, 10: nākasya prsthe te sukrte 'nubhūtvā imam lokam kinataram vā višanti where too in all probability sukṛtaḥ=svakṛtaḥ: and Kaṭha Up. 1, 3, 1: rtam pibantau sukṛtasya loke chāyām praviṣṭau parame parārdhe where Śaṅkara has explained sukṛtasya as svayam kṛtasya karmaṇaḥ. It must therefore be understood that in the case of compounds that occur in two forms, one beginning with su- and the other with sva-, the original form may be either the one beginning with su- or the one beginning with sva-. And as a corollary, it has also to be admitted that in the case of compounds that occur in one form only, either beginning with su- or beginning with su- or sva- may not be the original form of the word at all, but only a variant of the original form beginning with sva- or su- as the case may be.

In other words, when we meet with compounds with su- or sva-, it is desirable to investigate first if such compound occurs in both forms or in one form only. In the latter case, one should further find out which of the two words, su and sva, gives the better meaning for the compound in connection with the passage where it occurs and determine accordingly the original form of the word and its meaning and also whether the word occurs in the given passage in its original form or in a variant form. The same thing has to be done in the former case also; but if, as sometimes happens, both the words su and sva are found to give the better meaning, each in its own context, one should postulate two original forms, beginning with su and sva respectively, and interpret the words accordingly: if, on the other hand, one only of the two words, su and sva, is found to give a good meaning (or the better meaning) in all the passages (where the compound occurs in either form), one should postulate one original form (beginning with su- or sva- as the case may be) and regard the other form (beginning with sva- or su- as the case may be) as a variant of it and interpret the passages accordingly.

The bearing of the foregoing remarks may perhaps be better understood from a consideration of some compounds beginning with sva- and su-. The words sváksatra-suksatrá both occur in the RV; and the originality of the form sváksatra is proved by the occurrence of the parallel word privaksatra; see above. One has therefore to consider if the word suksatrá. in the passages where it occurs, gives a better meaning when one regards it as occurring in its original form and therefore interprets it as 'having excellent dominion' (śobhanam kṣatram yasya) or when it is regarded as a variant of the word svaksatra and therefore interpreted as 'whose is dominion' (svain ksatrain yasya), that is, 'ruling over others; sovereign.' Considering that the word suksatrá is used almost exclusively as an epithet of various gods, and that in their case, the meaning 'sovereign; ruling over others' is more appropriate and forceful than that of 'having excellent dominion,' I feel inclined to give preference to the latter of the above meanings and thus to regard suksatrá as a variant of the original form sváksatra, which, too, be it noted, is used almost exclusively as an epithet of various gods. On the other hand, in the case of the words suscandrá-sváscandra both occurring in the RV, I consider that the interpretation 'well-shining' is, in every passage, to be preferred to that of 'shining of itself,' 'self-shining'; and I therefore regard sváscandra in 1, 52, 9, the only passage where it occurs, as equivalent to suscandrá and as meaning 'well-shining.' As regards the words suhótr (RV)-sváhoty (AV), the occurrence of the word nityahotr (see p. 14 above) seems to show that the latter form (in AV. 7, 77, 5) is original and should be interpreted in the same way as nityahotr, while the juxtaposition of the word svadhvará in 8, 103, 12: yáh suhótā svadhvaráh seems to show that here the interpretation "good hoty" gives the better meaning. I therefore regard both words as being in their original forms. Of the pair sváyaśastara, 'renowned of one's self' (RV) súyasastara 'having much renown' (SV), it is obvious that the latter is the better meaning. I believe therefore that sváyašastara in the RV is a variant of súyašastara and means the same as that word, and likewise that the word sváyašas occurring frequently in the RV, is a variant of, and has the same meaning as, súvašas, Similarly, of the pair sugopá (having a good protector; well-protected)—svágopa (protected by one's self; selfprotected), both occurring in the RV, the former meaning seems to be obviously better than the latter; therefore think it preferable to interpret svágopa in 10, 31, 10 (the only passage where the word occurs): vyáthir avyathih kṛṇuta svágopā, as 'well-protected' and to regard it as a variant of the word sugopa; while, of the pair suyúj ('well-yoked') -svayúj ('yoking itself; yoked of its own self') both occurring in the RV, it is equally obvious that the latter meaning suits the context better than the former which is, when compared with it, a weak and colourless epithet. I therefore look upon the word suyúj (in the RV passages where it occurs) as a variant of, and having the same meaning as, svayúj. Compare the epithet manoyúj, which, like suyúj, is applied to hymns, horses, and chariots; and compare specially 1, 121, 12: tvám indra náryo yán ávo něn tísthā vátasya suyújo váhisthan Vám te kavyá usána mandínam dád vrtrahánam páryam tataksa vájram with 1, 51, 10: táksad vát ta usánā sáhasā sáho vi ródasī majmánā bādhate sávah \ a tvā vātasya nrmano manoyúja ā pūryamānam avahann abhi śrávah and 5, 31, 10: vätasya yuktán suyújas cid ásvān with 4, 48, 4: váhantu tvā manovújo vuktáso navatír náva vávo . . . . where the word suyuj in the former pair of verses is obviously parallel to the word manoyuj in the latter pair thus indicating clearly that suyuj is equivalent to svayuj. Compare also the verse 3, 58, 3: suyúgbhir ásvaih suvítā ráthena dásrāv imám srņutam ślókam ádreh with the verse 5, 75, 6: å vām narā manoyújó 'śvāsah prusitápsavah | váyo vahantu pitáve sahá sumnébhir aśvinā and with the verse 1, 119, 4;

yuvám bhujyúm bhurámāṇam víbhir gatám sváyuktibhir niváhantā pitřbhya á and note that the epithets suyúj, manoyúj and sváyukti are parallelly applied to the birdhorses of the Aśvins indicating that they express the same idea. The horses (birds) of Vāyu (Vāta) and of the Aśvins yoke themselves to the chariot when their masters think 7 of setting forth in it, and are hence manoyújah as well as svayújah.

This is not however the occasion for investigating exhaustively the nature and meaning of all the Vedic compounds beginning with sva- and su-. The foregoing observations will, I believe, have shown the necessity of such an investigation; and I therefore close this digression and return to our subject.

svá has the sense of priyá in the derivative svadhá also which in the instrumental case means not only 'according to one's own nature or wont' but also 'willingly, with gladness, with pleasure,' nach eigenem Gcfallen, gern, aus eigener Lust (Grassmann), Neigung (Geldner, Glossar).

Like nityá and svá, the word nijá, too, means primarily 'own'; and like these two words, it too seems to have the meaning priyá in the following passage: AV. 3, 5, 2: máyi kṣatrám parṇamaṇe máyi dhārayatād rayím | ahám rāṣṭrásyābhīvargé nijó bhūyāsam uttamáḥ "In me maintain dominion, parṇa amulet, in me maintain wealth; may I, in the sphere of (my) kingdom, be beloved, supreme".

jústa like priyá, originally means 'pleasing, agreeable, dear' and like priyá, has, seemingly, the meaning 'own' in the following passages:

Sata. Br. 3, 4, 2, 5: te devā justās tanūh priyāņi dhāmāni sārdham samavadadire | This passage has already

- 1,33,2: úpéd ahám dhanadam ápratītam
  júṣṭām ná śyenó vasatím patāmi | indram namasyánn upamébhir arkaír
  yáḥ stotṛbhyo hávyo ásti yaman ||
- "I fly (for protection), like the hawk to its own nest, to the giver of wealth, the irresistible, adoring with the best chants Indra who in battle is to be invoked by his praisers." júṣṭā vasatíḥ is here equivalent to svā vasatíḥ; compare 1, 25, 4: párā hi me vimanyavaḥ pátanti vásya-iṣṭaye | váyo ná vasatir úpa; 9, 71, 6: syenó ná yónim sádanam . . . . eṣati.
  - 4, 29, 3 : śraváyéd asya kárnā vājayádhyai júṣṭām ánu prá díśam mandayádhyai | udvāvṛṣāṇó rādhase túviṣmān káran na indraḥ sutīrthābhayam ca ||
- "Quicken his ears for hearing; make him find pleasure in (our) own direction; may Indra the mighty, showering gifts, make for us good crossings and safety." The expression 'make him find pleasure in our own direction,' means, probably, 'make him find pleasure with us, in our sacrifice'; compare 8, 12, 17: yád vā šakra parāváti samudré ádhi mándase | asmākam it suté raṇā sám indubhiḥ. The 'good crossings' desired are no doubt across evils, duritā, and enemies, dviṣaḥ. Instead of prá dísam, I read pradísam: see Oldenberg, Vedaforschung, p. 110.
  - 1, 182, 6: ávaviddham taugryám apsv àntár anārambhaņé támasi práviddham | cátasro nāvo jáṭhalasya júṣṭā úd aśvíbhyām iṣitāḥ pārayanti ||
- "The four own ships of Jathala impelled by the Aśvins, bring over safely the son of Tugra who was abandoned in the midst of the waters and who was stuck in bottomless darkness." I take jaṭhala here as a proper name: the person referred to is perhaps the same as the Jaṭhara mentioned in 1, 112, 17, in a hymn likewise addressed to the Aśvins. The four ships that brought over Tugra's son to safety are perhaps the same as the four birds that are said to have carried him in 8, 74, 14: mām catvāra āśāvaḥ śāvuṣṭhasya dravitnávaḥ | suráthāso abhi práyo vákṣan váyo ná túgryam.

Likewise, júṣṭa seems to have this meaning of 'own' in the formula amuṣmai tvā juṣṭam prokṣāmi (nirvapāmi, etc.; see Concordance); the meaning seems to be "I sprinkle thee that art the own (portion) of such-and-such."

Similarly, the word  $v\bar{a}m\dot{a}$  also, meaning primarily 'dear, pleasing', etc., seems to have the meaning 'own' in the following passages:

- 10, 140, 3: úrjo napāj jātavedaḥ sušastībhir mándasva dhītībhir hitáḥ | tvé iṣaḥ sám dadhur bhūrivarpasaš citrótayo vāmájātāḥ ||
- "O Jātavedas son of vigour, rejoice thou, beneficent, with the hymns containing fine praises. They put in you manifold nourishments, they whose help is wonderful, who are born of own self". vāmájātāḥ here, like priyájāta in 8, 71, 2 above, seems to be equivalent to svajātāḥ.
- T.S. 1, 5, 1, 1: devāsurāh sámyattā āsan | té devā vijayám upayánto 'gnáu vāmám vásu sám nyadadhata | idám u no bhavişyati | yádi no jesyántīti |
- "The gods and asuras prepared to fight. The gods, setting out for the battle, deposited their own wealth with Agni (thinking), 'this will be ours in case they vanquish us'".
- Tait. Br. 1, 1, 2, 3: yáḥ purấ bhadráḥ sán pắpīyān syất | sá púnarvasvor agním ắdadhīta | púnar evaínam vāmám vásūpāvartate | bhadró bhavati |

nitya 49

"He who having been formerly prosperous (literally, splendid or glorious) is now worse off, should establish the fires in Punarvasu (nakṣatra). (His) own glory (i.e., wealth) will again come back to him and he will become glorious (prosperous)." vāmam vasu here seems clearly to be equivalent to svakīyam vasu.

In the case of these words also, priyá, svá, jústa and vāmá, I have to repeat the observation made above with regard to nítya—namely, that in some passages, either of the meanings, 'dear' and 'own', is suitable, and that, though in the translations given above, I have chosen in such instances what seemed to me the better of the two, a combination of the two meanings would perhaps better represent the idea which the poet had in his mind when he used these words.

The use of the word nitya in the sense of 'dear' (priya) is not confined to Vedic literature but is occasionally met with in later literature also. Thus, it is said in the Mahābhārata (1, 169, 14) of Ghaṭotkaca—

anuraktas ca tān āsīt Pāṇḍavān sa Ghaṭotkacaḥ | teṣām ca dayito nityam ātmanityo babhūva ha ||

"That Ghatotkaca loved the sons of Pāṇḍu and he was always dear to them, as dear as their own self". nitya in ātmanitya signifies, it seems to me, 'dear' and the word ātmanitya means therefore 'dear as the ātmā or own self' and not 'im Selbst haftend, an s Herz gewachsen' as suggested in the PW (s.v.); for the word nitya has no connection with 'haften' or 'wachsen.'

Similarly it is not unlikely that the word nitya at the end of some compounds (like aranya-nitya, dharma-nitya, tapo-nitya, satya-nitya, adhyātmajñāna-nityatvam in Bh. Gītā 13, 11) has the signification 'dear'. In Bh. Gītā 13, 11 especially (adhyātmajñānanityatvam tattva-jñānārthadarsanam | etaj jñānam iti proktam . . . .) the words etaj jñānam in the third pāda make it very probable that nitya here means 'dear'.

Likewise there is no doubt that nitya means 'dear' in the compound strīnitya that occurs in Kathāsaritsāgara 45. 183: nissnehena kim etena sva-priyās tyajatā bahiḥ itīva nidrā strīnityasyaikasyāpy asya nāyayau "As if thinking, 'Of what use to me is this (Sūryaprabha) who is without love and has left his wives outside', Sleep did not visit him who was fond of women, though he was alone'. Compare in this connection the epithet strīlampaṭa that is applied to Sūryaprabha in ibid. 47. 101-102.

Amongst the words nitya, svá, nijá, vāmá, and jústa that have been mentioned in the preceding article as signifying both (1) own, svīya, and (2) dear, pleasing, etc., priya, should be included the word śuná also.

This word is enumerated by the author of the Nighantu amongst the synonyms of sukha, happiness; and this meaning sukha or the derived meaning sukhakara is repeated by Sāyaṇa in the course of his commentary on all the RV passages where the word occurs. In 3, 30, 22, however, he has in addition explained sunam as sūnam utsāhena praviddham, thus connecting the word with the verb  $s\bar{u}$  or svay, 'to swell.' This derivation is given in the PW by Roth who explains the word as (adv.) glücklich, mit Erfolg, zum Gedeihen; (n.) Erfolg, Gedeihen' and by Grassmann who explains it as '(1) Wachsthum, Gedeihen; (2) Gedeihen, Wohlergehen, Glück, Segen; (3) (adv.) zum Gedeihen, zum Wohlergehen, zum Segen.' Geldner, on the other hand, has suggested (RV. Glossar) that the word is related to sivam, and has explained it as 'Heil, zum Heil (svastaye).' And this suggestion seems to have found favour with Hillebrandt who has translated sunam as 'zum Heil' in

Lieder des Rgveda, p. 106. Later, however, Geldner himself has translated (RV. Uebersetzung) the word in this passage by 'gedeihlich, zum Gedeihen' and in 3, 30, 22 by 'mit Erfolg' and seems therefore to have abandoned his suggestion and gone back to the meanings proposed by Roth.

None of the above-mentioned meanings, however, suits the context in a passage of the Maitr. Sam. (1, 4, 11; p. 60, l. 3f.) which reads as follows:

na vai tad vidma yadi brāhmaņā vā smo 'brāhmaṇā vā | yadi tasya va ṛṣcḥ smo 'nyasya vā yasya brūmahe | yasya ha tv eva bruvāṇo yajate tam tad iṣṭam āgacchati netaram upanamati | tat pravare pravaryamāṇe brūyāt | devāḥ pitaraḥ pitaro devā yo 'smi sa san yaje | yo 'smi sa san karomi | śunam ma iṣṭam śunam śāntam śunam kṛtam bhūyāt | iti tad ya eva kaś ca sa san yajate tam tad iṣṭam āgacchati netaram upanamati ||

The mantra devāh pitarah . . . . occurring in this passage is found in the Ait. Br., Tait. Br., and Kāthakasamhita also, but in a slightly different form, namely, as devāh pitarah pitaro devā yo'smi sa san yaje yasyāsmi na tam antar emi svam ma istam svam dattam svam pūrtam svam śrāntam svam hutam in Tait. Br. 3, 7, 5, 4 and Ap. Śr. Sūtra 4, 9, 6 and as devāh pitarah pitaro devā vo 'smi sa san yaje tad vah prabravīmi tasya me vitta svam ma istam astu sunam sāntam svam krtam in KS. 4, 14. The word sunam in the MS reading of the mantra is thus parallel to the word svam in the TB reading of it, and is obviously equivalent to it. The above passage from the MS therefore means: "We do not know whether we are Brāhmaņas or not Brāhmaņas, whether we are (the descendants) of the rsi whom we name or of another. But (the fruit of) the sacrifice goes to (the descendant of) him who is named and to no other. Therefore when the lineage (pravara) is being proclaimed (?), he should recite: 'O Gods, O Fathers, O Fathers, O Gods, it is I, whoever I may be (that is, whosesoever descendant I may be), that sacrifice; it is I, whoever I may be, that perform. Let (this) sacrifice of mine be (my) own, (this) work (my) own, (this) act (my) own.' In this way, whoever he be who sacrifices, (the fruit of) the sacrifice goes to him and to no other."

Similarly, it is equally obvious that sunam=svam (with which it is parallelly used) in the KS reading of the mantra: devāḥ pitaraḥ pitaro devā yo 'smi sa san yaje tad vaḥ prabravīmi tasya me vitta svam ma iṣṭam astu sunam sāntam svam kṛtam "O Gods, O Fathers, O Fathers, O Gods, it is I, whoever I may be, that sacrifice; this I declare unto you; bear witness to this on my behalf. Let (this) sacrifice be (my) own, (this) performance (my) own, (this) work (my) own."

On the other hand, this meaning svam, 'own' is unsuited to the word sunam in the passages of the RV and other texts where the word occurs. And I therefore infer, from the analogy of the words priya, vāma and jūṣṭa or nūṭya, svā and nijā, that mean both 'dear' and 'own,' that sunā, too, has these two meanings, and that it has, in the passages referred to, the meaning priya, 'dear, pleasing, agreeable.' This meaning priya, as I shall now show, suits the context well and yields good sense in these passages.

May Parjanya, impelling the seed (to sprout and grow) delight us; may Suna and Sira confer grain on us." One has to supply the word krnotu, dadātu or similar word after sunam in the first half-verse. Note the parallelism of dhinotu in the second half-verse with sunam (krnotu or dadātu) in the second.

RV. 4, 57, 8: sunám nah phálā ví kṛṣantu bhūmim sunám kīnásā abhí yantu vāhaíh | sunám parjányo mádhunā páyobhih súnāsīrā sunám asmásu dhattam ||

"May our ploughshares plough the land pleasingly; may the ploughers proceed pleasingly with the draughtanimals. May Parjanya with waters and honey do us favour; may Suna and Sīra confer pleasing things (favours) on us." The word sunam in the first half-verse is used adverbially and denotes 'pleasingly; in a pleasing manner; well,' while in the second half-verse, it is a substantive as in the above passages. In the third pāda one has to supply a word like kṛṇotu or dadhātu on the analogy of the fourth pāda. Compare also 4, 2, 8: priyám vā tvā kṛṇávate haviṣmān and the phrase ráṇam dhāh and ráṇam kṛdhi in 8, 96, 16: vibhumádbhyo bhúvanebhyo ráṇam dhāh and 10, 112, 10: ráṇam kṛdhi raṇakṛt satyasuṣma.

- 10, 102, 8: śunám astrāvy àcarat kapardi varatrāyām dārvā náhyamānah | nṛmṇāni kṛṇván baháve jánāya gāh paspašānás távisīr adhatta ||

The hymn to which this verse belongs has been much discussed by the exegetists and been interpreted in many ways; for literature connected with it, see Oldenberg, RV. Noten II, p. 318. I agree with him and Geldner (Ved. Studien 2) in their opinion that it deals with the story of a Brāhmaṇa couple and a chariot-race.

The subject of acarat in pāda a above is the bull, vrsabha, that is mentioned in the previous verse as running—áramhata pádyābhih kakūdmān. And hence I interpret kapardi as 'wearing cowries' instead of as 'wearing a braid, zottig' (Roth, Geldner, Oldenberg, etc.) as this latter epithet is unintelligible to me in connection with a bull. The custom, on the other hand, of ornamenting bulls and oxen with strings of cowries fastened round the neck is fairly wide-spread in India, and I concieve that this must have been the case with

Mudgala's bull also. dāru in the second pāda refers, of course, to the drughaṇa or block of wood mentioned in the next verse.

It has been suggested by Oldenberg (l.c.), perhaps with a view to get over the difficulty caused by the word kapardi (which he interprets as 'wearing a braid, zottig'), that the subject of acarat is not the bull but Mudgala. This does not seem to be correct; for I believe with Geldner that Mudgala was too old to take part in a chariot-race and that the chariot was in fact ridden by Indrasenā with Keśinī as charioteer; see the article on Indrasenā that follows below.

" Properly did they burst open the rock, shattering it. The Angirases lowed with the cows. Pleasingly (i.e., with pleasing results; well) did the men worship the Dawn; the sun made himself manifest when Agni was born." The explanation of parişadan as 'umlagerten' by Roth, Grassmann and Geldner (RV. Uebersetzung) seems to me to be hardly satisfactory; and I prefer to follow Bhattabhaskara who has paraphrased parisadyam in TB, 3, 1, 2, 9 as parita upāsyam (cf. also Mahīdhara on VS. 5, 32) and regard parisadan here as equivalent to paryupāsāmcakrire. Compare 7, 76, 6: práti tvā stómair īlate vásisthā usarbúdhah subhage tustuvámsah gávām netri vājapatnī na ucchosah sujāte prathamā jarasva; 7, 78, 2: práti sīm agnír jarate sámiddhah práti vípraso matíbhir grnántah usá väti jyótisa bādhamānā visvā tāmāmsi duritāpa devi; 7, 80, 1: práti stómebhir usásam vásisthā gīrbhir víprāsah prathamā abudhran. The expression 'the men worshipped the Dawn' indicates that the Dawn showed herself at that time when Agni was born, that is, was kindled before daybreak. The kindling of Agni, the coming of the Dawn and the rising of the sun are referred to in other verses also of the RV, for instance in 7, 72, 4: vi céd ucchánty aśvinā usásah prá vām bráhmāni kārávo bharante | ūrdhvám bhānúm savita devó asrcd brhád agnáyah samídhā jarante; 7, 77, 1-3: úpo ruruce yuvatír ná yóṣā viśvam jīvám prasuván!ī carāyai | ábhūd agníh samidhe mānuşānām ákar jyótir bādhamānā támāmsi || vísvam pratīci sapráthā úd asthād rúsad vāso líbhratī sukrám asvait híranyavarnā sudrsīkasamdrg gávām mātā netry áhnām aroci || devānām cáksuh subhágā váhanti svetám náyanti sudýsikam ásvam | usá adarsi; 7, 78, 2-3: práti sīm agnir jarate sámiddhah práti víprāso matibhir grnántah | usá yāti jyótisā bádhamānā viśvā támāmsi duritāpa devi || etā u tyāh práty adršran purástāj zyótir vácchantīr usáso vibhātih | ájījanan sūryam yajāmam agnim apācinam tamo agād ajustam: 1, 113, 9; úso vád agním samídhe cakártha ví vád ávas cákṣasā súryasya. But while these passages represent Agni as showing himself (as being born) after the Dawn, the verse 4, 3, 11 makes out that Agni was born first and the Dawn afterwards; compare also 7, 9, 3: citrábhänur usásam bhaty ágre.

offence or Verdruss; see Apte. Accordingly I take the verb mṛṣ in the sense of 'to sprinkle,' a meaning which the author of the Dhātupātha assigns to it, but of its use in which no example has been up to now met with. The expression 'sprinkle this our path' means probably 'make our path smooth and easy to travel'; compare the expressions tánūnapāt pathá ṛtásya yắnān mádhvā samañján svadayā sujihva in RV. 10, 110, 2; á no dadhikrāḥ pathyām anaktu in 7, 44, 5; and madhvādya devo devebhyo devayānān patho anaktu in TB. 3, 6, 2, 1.

Like a powerful horse, it stood up with pleasing (i.e. pleasuregiving; comfortable) back on which you sat as if settling permanently in a house." sunaprsthah=priyaprsthah or vitaprsthah which is used many times in the RV as an epithet of aśva, atya, hari, etc.; see Grassmann s.v. This word does not signify 'schlichten Rücken habend' (Roth in P.W.) or, 'dessen Rücken eben ist' (Grassmann) but means 'having a pleasing (i.c., comfortable) back'; compare the word susadah 'easy or comfortable to sit upon' that is used as an epithet of arvan in VS. 11, 44: āśúr bhava vājy àrvan prthúr bhava susádas tvám. Compare also sagmāso ásvāh in RV. 7, 97, 6: tám sagmāso arusáso ásva brhaspátim sahaváho vahanti and sagmá hári in 8, 2, 27: éhá hári brahmayújā sagmā vakşatah sákhāvam.

"Come here drawn by eighty, by ninety, by hundred horses. This Soma-juice, O Indra, has been poured out for thy pleasure, by (the priests) who have pleasure in offering sacrifices."

2, 41, 14: tivró vo mádhumän ayám sunáhotreşu matsaráh | etám pibata kámyam ||

"For you is this exhilarating, sweet, and sharp (Soma-juice) with the (priests) who have pleasure in offering sacrifices; drink this beloved (drink)."

2, 41, 17: tvé vísvā sarasvati sritāyūmsi devyām | sunáhotresu matsva prajām devi dididdhi nah ||

'On thee, O goddess Sarasvatī, depends all longevity. Delight thou with (the priests) who have pleasure in offering sacrifices; confer children on us."

The exegetists have explained the word sunáhotreșu in all the above three verses' as a proper noun (S $\bar{a}$ yaṇa does so in 2, 41, 14 and 2, 41, 17 only; in 2, 18, 6 he interprets sunahotreșu as sukhena hūyate somo ychhir iti sunahotrāh pātravišesāh)—an explanation for which there does not seem to be any necessity. For, just as the word sunaprstha is equivalent to vitaprstha, in the same way does the word śunahotra (śunam hotre yasya) seem to be equivalent to the word vītihotra (vītih hotre yasya) 'he who has pleasure in sacrifices,' i.e., 'he who takes delight in offering sacrifices to the gods,' which occurs in 1, 84, 18: kó mainsate vitíhotrah sudeváh and 2, 38, 1: áthábhajad vītihotram svastau with the signification of 'priest'. This meaning, 'priest' suits sunahotra also in the above verses, and there is thus no necessity to regard it as a proper name.

The word suna occurs further in the compound ducchunā which means 'unpleasantness,' vipriya or duḥkha, and in the denominative verb ducchunāy, formed

The word suna that forms part of abhisunatara in T. Br. 1, 7, 1, 6: tau samalabhetam | so smad abhisunataro bhavat means, as explained by the commentator Bhatta-bhaskara, balena abhivulahah and is clearly derived from the root  $s\bar{u}$ , svay 'to swell." It is thus quite a different word and unconnected with suna meaning 'dear; own.'

suna thus signifies originally, as I hope is clear from the foregoing, priya, 'dear, agreeable,' etc., and secondarily, 'own'. The meaning sukha assigned to it by the author of the Nighantu seems to be but an approximate equivalent of the original priya, and, like all approximations, not quite accurate.

indrascná

The word indrasená occurs in one place only, in stanza 3 (út sma váto vahati váso asyā ádhiratham yád ájayat sahásram | rathir abhūn mudgalánī gáviṣṭau bhare kṛtám vy aced indrasená) of RV. 10, 102. This hymn is obscure and the most diverse views have been held about it. According to Yāska (Nırukta 9. 23-24,) the hymn refers to a battle or race, while according to Ṣaḍguruśiṣya (p. 158 of the Sarvānukramaṇī, Macdonell's edition), it refers to the pursuit by Mudgala of some thieves who had stolen his oxen.

Bergaigne (II. 280 ff.), however, thought that the hymn depicts liturgical symbolism, Henry, (JA. 1895, II, 516 ff.), that it describes the phenomena that occur on earth and in the sky during a thunder-storm, and Bloomfield (ZDMG. 48, 541 ff.), that it refers to heavenly, that is, meteorological events. This is the opinion of Profs. Macdonell (Vedic Index, II, 167) and Keith (JRAS. 1911, 1005, n. 1) also. Geldner (Ved. St. 2. 1 ff.), Pischel (ibid., 1. 124), von Bradke (ZDMG. 46, 445 ff.), Schröder (Mysterium und Mimus 347), and Oldenberg (RV. Noten, II, 318), on the other hand, opined that it is an ākhyāna or itihāsa hymn, and that it describes a chariot-race in which Mudgala's wife took prominent part. For literature connected therewith see Oldenberg, l.c.

According to the last-named scholars (Geldner and others), indrasená is a proper name denoting the wife of a human being, of Mudgala, and is the equivalent of the word Mudgalánī that is used in stanzas 2 and 6 of the hymn. According to the first-named scholars (Bergaigne and others), on the other hand, indrasená denotes the wife of Indra. This 'wife' is, in the opinion of Bergaigne, the prayer addressed to Indra ('la prière à Indra dans son union avec Soma'), and in the opinion of Bloomfield, Macdonell and Keith, his bolt (vajra).

In JRAS. 1910. 1328 ff., the late Mr. F. E. Pargiter attempted to throw some light on this hymn with the help of certain details contained in the Purāṇas about Mudgala, who is, according to the Nirukta (9. 2. 3. 3.) and the Sarvānukramaṇī, the son of Bhṛmyaśva and the author of this hymn. With the help of these details, Mr. Pargiter constructed the following genealogy:

And from this genealogy, he arrived at the following conclusions respecting the persons named in the hymn:

- 1. Mudgala was a rājā of the North Pañcāla dynasty and yet might also be regarded as a ṛṣi.
- 2. Mudgalānī, whose name is not mentioned, was obviously Mudgala's wife, as is generally agreed.
- 3. Indrasenā was the daughter-in-law of Mudgala, being the wife or rather the queen of his son Brahmiṣṭha.
- 4. Vadhri, in stanza 12, seems to refer to Indrasena's son and Mudgala's grandson Vadhryaśva.
- 5. Keśī, mentioned in stanza 6, was the sārathi or charioteer who drove Mudgalānī in the race.

Mr. Pargiter was therefore disposed to interpret the hymn in accordance with the above conclusions.

In the note referred to above, Mr. Pargiter collected the information given by the Purāṇas about Mudgala only and did not bring out anything new about Indrasenā, although Geldner had long ago pointed out that her name occurred in the Mahābhārata (Calcutta ed., 3. 113. 22; 4. 21. 11) where she is described as Nārāyaṇī and as the wife of Mudgala. In the Kumbakonam edition of the Mahābhārata, these stanzas are found on p. 186 of the Vanaparvan (Ch. 114; 23, 24) and p. 47 of the Virāṭaparvan (Ch. 24; 19-22). In both these places, this text has Nālāyani instead of its doublet form Nārāyaṇī; and it thus indicates that Indrasenā the wife of Mudgala was the daughter of Nala. She must therefore be identified with the Indrasenā who, we read in the Nalopākhyāna, 4 was born to Nala of Damayantī.

This inference is confirmed by the following story found in chapters 212 and 213 of the Ādiparvan (p. 359 ff.), where it is related by Vyāsa to King Drupada with the object of overcoming his repugnance to the marriage of his daughter with five men (the five Pāṇḍava brothers):

"Kṛṣṇā, the daughter of Drupada, was, in her former birth, known as Indrasenā. She was then the daughter of Nala and was married to the rsi Maudgalya<sup>5</sup> who was old and mere skin and bones, who was reeking with a smell which was other than pleasant, whose hair had become white and the skin furrowed with wrinkles, who was afflicted with leprosy, whose skin and nails were pecling off, who was repulsive to look at and who was extremely irritable, harsh, jealous and fanciful.6 The blameless Indrasenā used to serve her husband faithfully and to eat what was left of his food (uc-chista) after he had eaten. One day, the thumb of Maudgalya came off when he was eating his food; and Indrasena, when she sat down to the remnants, unconcernedly threw it away and consumed the food left without any feeling of disgust. Her husband was much pleased at this act of wifely devotion, said that he would grant her a boon, and asked her often what she desired. Indrasenā, being thus frequently urged, begged of the ṛṣi that he should sport with her, first dividing himself into five persons, and later becoming one again.

"The ṛṣi, owing to the power of his austerities and his yoga, accordingly sported with Indrasenā for many years, now making himself into five men and again as one man, in Indraloka, Meru and other places. Indrasenā thus came to the forefront of pativratās in the same way as Arundhatī and Sītā; and she attained a greater distinction in this respect than even her mother Damayantī.7

"While the ṛṣi Maudgalya thus played with Indrasenā, many years elapsed and he became weary of sensual pleasures. He therefore resolved to abandon this luxurious course of life and to practise austerities in a retired place. On this resolve being communicated to Indrasenā, she prostrated herself before the ṛṣi and earnestly besought him not to leave her as her craving for sensual pleasures was still unsatisfied. The ṛṣi grew wroth at this bold and impudent request and uttered a curse that she should be born as the daughter of Drupada, the king of the Pañcālas, and have five husbands.

"Grieving at this curse, and with her craving for sensual pleasure unsatisfied, Indrasenā, too, repaired to a forest and practised austerities in order to please Śiva. That god, being pleased with the austerities, showed himself to Indrasenā and conferred a boon on her that she would, in her next birth, have five husbands."

It should be noted that the wording of the text, Damayantyās ca mātus sā viseşam yayau, informs us in an unmistakable way that Indrasenā,<sup>8</sup> who is described as

Nālāyanī and as the wife of Maudgalya, was the daughter of Damayantī.

This story is very interesting and confirms the correctness of Geldner's interpretation of RV. X. 102 in several respects:

1. Thus, it is clear from the above story that Indrasenā, mentioned in stanza 2, is the same as the Mudgalānī mentioned in stanzas 2 and 6, and that she is the wife of the Mudgala mentioned in stanzas 5 and 9 and not his daughter-in-law as Mr. Pargiter would believe.

Mr. Pargiter seems to have been misled here by the use of the word Mudgala instead of the more correct form Maudgalya. Such laxity however in the matter of adding patronymic suffixes is fairly common not only in the epics and Purāṇas, but in the RV also. See for example, ZDMG. 42, p. 204 ff. where Oldenberg has shown that the word vasiṣṭha is used in the RV to denote not only the original Vasiṣṭha but his descendant as well.

As regards the word Mudgala itself, we have already seen above that the Mahābhārata in one place(III. 114. 24) uses that word to denote Mudgala's son (who, in 1. 212, 213 is called Maudgalya). Similarly, it relates in the Vanaparvan (Ch. 261) the story of a Mudgala (whether the same as Indrasenā's husband or a different person, there is no means of saying) who was offered, because of his zeal in giving gifts, the privilege of going to heaven in his mortal body (saśarīra-svarga) but refused to avail himself of it. In this story, the hero is called Mudgala (in III. 260. 38; 261. 3, 11, 14, etc.) and Maudgalya (in III. 261. 6, 14, 25, 33 etc.) indifferently. And in the Bhāgavata, X. 21. 34, the word Mudgala is used of the father of Divodāsa, i.e., to denote Vadhryaśva, the grandson of the original Mudgala.

There is thus no doubt that the Mudgala mentioned in stanzas 5 and 9 of RV. X. 102 is identical with the Mudgala of Mahābhārata III. 114. 24, with the Maudgalya of ibid. I. 212-213 and with the Brahmiṣṭha<sup>9</sup> (son of Mudgala) of Mr. Pargiter's genealogical table.

- 2. The story also supports the opinion of Geldner (p. 1) and Oldenberg (p. 318, n. 2) that Mudgala was a Brāhmaṇa against those of Henry and Pargiter who believed that he was a king.
- 3. The story gives, as can be seen above, a graphic description of the decrepitude of Indrasena's husband Mudgala, a point about which Bloomfield and Oldenberg were inlined to be sceptical.

Mudgala's decrepitude is thus well-attested and may be regarded as a certain fact. It is not however quite so certain that it was this decrepitude which, as Geldner would believe, prevented him from riding the chariot himself in the race and led him to substitute his wife Indrasenā in his stead. A passage¹o of the Kāṭhaka-saṃhitā (X. 5; Vol. 1, p. 130) which relates the story of a chariot-race between Vāmadeva and Kusidāyī shows that it was not unusual for women to take part in such Ludwig has, in his Rgveda-übersetzung (III, 171), set down a table where he has shown Vadhryaśva, the father of Divodāsa, as the son of Devavān, - a view accepted by Macdonell (Vedic Index, 1, 376). Though there is not much evidence in favour of this view, too, I have here provisionally adopted it for lack of a betterattested genealogy.

I am, however, very doubtful that Mudgala's son was named Brahmistha. From the footnotes given by Mr. Pargiter on p. 1329 loc. cit., it can be seen that, out of eight Purāṇas which he has used to construct the genealogy in question, only two contain the word brahmistha. In both these places, it is preferable to look upon this term as a common noun (—the best of Brāhmaṇas; a brahmarṣi) rather than as a proper name. The corrupt text of the Harivaṃśa, too, which uses the word brahmarṣi in this context favours this view.

races. Indrasenā too, who was the daughter of Nala, a noted charioteer, must naturally have known more of chariots and their driving and of races than her husband the Brāhmaṇa ṛṣi. These facts offer, in my opinion, sufficient explanation as to why Mudgala did not himself ride in the race but sent his wife Indrasenā instead as rider.

- 4. In interpreting stanza 6 of the hymn, Geldner has followed Sāyaṇa in thinking that Mudgalānī (i.e., the wife of Mudgala; Indrasenā) was both the rider (rathīḥ) as well as the charioteer (sārathiḥ) in the race. He has therefore accepted (p. 8) Sāyaṇa's dictum¹² that the word keśī in that stanza stands really for the feminine form keśinī and means 'having beautiful hair'. Further on, however, Sāyaṇa has given another explanation¹³ according to which Keśinī was the charioteer. I am disposed to think that this last explanation is correct and that this Keśinī is, perhaps, identical with the Keśinī who, in the Nalopākhyāna,¹⁴ was employed by Damayantī to observe and report to her the actions of Bāhuka (i.e, Nala), and to carry messages to him.
- 5. Regarding Geldner's interpretation of stanza 11 of the hymn, an interpretation which is not acceptable to Bloomfield, Oldenberg and Pargiter, the story related above shows that the sense which Geldner attached to the first half of that stanza is quite correct, so correct as to be surprising when one bears in mind that Geldner did not know of the above Mahābhārata story. He has there rightly interpreted the sentence parivikteva patividyam ānaṭ and has remarked that after winning the race and thus pleasing the old Mudgala, the net advantage gained by Indrasenā was not much to speak of, and that, on the whole, she was rather disappointed than otherwise. The correctness of this opinion is fully borne out by the above story which relates, as we have already seen, how Maudgalya was pleased with his wife, offered her a boon, sported with her as she desired, but left her before her desires were satisfied and thus disappointed her.

6. In the light of what has been said above, Mr. Pargiter's opinion that vádhri in stanza 12 refers to Indrasenā's son seems to be untenable.

The above story is not found in Ganapat Krishnaji's edition of the Mahābhārata, with Nīlakantha's commentary, published in Bombay, but seems to occur in some editions of Northern India. It is followed in the Kumbakonam edition (Ch. 214) by another story, shown as Pañcendropākhyāna ('Story of the five Indras') which is found in the Bombay edition (Ch. 197) and is as follows:

The gods (devāḥ) were once engaged in celebrating a sacrifice of many years' duration in the Naimiśa forest. Once they saw a golden lotus floating in the Ganga river; and Indra, being curious about its origin, went up the bank of the river until he came to a place where a most beautiful and radiant woman was standing in the water weeping and letting fall tears into the river which at once turned into golden lotuses. Seeing this, Indra was struck with wonder and asked her who she was and why she was weeping. She replied, "If you follow unfortunate me, you will know who I am and why I am weeping." She then led the way, Indra following, to the summit of a mountain where Indra saw a handsome youth playing a game with a radiantly beautiful woman. As this youth took no notice of Indra but continued to play, Indra became angry and said, "Know, O man, that I am Indra and that this universe is mine and obeys my will." The youth who was no other than Siva, then made Indra enter into a cave where he saw four others like himself who had all formerly been Indras. Siva then said, "You will all five be born human beings and do work on behalf of the gods; this woman too will be born one and will be your wife." The former Indras then prayed that in that case their fathers should be gods while Indra entreated that a son born to him may be allowed to take his place, and work with the other four, on the earth.

This story, too, was related by Vyāsa to Drupada; and Vyāsa, after relating the story, added that the five sons of Pāṇḍu were the five Indras and his daughter Kṛṣṇā, that woman.<sup>16</sup>

This story corroborates, though in a very unexpected way, the opinion expressed by Bergaigne and Bloomfield that the word indrasená denotes the wife of Indra, while the Indrasenopākhyāna that precedes it in the Kumbakonam edition shows that the opinion of Geldner (and others), that indrasená denotes Mudgala's wife, is justified. The two Mahābhārata stories together thus show that Bergaigne (partially) and Geldner were both correct in the views that they held regarding the word indrasená.

In the course of the above discussion, we have met with the names of two women, Damayantī and Indrasenā, who were regarded as patterns of pativratās. Compare Mahābhārata, III. 114. 22-24:

Śāntā cainam paryacaran narendra khe Rohiņī Somam ivānukūlā ||

Arundhatī vā subhagā Vasiṣṭham Lopāmudrā vā yathā hy Agastyam | Nalasya vai Damayantī yathābhūd yathā Śacī Vajradharasya caiva ||

and ibid. IV. 24, 17-23:

These two were related to each other as mother and daughter. It is therefore interesting to find in this connection that Ahalyā (wife of Gautama and mother of Śatānanda and others) who is regarded as a pattern of chastity, 17 was the daughter of Vadhryaśva son of Indrasenā (Bhāgavata, IX. 21. 34).

Of these names, all except Bhṛmyaśva, Nala, Damayantī and Menakā are found in the RV.

śagmá

This is an infrequently used word that occurs in about ten passages in the RV and in about the same number of passages in other Vedic texts. It is enumerated by the author of the Nighantu amongst sukha-nāmāni (3, 6) along with śiva, syona, śam and other words. Sāyaṇa, in his RV commentary explains it mostly as sukha or sukha-kara, but in two places (7, 97, 6; 8, 2, 27) gives the alternative explanation of śakta; Bhatta-bhāskara explains it as sukha or samartha and as śakti-viśeṣa in his commentary on TS. 1. 8. 22. 2. and TB. 1. 5. 5. 1, while Uvaṭa and Mahīdhara know nothing of śakta or samartha and explain the word as sukha or sukha-kara in their commentaries on VS. 3, 43; 4, 2 and 29, 45.

Roth, in the PW, points out that the word is derived from the root sak 'to be able' and explains it as 'hilf-reich, mittheilsam, entgegenkommend, gütig, fromm' while Grassmann has assigned to it the meanings

'vermögend, stark, kräftig.' Similarly, Ludwig too translates the word as 'kräftig, helfend, wirksam, stark' in his RV. Ueber., while Oldenberg translates it as 'mighty' in 1, 143, 8 (SBE. 46), but as 'Glück' in Ind. St. 15, 74. Likewise, Geldner, in his RV. Glossar, explains it as 'Glück bringend, heilsam, erfolgreich, günstig'; but in his RV. Ueber., he has given up this view and, following Grassmann and others, translated the word as 'tüchtig.'

Now it seems to be plain that the word sagmá is derived from the root śak 'to be able': but it is also equally plain that the meaning 'mighty, kräftig,' or 'tüchtig' does not fit into the context in RV. 7, 54, 3: śagmáyā samsádā te saksīmáhi ranváyā gātumátyā while the meaning siva or sukha-kara does. Hence it is not probable that śagmá means 'stark, tüchtig, kräftig or mighty' as Grassmann and the other scholars mentioned above think. On the other hand, the juxtaposition of the words siva, syona and samyoh in VS. 3, 43: ksémāya vah śantyai prápadye śiván sagmán samyóh samyóh; 4,2: dīksātapasos tanur asi tām tvā sivān sagmām paridadhe; AV. 19, 8, 2: astāvimsāni sivāni sagmāni sahá vogam bhajantu me; 14, 2, 17: ághoracakşur ápatighnī syonā śagmä suśévā; 4, 27, 3: śagmä bhavantu marúto nah syonah; and Śankh. GS. 3, 5, 1: sagmam sagmam śivam śivam kşemāya vah śāntyai prapadye points to the conclusion that śagmá is a synonym of śiva. The Brāhmaņa passage, tām tvā sivām sāntām sagmām sasukhām sādhvīm vā, too, cited by Uvața in his commentary on VS. 4, 2 shows that the word was so understood in the time of the Brāhmanas; and since this meaning fits well into the context in all the passages in which it is used (as will be shown presently), there is no doubt that the author of the Nighantu as also Uvața and Mahīdhara are right in explaining the word as śiva, sukha, or sukhakara.

1, 130, 10 : sá no návyebhir vṛṣakarmann ukthaíḥ
púrām dartaḥ pāyúbhiḥ pāhi śagmaíḥ |
divodāsébhir indra stávāno
vāvṛdhīthá áhobhir iva dyaúḥ ||

"O thou of strong deeds (praised) with new hymns, protect us with thy auspicious protections, O shatterer of forts. Praised by the Divodāsas (i. e., the descendants of Divodāsa) do thou, O Indra, wax mighty day by day like Dyaus'.

After ukthaih in pāda a, I supply the word stávānah from c; compare Sayana and Geldner, RV. Ueber. The import of pada d is not clear. Grassmann, Ludwig and Geldner construe áhobhir iva with dyaús and translate the expression as 'durch Strahlen wie der Himmel', 'wie mit [in] den tagen der himel', and 'wie der Tag mit der Tageszeiten'; so does Sayana also who explains it as dyauh dyotana-sīla ādityah ahobhih prasiddhaih yathā pravrddho bhavati. This is not very satisfactory, and I therefore think that it is preferable to construe áhobhih with vāvṛdhītháh and regard dyaur iva only as forming the upamana. The meaning of the therefore is, 'O Indra, may thy might increase day by day (so as to equal or surpass) that of Dyaus'. Compare in this connection 4, 21, 1: å yātv indrah. . vāvrdhānás távisir vásya pūrvir dyaúr ná ksatrám abhíbhūti puşyāt "May Indra come who, developing his many strengths, increase, like Dyaus, in might overcoming those of others."

The expression sagmaih pāyúbhih in b is equivalent to sivaih pāyúbhih used in 8, 60, 8: sivébhih pāhi pāyúbhih; compare also 1, 143, 8: sivébhir nah pāyúbhih pāhi sagmaih and 6,71,3: ádabdhebhih savitah pāyúbhis ţvám śivébhir adyá pári pāhi. Compare also the word saúbhagebhiḥ in 1, 112, 25: dyubhír aktúbhiḥ pári pātam asmān áriṣṭebhir aśvinā saúbhagebhiḥ.

- 1, 143, 8: áprayucchann áprayucchadbhir agne śivébhir nah pāyúbhih pāhi śaymaíh | ádabdhebhir ádrpitebhir iṣṭé 'nimiṣadbhih pári pāhi no jāh ||
- "Protect us, O Agni, never failing, with watchful, auspicious, beneficent protections. O thou sacrifice, protect our children with unwinking [i.e., always watchful] undeceived heedful (protections)." The meaning of iste (so, without accent according to the Padapatha) in pada c is not clear. Being unaccented, it must be a vocative of isti and mean either 'O thou our wish' (this is how Oldenberg understands it, SBE. 46, 158; see also Sāyana) or 'O sacrifice.' I am inclined to think that neither of these two meanings is correct and that the RV poet had something quite different in his mind. ista is found similarly used in 6, 8, 7 also, ádabdhebhis táva gopábir iste 'smákam pāhi trisadhastha sūrin. In both places, Geldner (RV. Ueber. I, 183) is inclined to think that the word used is isté, short for istébhih, and that it means 'dear' and is an attribute of pāyúbhih or gopábhih.

- "May the adorable Sarasvatī come to our sacrifice from the high heaven, from the mountain. May she, rich in ghee, and showing favour to our invocation, listen lovingly to our auspicious hymn". Regarding sagmām vācam in pāda d, compare sámtamāni vācāmsi and sámtamā gih etc. in 6, 32, 1: sámtamāni vācāmsy āsā sthávirāya takṣam; 5, 42, 1: prá sámtamā váruṇam didhitī gir mitrám bhágam áditim nūnám aṣyāh; 5, 43, 8: ácchā mahi bṛhati śámtamā gir dūtó ná gantu; 1, 76, 1: bhúvad agne śámtamā kā manīṣā and 8, 74, 7: sā [sc. matih] te agne śámtamā cániṣṭhā bhavatu priyā.

6, 44, 2: yáh sagmás tuvisagma te rāyó dāmā matīnām | sómah sutúh sú indra té 'sti svadhāpate mádah ||

"O thou most beneficent, the beneficent intoxicating Soma, giver of riches and hymns, is pressed for thee, O Indra, lord of strength". Compare the epithet śámtamaḥ applied to mádaḥ in 9, 104, 3 and to Indra in 8, 53, 5: á śamtama śámtamābhir abhiṣṭibhiḥ; compare also 1, 171, 3: utá stutó maghávā śámbhaviṣṭhaḥ.

6, 75, 8: rathaváhanam havír asya náma yátráyudham níhitam asya várma | tátrā rátham úpa śagmám sadcma viśváhā vayám sumanasyámānāḥ ||

"havir (-dhāna) is the name of this chariot-carrier (i.e., of the waggon which carries the chariot) in which is placed the weapon and coat of mail of this (warrior). May we with well-disposed mind always place in it the beneficent chariot." I follow Uvaṭa and Mahādhara (VS. 29, 45) in regarding havir in pāda a as a contraction of havir-dhāna; see also Geldner, Ved. St., 2, 275. havir-dhāna denotes the waggon which carries the havis or oblation; and the chariot-waggon is so called here because the chariot itself as also the weapon and armour are regarded by the RV poet as forming the oblation which the warrior-sacrificer uses in the battle-sacrifice.

Regarding the expression sagmám rátham in c, compare the epithets sukhá and sukhátama that are applied to rátha in many RV verses (for references see Grassmann, s. v. sukha), and also the epithet sacanás that is applied to it in 1, 116, 18: revád uvāha sacanó rátho vām. Compare also the epithet váhiṣṭha 'most comfortable' in 4, 14, 4: á vām váhiṣṭhā ihá té vahantu ráthā áśvāsaḥ.

- 7, 54, 3: västoş pate sagmáyā samsádā te sakşīmáhi raņváyā gātumátyā | pāhí kṣéma utá yógc váram no yūyám pāta svastíbhih sádā nah ||
- "May we, Vāstoṣpati, be joined with thy company that is beneficent, pleasant and continuing. Protect us well when we are quietly enjoying or acquiring property. Do ye protect us always with (your) blessings."
  - 7, 60, 5: imé cetáro ánṛtasya bhūrer mitró aryamā váruṇo hí sánti | imá ṛtásya vāvṛdhur duroṇé śagmāsah putrā áditer ádabdhāh ||
- "These are the avengers of great wrong, Mitra, Aryamā and Varuņa. These undeceivable beneficent sons of Aditi grew up in the house of rta (Law)". With the expression sagmāsah putrā áditch in pāda d, compare 10, 77, 8: yajūíyāsa ūmā ādityēna nāmnā sámbhaviṣṭhāḥ and 1, 106, 2: tá ādityā ā galam sarvátātaye bhūtá devā vṛṭratūryeṣu sambhūvaḥ.
  - 7, 97, 6: tám śagmáso aruşáso ásvā
    bɨhaspátim sahaváho vahanti | sáhas cid yásya nílavat sadhástham
    nábho ná rūpám arusám vásānāh ||
- "Him, Brhaspati, whose blue place . . . . , draw good bright horses that draw together and that, like the sky, wear brilliant jewels".

Instead of nilavat, the reading nilavat is found in many MSS in the third pāda, whose import, with either reading, is obscure. Sāyaṇa explains pādas cd as yasya Bṛhaspatch sahaś cit balam ca bhavati | nılam nilayo nivāsaḥ | tad-yuktam sadhastham saha-sthānam ca yasya tam Bṛhaspatim ity anvayaḥ | kīdṛśā aśvāḥ | nabho na ādityam iva aruṣam ārocamānam rūpam vasānā dhārayantaḥ. Grassmann translates them as 'dessen

Kraft erstarkt ist, ihn fahren hin zum dunkeln Sitz die Hengste... mit rothem Glanz umkleidet, wie mit Wolkem', and Ludwig as 'des sigeskraft wie ein nestartiger [zufluchts] ort, die wie der wolkenhimel in rote farbe gehüllet".

śagmáso áśvāḥ=horses that draw the chariot comfortably, i. e., good carriage-horses; compare áśvān. . váhiyasaḥ in 1, 104, 1 and váhiṣṭhā áśvāḥ in 4, 14, 4 cited above and other verses (for references see Grassmann s. v. váhiṣṭha). - AV. 18, 2, 21: hváyāmi te mánasā mána ihémán grhän úpa jujuṣāná ehi | sám gacchasva pitýbhih sám yaména syonás tvā vātā úpa vāntu sagmāh ||
- "I call thy mind here with mind; come to this house, liking; unite thyself with the Fathers, with Yama; let happy auspicious winds waft thee (to them)."

AV. 18, 4, 8: ángirasām áyanam pūrvo agnír ādityānām áyanam gārhapatyo dákṣiṇānām áyanam dakṣiṇāgníḥ | mahimānam agnér víhitasya bráhmaṇā sámangaḥ sárva úpa yāhi śagmáḥ ||

"The path of the Angirases is the eastern fire; the path of the Ādityas is the Gārhapatya fire (i. e., householder's fire); the track of the sacrificial gifts is the southern fire; do thou, with thy limbs, whole, happy, attain to the greatness of Agni who has been created by Brahman".

AV. 19, 8, 2: aṣṭāvimśāni śivāni śagmāni sahá yógam bhajantu me | yógam prá padye kṣémam ca kṣémam prá padye yógam ca námo 'horātrābhyām astu ||

"The twenty-eight (asterisms) that are beneficent, helpful, may they be brought into association with me. I take refuge with Yoga (acquisition of property) and Kṣema (enjoyment of property); with Kṣema and Yoga I take refuge. I bow to Day and Night".

Pādas ab mean, 'O ye twenty-eight asterisms, may I be brought into your association, which is auspicious, beneficent'; compare with them RV. 7, 54, 3: vāstoṣ pate śagmáyā saṃsádā te sakṣīmá'li raṇváyā gātumátyā explained above.

śagmá further occurs in TB. 1, 5, 5: vaiśvānarasya tejasā | rtenāsya nivartaye | satyena parivartay? | tapasā 'syānuvartaye | śivenā 'syopavartaye | śagmenā 'syābhivartaye in a mantra that is recited by the 'priest when shaving the yajamāna. It is not known exactly what the operations are that are denoted by the words nivartana, parivartana, anuvartana, upavartana and abhivartana here; but there is no doubt that śagmá like śiva denotes 'beneficence' or 'auspiciousness' here.

Šānkh. GS. 3, 5, 1: sagmam sagmam sivam sivam kṣemāya vah sāntyai prapadye 'bhayam no astu grāmo mā 'raṇyāya paridadātu visvamahāya mā paridehi |

"Good fortune, good fortune, happiness, happiness; I take refuge with you for well-being and peace. May there be security for us; let the village give me over to the forest. Give me over to the all-great (forest)."

From  $\dot{s}agm\dot{a}$  is derived the word  $\dot{s}agmiya$  or  $\dot{s}agmya$ , which too denotes 'beneficent, auspicious' and occurs in the two following verses:

RV. 3, 31, 1: śásad válnir duhitúr naptyàm gād vidváñ rtásya didhitim saparyán | pitá yátra duhitúh sékam rñján sám sagmyèna mánasā dadhanvé ||

The import of this verse is obscure. See Sayaṇa's commentary, Oldenberg, RV. Noten, and Geldner, RV. Ueber. I translate mechanically: "To the grand-daughter went, instructing, the leader of the sacrifice knowing rta (Law), honouring pious thought, where the father, passing semen to the daughter, together ran with beneficent thought."

AV. 5, 1, 9: ardhám ardhéna páyasā pṛṇakṣy ardhéna śuṣma vardhase amūra |
ávim vṛdhāma śagmíyam sákhāyam váruṇam putrám ádityā iṣirám |
kaviśastány asmai vápūmṣy avocāma ródasī satyavácā ||

This verse too, as also the other verses of this hymn, is obscure; compare Whitney's observation (AV. Trans., p. 200), 'This hymn is intentionally and most successfully obscure'. I reproduce here his (mechanical) translation with some alterations:

"Half with half milk thou mixest; with half, O unovercome strength, thou growest. May we magnify the beneficent friend, Varuna the vigourous son of Aditi, the sheep. We have spoken for him brilliant (hymns) praised by poets; the two firmaments of true speech".

§ 5 svásava

The attempts so far made to elucidate the meaning of this word are not satisfactory. The author of the Vedic Nighantu has mentioned this word three timesonce (1,9) as a synonym of ahas, day, once, (3, 4) as a synonym of grha, dwelling, and once (4, 2) without mentioning any meaning. The deficiency in this last instance is made good by Yāska who has interpreted it as alias. This meaning alias is repeated by Uvata and Mahīdhara in their commentaries on VS. 26, 11 and by Devarāja in his commentary on the Nighantu. Sāyaṇa, on the other hand, has, in his RV commentary, made use not only of the meaning ahas and grha (with suitable modifications, as for instance, yāgāhan 9, 94, 2; kulāya 2, 19, 2; gostha 2, 2, etc.) but has in addition interpreted the word as āditya in 5, 62, 2, as mārga in 6, 68, 10, and as sarira in 1, 34, 7; see Geldner, Ved. Studien, 3, 111.

Roth has assigned to this word the meanings (1) Hürde, Stall; (2) Gewohnter Ort, Wohnplatz, Wohnung, Nistplaz der Vögel; that is to say, he has confined himself to the meaning grha and rejected the meaning ahas. This meaning, however, hardly yields good sense in many of the passages where the word occurs; and Geldner has, therefore, in his article on this word (Ved. Studien, 3, 110 ff.), investigated anew its meaning, and starting with the assumption that it means both a place and a time of day (as declared by the author of the Nighantu), has come to the conclusion that svásara means (1) Frühtrieb, Morgenweide; the time before samgava when the cows graze freely on the pasture; (2) Frühausflug aus dem Nest, die Morgenatzung with regard to birds; and (3) die Frühmesse, Frühlibation, and, upalakṣaṇena, all the three savanāni or libations. This interpretation is approved of by Macdonell (see his Vedic Index, s. v. ahan, go, svasara) and apparently by Oldenberg also who translates (RV. Noten I, 260) 3, 60, 6c as 'Diese Weiden bieten sich dir dar.' Hillebrandt, on the other hand, translates (Lieder des RV., p. 80) 5, 62, 2c as 'Ihr macht alle Milchströme des (himmlischen) Stalles strotzen 'and seems therefore still to follow Roth in his interpretation of the word.

It seems to me that the translations given above of 3, 60, 6 and 5, 62, 2 by Oldenberg and Hillebrandt are hardly satisfactory. Nor are Geldner's translations (given in his RV. Uebersetzung) of 1, 34, 7cd ('Drei Entfernungen kommt ihr Wagenlenker Aśvin her zu Frühmesse wie der Windhauch zur Frühweide'), 2, 19, 2cd ('dass die Labsale der Flüsse forteilten wie Vögel zu den Futterplätzen') and 3, 60, 6cd ('Dir stehen diese [Soma-] weiden zur Verfügung auf Geheiss der Götter und nach den Satzungen des Menschen') any better: they indicate that the meanings proposed by Geldner for the word svásara are not correct and that they need to be revised.

The reason for such incorrectness, too, is not far to seek. Geldner has begun his exposition (Ved. Studien, 3, 111) with the observations (1) that the verses 2, 34, 8: dhenúr ná šíšve svásareşu pinvate; 2, 2, 2: abhí tvā náktīr uṣáso vavāširé 'gne vatsám ná svásareṣu dhenávaḥ; 8, 88,

1: abhí vatsám ná svásaresu dhenáva indram girbhír navāmahe; 9, 94, 2: dhiyah pinvānāh svásare ná gāva rtāyántīr abhí vāvašra indum show that the cows ooze with milk and low for their calves at the time or place of svásara, and (2) that the the verses 1, 186, 5: śiśum ná pipyúsīva veti síndhuh and 2, 16, 8: dhenúr ná vatsám yávasasya pipyúsi show that the milch-cow longs for and returns to her calf when she is pipyusi or yavasasya pipyuṣi. These observations are unexceptionable<sup>2</sup>, and when taken into consideration along with the statement in Tait. Br. 1, 4, 9, 2: (tasmāt trir ahnah paśavah prerate | prātah samgave sāyam) that the cows went out to graze thrice a day, prātah, same ave and sāvam, they point to the conclusion that the cows returned home from the pasture thrice a day oozing with milk and longing and lowing for their calves. Similarly, Geldner's further observation (p. 113) that svasara denotes the time when the cows roam about and freely graze on the pastures (sva-sara), supposing that it is correct, points, when taken in conjunction with the above statement of the Tait. Br., to the conclusion that there are three periods of time in each day which can be denoted by the word svasara and not one period only, that preceding the saingava time, as stated by Geldner.

<sup>2.</sup> Except that, as regards the second observation, the word pipyūṣī in 2, 16, 8 has no connection with the word yūvasasya which precedes it and which is to be construed with the verb abhy ā vavṛtṣva. The cow moreover does not long for her calf when she is pipyuṣī but becomes pipyuṣī [i.e., oozing with milk] when she remembers and longs for her calf or sees it; compare Kirātārjunīya 4, 10: upāratāh pascimarātrigocarād apārayantah patitum javena gām | tam utsukās cakrur avekṣanotsukam gavām ganāh prasnutapīvaraudhasah and the commentator's explanation utsukā vatseṣūtkanṭhitāḥ, prasnutapīvaraudhaso vatsasmaranāt sravat pināpīnāh; Raghuvainśa 1, 84: bhuvam koṣṇena kuṇḍodhni medhyenāvabhṛthād api | prasraveṇābhivarṣantī vatsālokapravartinā; Yaśastilakacampū, 2, 184: kvacid vatsekṣaṇa-kṣaṇa-kṣarat-stana-dhenu-dugdha-dhārā-dhāvyamāna-dharāpīṭham.

Now, what are the three times of the day when the cows were driven out to graze? It has been remarked, in this connection, by Macdonell (Vedic Index, s. v. go, note 4) that the exact sense of the above-mentioned passage of the Tait. Br. (1, 4, 9, 2) is obscure and that 'strictly speaking, the cows were driven out from the cattleshed in the morning, spent the heat of the day in the Samgavinī, were then driven out during the evening to graze and finally came or were driven home.' That is to say, the cows were, according to him, driven out to graze twice only in the day—in the morning before samgava, and in the afternoon after sameava, and not thrice. This view seems to me to be untenable, and I am disposed to think that the statement of the Tait. Br. is correct and that the cows were driven out to graze thrice a day—in the morning (prātah), in the samgava time (samgave), and in evening (sāyam), that is to say, in the latter part of the night (paścimarātra) before the morning milking, in the late morning after the morning-milking, and in the afternoon some time after the samgava-milking, and that they returned or were driven home from the pasture before the morning-milking, before the samgava-milking, and before the evening-milking respectively. Compare also Bhattabhāskara's comment (p. 235) tasmād ahnas trih prerate paśavaś caranārtham pratisthante prātah samgave sāvam ca on this passage.

The return home of the milch-cows has been described frequently by the later Sanskrit classical writers from whose writings I reproduce here some passages on this subject:

Yaśastilaka-campū 2, p. 10.

The first of these passages describes the return home of the cows from the paścimarātrigocara, longing (utsuka) for their calves and with their udders oozing milk. paścimarātrigocara means the pasture in which the cows graze in the last part of the night; and hence this verse describes the return home of the cows before the prātardoha.<sup>3</sup> The other passages refer to the return home of the milch-cows in the evening and likewise represent these cows as eager to rejoin their calves, lowing to them, and hastening to them (gostham upetya satvaram) with their udders oozing milk (prasnutastanam; prasravena; sravad audhasam payah).

This eagerness of the cows to join their calves, their lowing to them and their hastening to them with udders oozing milk are features that figure also in innumerable verses of the RV that contain comparisons. Compare for instance 10, 149, 4: vāśréva vatsám sumánā dúhānā pátir iva jāvām abhí no ny ètu; 10, 75, 4: abhí tvā sindho šísum ín ná mātáro vāsrā arşanti páyaseva dhenávah; 1, 38, 8; vāsréva vidyún mimāti vatsám ná mātā sisakti; 1, 32, 2; vāsrā iva dhenávah svándamānā áñjah samudrám áva jagmur ápah; 1, 164, 28: gaúr amimed ánu vatsám misántam mürdhánam hínn akrnon mátavá u srkvanam gharmám abhí vavasaná mímati māyúm páyate páyobhih; 9, 86, 2: ásrksata ráthyāso váthā prthak | dhenúr ná vatsám pávasābhi vajrinam. In the same way, the lowing of the calves for their mother-cows and the licking of the calves by the cows (see Bhagavata, 10, 13, 24 cited above) are likewise referred to in many RV verses; compare, in respect of the former, 1, 164, 9: ámimed valsó ánu gam apasyat; 9, 94, 4: tám vāvašānám matáyah sacante; 10, 1, 2: prá mātřbhyo ádhi kánikradad gáh and in respect of the latter, 3, 41, 5; rihánti sávasas pátim | indram vatsám ná mātárah; 3, 55, 13: anyásyā vatsám rihatí mimāya;

The passages cited above describe the return home of the milch-cows in the early morning (before the prātar-doha) and in the evening (before the sāyam-doha) only. I do not know of any which describes their return home at the samgava time<sup>4</sup> (before the samgava milking)<sup>5</sup>; but it can not be doubted that, at that time too, the milch-cows would be eager to rejoin their calves and would hasten to them, lowing and with their udders oozing milk. The oozing of milk from the cows' udders is thus not the characteristic of a place, but of a time—the time when the milch-cows return home<sup>6</sup> from the pasture and are milked. This, as we have seen above, takes place three times a day—prātaḥ,

saingave and sāyam or roughly, in the three sandhyā or savana times. It is these three times of the day that are denoted by the word svásara.

svásara is thus approximately equivalent to sandhyā, and in the plural, may be said to be a synonym of the word trisandhya or triṣavaṇa. It is a kālavācakaśabda or word denoting time; and as such, it can be used in sentences to denote the time "when" not only in the locative case, but in the accusative and genitive cases also; see Whitney, §§274c, 300a, and 302b. Compare also Gaedicke (p. 178): "Der Accusativ von Zeitbegriffen besagt, dass der Vorgang während ihrer Dauer, der Genitiv, dass er während eines Theils derselben, der Locativ, dass er zwischen ihren Grenzen, der Instrumental, dass er mit ihrem Eintritt und Verlauf stattfindet. Daher kann die Frage 'wie lange' nur durch den Accusative beantwortet werden, während das 'wann' durch alle vier Casus bestimmt werden kann."

Like the word sandhyā which, though denoting the three sandhyā times, morning, noon and evening, is sometimes used in the sense of 'evening' only (see Apte), the word svásara too, seems frequently to be used in the sense of 'evening.' This seems to be the case in the verses which refer to the cows oozing milk for their calves or lowing to them. And likewise there seems to be no doubt that svásara means 'evening' in verses 2, 19, 2 and 2, 34, 5, where it is mentioned in connection with birds (vayaḥ; hamsāḥ); for it is well-known that birds return to their nests in the evening and this fact is referred to in many passages in the later classical literature also. Compare for instance:

I have no doubt that it is this home-coming of the birds in the evening that is referred to by the above-mentioned RV verses (2, 19, 2; and 2, 34, 5). And similarly, it is my belief that the word svásara denotes 'evening' in verses 1, 3, 8; 2, 2, 2; etc., where it is mentioned in connection with cows. It is true that (in the language of the poets) the cows return home with milk-oozing udders and low to their calves not only in the evening, but in the other two svásara times also, namely, in the morning and forenoon. But the paucity of references in the later classical literature to the home-coming of the cows in these two svásara times, combined with the many references to their home-coming in the evening, makes me think that the RV poets too had this home-coming of the cows at evening in their mind when they used the word svásara in connection with cows in 1, 3, 8; 2, 2, 2; etc.<sup>7</sup>

I shall now show that the above-mentioned meaning, namely,  $sandhy\bar{a}$  time or evening, fits into the context and yields good sense in all the passages where the word  $sv\acute{a}sara$  occurs. I begin with

1, 3, 8: vísve deváso aptúrah sutám á ganta túrnayah | usrá iva svásarāṇi ||

"O ye All-Gods, come ye here, conquering the waters (in respect of rapid motion), quick, to the Soma juice, as cows in the evening." svásarāṇi=svasareṣu. The comparison usrā iva svásarāṇi means yathā usrāḥ svasareṣu vatsān prati satvaram gacchanti tathā. This idea of swiftness is expressed, besides, by the epithets tūrṇayaḥ and aptūraḥ. The savana time that is proper to the Viśvedevas is the third or evening savana: compare Ch. Up. 2, 24, 1: ādityānām ca viśveṣām ca devānām tṛtīyasavanam; and though this verse is, in the ritual, (Āś. Śr. Sūtra, 5, 10, 5) prescribed for recitation in connection with the Vaiśvadevagraha of the prātassavana, it is not improbable that it was originally recited in connection with the evening savana and that the word svásarāṇi is to be construed with the verb āganta also.

1, 34, 7: trír no aśvinā yajatā divé-dive pári tridhātu pṛthivīm aśāyatam |
tisró nāsatyā rathyā parāváta
ātméva vātah svásarāni gacchatam ||

"Thrice every day, O ye worshipful Aśvins, do ye come to the threefold earth, to us. O ye Aśvins that ride on chariots, ye go (i.e., pass) through the three distant places at the sandhyā times (as swiftly) as the swift-moving wind." With regard to the last pāda, compare 1, 79, 1: vāta iva dhrājīmān; 1, 163, 11: tāva cittām vāta iva dhrājīmān; 10, 95, 2: durāpanā vāta ivāhām asmi; 4, 38, 3: rathatūram vātam iva dhrājāntam; 7, 33, 8: vātasyeva prajāvo nānyēna; 10, 78, 3: vātāso nā yé dhūnayo jīgatnāvah, etc., all which contain comparisons referring to the swiftness of the wind.

2, 2, 2: abhí tvā náktīr uṣáso vavāširé
'gne vatsám ná svásarcṣu dhenávaḥ |
divá ivéd aratír mānuṣā yugā
kṣápo bhāsi puruvāra saṃyátaḥ ||

"For thee, O Agni, did they low, in the nights and in the mornings, as milch-cows do for their calf in the  $sandhy\bar{a}$  times. Being bright, thou shinest, as in day so in the nights, successively, throughout man's life, O thou that hast many desirable things."

It is the opinion of Oldenberg (RV. Noten, I. 189) that the words nāktīḥ and uṣásaḥ are in the nominative case and should be regarded as the subject of the verb vavāsire, the verse being translated as: 'dir haben Nächte und Morgenröten zugebrüllt.' This is the opinion of Bloomfield also (RV. Repetitions I, p. 162) who refers to 9, 94, 2 (in which I find nothing bearing on this point) in this connection; and Sāyaṇa too has given this as an alternative explanation.

There is however no verse elsewhere in the RV in which the Nights and Dawns are represented as crying after Agni. I prefer therefore to regard náktīḥ and uṣásaḥ as being in the accusative case and used here in adverbial sense. This is the view of Sāyaṇa also in his first explanation and of Geldner. As subject of the verb vavāšire we have to understand either the priests or the prayers; compare 10, 64, 15: grávā yátra madhuşúd ucyáte bṛhád ávīvašanta matibhir manīṣiṇaḥ and 1, 62, 3: sám usriyābhir vāvašanta náraḥ where the priests are said to have lowed for the gods and for Indra; and also 8, 44, 25: ágne dhṛtávratāya te samudrāyeva síndhavaḥ | gíro vāsrāsa īrate and 7, 5, 5: tvām agne harito vāvašānā gíraḥ sacante dhúnayo ghṛtāciḥ where the prayers (giraḥ) are said to low after Agni and run to him. Compare also 9, 63, 21: matī víprāḥ sám asvaran where the priests are said to cry after Soma with prayers.

2, 19, 2: asyá mandānó mádhvo vájrahastó
'him índro arņovítam ví vṛścat |
prá yád váyo ná svásarāṇy ácchā
práyāmsi ca nadínām cákramanta ||

"Exhilarated with this sweet juice, Indra, who carries the Vajra in his hand, cut off the dragon who had confined the waters, so that, like birds in the evening, the pleasing (i.c., refreshing) waters of the rivers, too, moved swiftly towards (the sea)."

The reference here is to Indra's well-known exploit of the liberation of the Waters and Cows after slaying the dragon; and I therefore agree with Sāyaṇa in his opinion that the word samudram is to be supplied after áccha in the second half-verse. Compare the next verse: indro árṇo apām prairayad ahihācchā samudram; see also Geldner, Ved. Studien, 3, 115, who, in his RV. Uebersetzung, however, construes áccha with the word svāsarāni and translates: 'die Labsale der Flüsse forteilten wie Vögel zu den Futterplätzen.'s

It is hard to explain why the word ca has been used in pada 4. Its use implies that something else, besides the práyāmsi, moved swiftly; and what this something else is, it is difficult to determine; see Oldenberg, RV. Noten, I, 203. Perhaps it is the arnāmsi, torrents, referred to by the word arnovitam in pada b (compare also the words arno apam in the next verse). This is the view of Geldner in Ved. Studien, 3, 52, though in this case, it is difficult to make a distinction between the arnāmsi and prayāmsi. Or perhaps, it is the cows that Indra sets free with the waters or rivers (compare 1, 32, 12: ájayo gā ájayah sūra sómam ávāsrjah sártave saptá sindhūn and 2, 23, 18: táva šriyé vy ajihīta párvato gávām gotrám udásrjo vád angirah | índrena vujá támasā párīvrtam brhaspate nir apām aubjo arnavam) and that are likewise mentioned in the next verse: indro arno apám prairayad ahihácchā samudrám | ájanayat súryam vidád gā aktúnāhnām vayúnāni sādhat. Compare also 1, 61, 10: indrah | gå ná vraná avánir amuñcat 'Indra set free, like the cows, the rivers that were confined.'

Here too, svásarāṇi=svásareṣu. The point of comparison in the simile váyo ná svásarāṇi 'like birds in the evening,' is swiftness which, though not mentioned, is to be understood here; compare in this respect the verse 1, 3, 8 (explained above) where too the sāmānya-dharma is not mentioned.

I have cited above many passages from classical Sanskrit writers which describe the return of birds to their nests in the evening. One only of these, namely,  $\bar{a}v\bar{a}sotsukapaksinah$  kalarutam krāmantu vṛkṣālayān . . . mentions that the birds are 'eager,' i.e., hurrying, to return to their nests: the other passages make no mention of this feature. To compensate for this, there are many RV verses that make no mention of evening-time, but refer, expressly or implicity, to the swift movement of the birds when returning to their nests. Compare, for instance, 6, 3, 5: citrádhrajatir aratir yó aktór vér ná druṣádvā raghupátmajamhāh 'of wonderful speed, shining at night, with swift-flying wings like a bird that is going to sit on a tree (i.e., that is going to its nest; compare particularly the words āvāsa and vṛkṣālaya in the passage āvāsotsukapaksinah kalarutam . . . cited above)': 1, 25, 4: párā hi me vimanyavah pátanti vásva-istave | vávo ná vasatir úpa, 'like birds to their nests, my prayers fly swifty, seeking good fortune'; 1, 30, 4: ayám u te sám atasi kapotá iva garbhadhím 'this (Soma juice) is for thee; thou fliest to it as swiftly as a dove does to its nest'; 1, 33, 2: úpéd ahám dhanadam ápratītam jústām ná švenó vasatím patāmi 'I fly swiftly to him, the giver of riches, the irresistible, as the falcon flies to its own dwelling-place'; 1, 183, 1: tám yuñjāthām mánaso vó jávīvān trivandhuró vṛṣaṇā yás tricakráh vénopavatháh sukýto duronám tridhatuna patatho vír ná párnaih 'yoke, ye two bulls, that (chariot) which is swifter than thought, has three seats, three wheels and three parts, and on which ye come, ye fly swiftly, to the dwelling of the pious person like a bird that flies with its wings to its dwelling-place'; 10, 115, 3: tám vo vím ná drusádam . . . . máhivratam ná sarájantam ádhvanah 'him (sc. Agni), who moves (as swiftly) as a bird that is going to sit on a tree (i.e., that is going to its nest) . . . raising dust over paths like a mighty person.' Compare also 9, 72, 5: aprāh krátūn sám ajair adhvaré matir vér ná drusác camvor asadad dhárih: 9, 61, 21; sámmislo arusó bhava sūpasthábhir ná dhenúbhih | sidañc chyenó ná yónim á; 9, 62, 4: ásāvy amsúr mádavapsú dákso giristhah | svenó ná vónim åsadat; 9,71,6: syenó ná yónim sádanam dhiya krtám hiranyáyam āsádam devá ésati | é rinanti barhísi priyám girā 'svo ná devāň ápy eti yajníyah; 9,82,1: ásavi sómo

aruşó vṛṣā hárī rājeva dasmó abhí gā acikradat | punānó vāram páry ety avyáyam syenó ná yónim ghṛtávantam āsádam; 9, 86, 35: iṣam ūrjam pavamānābhy àrṣasi syenó ná vámsu kaláseṣu sīdasi; 10, 43, 4: váyo ná vṛkṣám supalāsám āsadan sómāsa indram mandinas camūṣádaḥ where the idea of swiftness is implied by the comparison with the bird or falcon 'sitting,' i.e., going to sit, in its nest.¹o

The comparison váyo ná svásaräni therefore in the above half-verse (prá vád váyo ná svásarany áccha právāmsi ca nadinām cákramanta) means 'as swiftly as birds (fly to their dwelling-places) in the evening.' The idea of swiftness is referred to clearly in other passages also that describe the running forth of the Waters or rivers after their liberation by Indra: compare 3, 32, 6: tvám apó vád dha vrtrám jaghanván átyan iva prásrjah sártavájaú; 1, 32, 2: áhann áhim párvate sisriyanám... vāsrā iva dhenávah syándamānā áñjah samudrám áva jagmur āpah; 1, 130, 5; tvám výthā nadyà indra sártavécchā samudrám asrjo ráthān iva vājayató ráthān iva; 2, 15, 3: vájrena khány atrnan nadínām | vŕthā 'srjat pathíbhir dīrghayāthaíh; 4, 17, 3: vádhīd vṛtrám vájrena mandasanáh sárann apo jávasa hatávysnih; 10, 111, 9-10: srjáh síndhūnr áhinā jagrasānán ád íd etah prá vivijre javéna | múmuksamana utá va mumucré 'dhéd eta ná ramante nítiktah || sadhricih síndhum usatir ivāyan.

2, 34, 5: indhanvabhir dhenúbhi rapšádūdhabhir adhvasmábhih pathibhir bhrājadrstayah

å hamsåso ná svásarāni gantana mádhor mádāya marutah samanyavah ||

"With the flaming (?) cows whose udders are full, come, O ye Maruts that are of the same mind, and that have bright spears, by dustless roads for the delight of the sweet (drink), (as swiftly) as swans in the evening."

The exact meaning of indhanvabhih, which occurs in this one passage only, is not known. The sense of pāda a too, is somewhat obscure.

svásarāṇi in this verse too is equivalent to svasareşu. The comparison hamsāso ná svásarāṇi refers, not to the genus bird, like 6, 3, 5; 1, 25, 4; 1, 183, 1; etc., cited above, but to a particular species of birds; it resembles in this respect the verses 1, 30, 4: ayám u te sám atasi kapotá iva garbhadhim and 1, 33, 2: júṣṭām ná ṣyenó vasatim patāmi (also cited above) which likewise refer to particular species of birds. The sāmānyadharma, however, is the same, to wit, swiftness, in all these verses.

- 2, 34, 8: yád yuñjáte marúto rukmávakşasó
  'śvān rátheşu bhága á sudánavah | dhenúr ná šísve svásareşu pinvate
  jánāya rātáhavise mahim ísam ||
- "When the liberal Maruts, with ornaments on their breasts, yoke their horses in the chariots for the purpose of blessing, they ooze copious refreshments for him who has offered oblations as the milch-cow (does) to her calf in the evenings."
  - 3, 60, 6: indra rbhumān vājavān matsvehá no
    'smin sávane sácyā purustuta | imāni túbhyam svásarāni yemire
    vratā devānām mánusas ca dhármabhih ||

"Indra, delight thou now here ardently with the Rbhus and Vāja in this our oblation of the Soma juice, O thou that art much praised. These savana times are set apart for thee according to the ordinance of the gods and the customs of man." Note the juxtaposition of the sentences, asmin sávane matsva and imāni túbhyam svásarāni yemire which too points to the conclusion that svásara denotes the time of savana.

- 3, 61, 4: áva syűmeva cinvati maghóny
  uşá yāti svásarasya pátnī |
  svàr jánantī subhágā sudámsā
  ántād diváh papratha á prthivyáh ||
- "Gathering rays, as it were, comes the liberal Dawn, the ruler of sandhyā. Bringing out the sun, she who is beautiful and has great might, has spread to the end of heaven and of earth."

The meaning of the expression áva syúmeva cinvati is obscure. The epithet svásarasya pátnī is appropriate to Uṣas, because she is the deity that presides over the sandhyā time.

- 5, 62, 2: tát sú vām mitrāvaruņā mahitvám irmā tasthúşīr áhabhir duduhre | vísvāḥ pinvathaḥ svásarasya dhénā ánu vām ékah pavír ā vavarta ||
- "This, O Mitra and Varuṇa, is your greatness, (namely), that those who are here were milked day by day. You make all the prayers ooze (i.e., yield favourable results) at sandhyā time; the felly alone revolved after you."

The signification of  $irm\dot{a}$  in pāda b is obscure. Regarding pāda c compare 5,71,12: viśvasya hi pracetasā váruņa mitra rājathaḥ | īśānā pipyatam dhiyaḥ; 9,19,2: yuvám hi stháh svarpatī indras ca soma gópatī | īśānā pipyatam dhiyaḥ; 10, 64, 12: tām (dhiyam) pīpayata páyaseva dhenúm.

6, 68, 10: indrāvaruņā sutapāv imám sutám sómam pibatam mádyam dhṛtavratā | yuvó rátho adhvarám devávītaye práti svásaram úpa yāti pītáye ||

- "O Indra and Varuṇa who uphold the ordinances, drink, ye Soma-drinkers, this exhilarating Soma-juice that has been pressed. Your chariot comes towards evening to the sacrifice for the meal of the gods, that you may drink." This verse is one of those that are prescribed to be recited in the course of the third or evening savana (see As. Sr. Sūtra, 5, 5, 19); and hence it is likely that svásara is used here in the sense of 'evening.'
  - 8, 88, 1: tám vo dasmám rtīsáham vásor mandānám ándhasaḥ | abhí vatsám ná svásaresu dhenáva indram gīrbhír navāmahe ||
- "We cry with our hymns for mighty Indra, the conqueror in battles, who takes delight in the bright food (i.e., the Soma juice), as milch-cows do for their calves in the evenings."
  - 8, 99, 1: tvám idá hyó náró' pī pyan vajrin bhúrṇayaḥ | sá indra stómavāhasām ihá śrudhy úpa svásaram á gahi ||
- "The zealous men (i.e., the priests), O Vajra-bearer, have made thee drink now and yesterday. Hear now, O Indra, the (priests) who bring forward (thy) praises; come towards the evening."
  - 9, 94, 2: dvitā vyūrņvánn amṛtasya dhāma svarvide bhúvanāni prathanta | dhiyah pinvānāh svásare ná gāva ṛtāyántīr abhi vāvaśra indum ||
- "Opening again widely the abode of immortality, they spread the worlds for the finding of the sun. Oozing milk like cows in the evenings, the holy hymns lowed for Soma."
- AV. 7, 23, 2: bradhnáh samícir usásah sám airayan | arepásah sácetasah svásare manyumáttamās cité góh ||

The import of this verse is obscure. I translate, following Whitney: "The bright one, sending out in sandhyā time the beautiful dawns, faultless, like-minded, most furious, in the gathering of the cow."

Šata. Br. 4, 3, 5, 20: ādityebhyaḥ . . . . maha svasarasya patibhyaḥ |

"For the Ādityas who are the lords (i.e., presiding deities) of the advanced (i.e., the latest or third) sandhyā time." maha svasarasya means the 'advanced svasara' or 'third svasara'; compare the similar use of mahā-in mahārātra. With regard to the third savana, compare Ch. Up. 2, 34, 1: ādityānām ca viśveṣām ca devānām tṛtīyasavanam (cited above), according to which this savana belongs to the Ādityas and Viśvedevas; compare also Sata. Br. 4, 3, 5, 1: ādityānām tṛtīya-savanam. The Ādityas are therefore here represented as presiding over the third savana, that is, over the third svasara.

§ 6 aratí

The word arati which I have above (p. 92) interpreted as 'bright' occurs in about thirty RV verses and has been differently explained by exegetists. Sāyaṇa has explained it variously as svāmin or īśvara (1, 59, 2; 1, 128, 6; 1, 128, 8; 2, 4, 2; 2, 2, 3; 6, 15, 4; 7, 10, 3; etc.); vyāpta, vistrta (2, 2, 2; 2, 2, 3); prāpa-vitr (1, 58, 7); gantr or abhigantr (6, 3, 5; 6, 7, 1; etc.) and aprīti or aramaṇa (3, 17, 4; 4, 38, 4). Uvaṭa and Mahīdhara have interpreted the word as alamati, paryāptamati in VS. 7, 24 and 15, 32; and the latter has besides suggested the meanings pūrakam, ratir uparatis tadrahītam and ratir uparamas tadrahītam, sadodyamayutam ity arthaḥ for the word aratim. Simī-larly, Bhattabhāskara too has paraphrased arati by uparatirahita in his commentary on Tait. Br. 2, 5, 4, 4, as does also Sāyaṇa in ibid., 2, 8, 2, 4.

Roth (in PW) has interpreted the word as Diener, Gehülfe, Verwalter, Ordner, administer while Grassmann, differing from him, has said that the word means 'der das Opfer zurichtet, zu Stande bringt.' Oldenberg, in SBE, 45, has explained the word as 'steward.' Bergaigne (Quarante Hymns, V) translates it as 'ministre' and Ludwig and Griffiths as 'messenger.' Geldner, in his Glossar gives the meaning 'Herr' (which Hillebrandt also approves of; Licder des RV, p. 22), but in his Uebersetzung, has translated the word as 'Lenker,' and 'Rosselenker.' He has also added the following explanatory note (p. 68): "Agni ist der arati der Götter (2, 4, 2), von Himmel und Erde (1, 59, 2; 2, 2, 3; 6, 49, 2; 10, 3, 7), des himmels (2, 2, 2; 10, 3, 2), der Erde (6, 7, 1). In Verbindung mit den Vasu's auch 10, 3, 2; arati ursprünglich wohl der Rosse- und Wagenlenker (der 'hyppelata') and dann der Lenker überhaupt. Für die Bedeutung 'Rosselenker' spricht bes. 4, 38, 4; 8, 19, 1 (deváso devám aratím dadhanvire) und 2, 4, 2 (aratír jīrāśvah). Als Bezeichnung des Agni verbindet sich ar. gern mit dūtá und havyavāh (3, 17, 4; 6, 15, 4; 7, 10, 3; 8, 19, 21; 10, 46, 4)."

None of these interpretations fits into the context in, for instance, 6, 3, 5: citrádhrajatir aratír yó aktór vér ná druşádvā raghupátmajamhāh; and hence it is my belief that none of them is correct.

The terms isvara (Herr), vyāpta, ganti, gopāh, etc., refer to characteristics that are common to almost all RV deities and can be used as epithets of all such deities, while in fact, the word arati is used of Agni only. This in itself is enough to raise doubts in my mind as to whether arati means isvara, (Herr), vyāpta, or ganti, etc. On the other hand, I believe that the correct signification of the word arati is, in all probability, one that has specific reference to Agni, that in fact, arati means 'he who shines; the bright one; sukra; pāvaka.' I give here below the reasons for such belief.

- I. The verse 10, 45, 7: uśik pāvakó aratih sumedhá mártesv agnir amito ni dhāyi is in most respects parallel to the verse 1, 60, 4; uśik pāvakó vásur mánuṣāṇām váreṇyo hótā dhāyi vikṣú; and it seems therefore (since aratih cannot mean váreṇyah¹ and sumedháh cannot mean vásuḥ) that aratih is equivalent to vásuḥ or bright.
- II. Again, five out of the thirty passages in which the word arati occurs, namely 1, 59, 2 (arati ródasyoh); 2, 2, 3 (divás prthivyór aratim ny èrire); 6, 49, 2 (ádrptakratum aratim yuvatyóh); 7, 5, 1 (divó aratáye prthivyáh); and 10, 3, 7 (divás-prthivyór aratír yuvatyóh) say that Agni is the arati of Heaven and Earth. Now what exactly is the relation between Agni on the one hand, and Heaven and Earth on the other, that is referred to by the word aratí in these passages? An examination of the RV hymns addressed to Agni discloses that the following relations are mentioned therein:
  - 1. Agni is the generator of Heaven and Earth (1, 96, 4: višām gopā janitā ródasyoh).
  - 2. He is the son of Heaven and Earth (3, 3, 2: sá mātrór abhavat putrá idyaḥ; cf. also 10, 1, 7; 10, 140, 2).
  - 3. He 'glorified' his parents, Heaven and Earth, when he was born (3, 3, 11: ubhā pitārā mahāyann ajāyatāgnīr dyāvāpṛthivī).
  - 4. He 'renovated' his parents (mātarā), i.e., Heaven and Earth, again and again (3, 5, 7: púnaḥ-punar mātárā návyasī kaḥ).

- 5. He 'saw' Heaven and Earth (3, 26, 8: ad id dyavāpṛthivi pary apasyat).
- 6. He follows, i.e., is like to, Heaven and Earth in point of pṛkṣa or strength (2, 1, 15: pṛkṣó yád átra mahinā ví te bhúvad ánu dyāvāpṛthivī ródasī ubhé).
- 7. He supported Heaven and Earth (6, 8, 3: vy àstabhnād ródasī mitró ádbhutah.)
- 8. He is prayed to make Heaven and Earth well-inclined (2, 2, 7: prācī dyāvāpṛthɪvī bráhmaṇā kṛdhi).
- 9. He moves in Heaven and Earth as dūta 3, 3, 2,); antár dūtó ródasī dasmá īyate; cp. also 4, 7, 8; 7, 2, 3).
- 10. He enters into Heaven and Earth (10, 80, 2: agnir mahi ródasi á vivesa; see also 3, 3, 4; 3, 7, 4; 3, 61, 7) or moves in them (10, 80, 1: agni ródasi vi carat smamañján), adorning them.
- 11. He extends Heaven and Earth with his light (6, 1, 11: å ) ås tatåntha ródasī vi bhāsā; see also 10, 1, 7; 5, 1, 7; 6, 4, 6; 7, 5, 4; 10, 88, 3).
- 12. He brings Heaven and Earth to the sacrifice and offers oblations to them (6, 16, 24: váso yakṣīhá ródasī and 3, 7, 9: mahó devān ródasī éhá vakṣi; see also 6, 12, 1; 6, 11, 4; 6, 15, 15; 3, 15, 5; 10, 11, 9); he offers oblations to them as hotr (3, 17, 2: yáthā 'yajo hotrám agne prthivyā yáthā divó jātavedas cikitvān | evánena havíṣā yakṣi devān) or invokes them as hotr (7, 7, 3: hótā | ā mātárā visvávāre huvānáh).
- 13. He fills Heaven and Earth with light (6, 48, 6; ā yāḥ papraú bhānúnā ródasī ubhé; see also

- 1, 69, 1; 1, 73, 8; 3, 2, 7; 3, 3, 10; 3, 6, 2; 7, 13, 2; 10, 140, 2).
- 14. He surpasses Heaven and Earth in greatness (3, 6, 2; ródasī.. utá prá rikthā ádha nú prayajyo).
- 15. He rolls up Heaven and Earth like two skins (6, 8, 3: ví cármaṇīva dhiṣáṇe avartayat).
- 16. He roars at Heaven and Earth (10, 8, 1: å ródasī vrṣabhó roravīti).
- 17. He gladdens Heaven and Earth with his friendship (10, 88, 2: tásya deváh prthiví dyaúr utápó 'ranayann ósadhīh sakhyé asya).
- 18. He is known to Heaven and Earth (10, 88, 8: tám dyaúr veda tám prthivi tám āpah).
- 19. He sits in the lap of Heaven and Earth (7, 6, 6: vaisvānaró váram ā ródasyor āgníḥ sasāda pitrór upástham).
- 20. He is the ruler of Heaven and Earth (7, 6, 2; hinvánti sám rājyám ródasyoh).
- 21. He shines upon or illumines Heaven and Earth (3, 15, 3: agnir dyāvāprthivī viśvajanyé â bhāti devī amītu ámūrah; see also 1, 143, 2; 3, 2, 2; 1, 96, 5; 2, 2, 5; 10, 45, 4; 7, 12, 1; 6, 3, 7).

The word arati, in all probability, refers to one of these twenty-one kinds of relations, and that being so, it becomes obvious that the first-mentioned twenty cannot be denoted by it (for none of these fits into the context in the other passages where the word arati occurs), and that it can refer to the twenty-first only.

aratí thus means 'one who shines or illumines, bright, brilliant, radiant.' It is therefore derived from the same root r or ar 'to shine' (and not from r or ar 'to go' as Sāyaṇa has suggested) as the words aruṇá and aruṣá and is practically synonymous with these two words and also with pāvaká, śukrá, śúci, vibhāvan, rukmá, etc., all which words mean 'bright, resplendent, radiant,' and are, like the word aratí, used most often as epithets of Agni or Sūrya.

I shall now show that this meaning 'bright, brilliant, radiant' suits the context in all the verses in which arati occurs. Of these 2, 2, 2: abhi tvā náktīr uṣáso vavāśiré 'gne vatsám ná svásareṣu dhenávaḥ divá ivéd aratir mānuṣā yugā kṣápo bhāsi puruvāra samyátaḥ has already been explained above (p. 92).

- 1, 59, 2: mūrdhā divó nābhir ag níḥ pṛthivyā áthābhavad aratī ródasyoḥ |
  tóm tvā devāso 'janayanta devám
  vaísvānara jyótir íd āryāya ||
- "The head of Heaven and the navel of Earth, Agni became the illuminator of (i.e., shone upon) Heaven and Earth. The gods have engendered thee, the god, as light for the Ārya, O Vaiśvānara."

Regarding the expression arati ródasyoh, compare 1, 143, 2: prá dyávā śocih pṛthivi arocayat; 10, 45, 4: á ródasī bhānúnā bhāty antáh; 1, 96, 5: dyávā kṣāmā rukmó antár ví bhāti and other similar verses in which Agni is said to have illuminated Heaven and Earth with his light.

- 2, 2, 3: tám devá budhné rájasah sudámsasam divásprthivyór aratím ny èrire | rátham iva védyam sukrásocisam agním mitrám ná ksitísu prasámsyam ||
- "The gods set up at the bottom of space (i.e., on the earth) him, Agni, with bright light, who illuminates (i.e., shines upon) Heaven and Earth, who wins (the prize) like a chariot, who is, like a friend, worthy of being praised."
  - 6, 7, 1: mūrdhānam divó aratim pṛthivyā vaisvānarám ṛtá á jātám agnim | kavim samrājam átithim jánānām āsánn ā pātram janayanta devāḥ ||

"The gods have engendered Agni Vaiśvānara, born in rta, the head of Heaven, the illuminator of Earth, wise, sovereign, the guest of men, the drinking-vessel (of the gods)."

Regarding the expression āsán pātram in d, compare the nivid (T.B. 3, 5, 3, 1) āspātram juhūr devānām | camasó devapānaḥ addressed to Agni.

- 6, 49, 2: visó-visa idyam adhvarésv ádrptakratum aratím yuvatyóh | diváh sísum sáhasah sünúm agním yajñásya ketúm arusám yájadhyai ||
- "Offer worship to Agni, who is worthy of adoration by all peoples in sacrifices, who is not proud of his insight, who is the illuminator of the two youthful women (i.e., of Heaven and Earth), the child of Heaven, the son of strength, the beacon of the sacrifice, bright."
  - 7, 5, 1: prágnáye taváse bharadhvam
    gíram divó aratáye pṛthivyāḥ |
    yó vísveṣām amṛtānām upásthe
    vaisvānaró vāvṛdhé jāgṛvádbhih ||
- "Proffer the hymn to the strong Agni, illuminator of Heaven and Earth, who, (as) Vaiśvānara, was magnified in the lap of all the immortals by the watchful (priests)."
  - 10, 3, 7: sá á vakşi máhi na á ca satsi
    divásprthivyór aratír yuvatyóh |
    agníh sutúkah sutúkebhir ásvai

- "The illuminator of the two youthful women, (namely) Heaven and Earth, thou carriest much to us and sittest (on our barhis). May the swift impetuous Agni come here with swift impetuous horses,"
  - 1, 58, 7: hótāram saptá juhvò yájiṣṭham yám vāgháto vṛṇáte adhvaréṣu | agním víśveṣām aratim vásūnām saparyāmi práyasā yāmi rátnam ||

"I worship with good cheer, and pray for wealth (to), Agni brilliant amongst the Vasus, the hotr who sacrifices best with seven ladles (or, tongues), whom the priests choose in the rites (as hotr)."

The construction of juhvò in pāda a is not clear. Oldenberg (SBE, 46, p. 46) regards saptá juhváh as nominative plural and as the subject of vrnáte in pāda b, and translates 'whom the seven ladles (of the priests), the worshippers choose as the hotr'; see also his RV. Noten (I, p. 58). So does Geldner also in his RV. Ucber. On the other hand, Pischel, in Ved. Stud. 2, 113, has compared with padas ab here 10, 6, 4: mandró hóta sá juhvà vájisthah and says, 'Der Accusativ saptá juhvàh hängt ab von vájistham (Gaedicke, Accusativ im Veda p. 185)', with which opinion I am inclined to agree. Compare also in this connection 4, 7, 5: tâm īm hótāram ānusák cikitvámsam ní sedire | ranvám pavakášocisam vájistham saptá dhámabhih whose pādas cd convey the same meaning as the expressions aratim vásūnām and juhvò vájistham in pādas ac above.

- 10, 3, 2: kṛṣṇām yád énīm abhí várpasā bhúj janáyan yóṣām bṛhatáḥ pitúr jám | ūrdhvám bhānúm súryasya stabhäyán divó vásubhir aratír ví bhāti ||
- "When he surpassed with his splendour the Dark and the White, bringing forth the woman born of the great father and holding firm the ray, raised high, of the sun, the brilliant one (sc. Agni) shines with the bright ones of Heaven." The import of this verse is obscure. According to Sāyaṇa, the Dark one is the Night, the great father, the sun, and the woman born of him, Usas.
  - 7, 10, 3: ácchā gíro matáyo devayántir agním yanti dráviņam bhíkṣamāṇāḥ | susamdṛśam suprátīkam sváñcam havyavāham aratím mānuṣāṇām ||

"The hymns and thoughts, pious, go begging for wealth to Agni, handsome, of beautiful countenance, swift carrier of offerings, who shines on men."

- 1, 128, 8: agním hótāram iļate vásudhitim priyám cétiṣṭham aratím ny èrire havyavāham ny èrire | visvāyum visvávedasam hótāram yajatám kavím | devāso raņvám ávase vasūyávo gīrbhí ranvám vasūyávaḥ ||
- "Agni, the hotr, the storehouse of wealth, do they magnify; him who is dear, preeminent and brilliant, did they set up; the carrier of offerings, the hotr, worshipful, wise, vivifier of all and possessor of all wealth, joy-bringing, did the gods wishing for wealth, set up, for protection; wishing for wealth, with hymns, (did they set up) the joy-bringing (Agni)."
  - 7, 16, 1: ená vo agním námasorjó nápātam á huve | priyám cétiṣṭham aratím svadhvarám vísvasya dūtám amrtam ||
- "With this adoration (i.e., hymn) do I invoke Agni the son of strength, dear, pre-eminent, immortal, the messenger of all, the accomplisher of sacrifices."
- 1, 128, 6: vísvo víhāyā aratír vásur dadhe háste dákṣiṇe taráṇir ná sisrathac chravasyáyā ná sisrathat | vísvasmā íd iṣudhyaté devatrā havyám óhiṣe | vísvasmā ít sukṛte vāram ṛṇvaty agnír dvārā vy ṛṇvati ||
- "All grown out, the brilliant swift-moving one held wealth in his right hand, not letting it loose; desirous of glory, he has not let loose. For every one who desires it, thou carriest the offerings to the gods. For every righteous one, he procures his wish, (for him) Agni opens wide both folds of the door."

The meaning of whāyāḥ in pāda a is not certain; Geldner, whom I have followed, translates it (RV. Ueber. p. 162) as 'ausgewachsen,' Oldenberg (SBE. 46, p. 138) as 'far-reaching,' while Sāyaṇa, following the author of the Nighaṇṭu (3. 3) has explained it as mahān.

In pāda a, vásur in vásur dadhe seems clearly to be in the nominative case and in coordination with aratih: and Geldner has accordingly translated (l.c.) padas ab as 'Ganz ausgewachsen (wird er) der Wagenlenker, hält der Gott (die Güter) in seiner rechten Hand,' observing that. before dadhe the word vásu is to be supplied as shown by 9, 18, 4 and that this is an instance of haplology. On the other hand, Oldenberg (op. cit. p. 140), referring to the same 9, 18, 4 (a vó vísvani várya vásuni hástayor dadhé) proposes to read pāda a as vísvā vihāyā aratir vásū dadhe. Now I agree with Oldenberg that the word vásur should not be looked upon as a nominative and as an epithet of Agni, but that it denotes 'wealth'; but I am opposed to any emendation of the text. Compare in this connection 1, 110, 7: rbhúr ná indrah sávasā náviyān rbhúr vājebhir vásubhir vásur dadíh; 8, 24, 3: sá na stávāna á bhara rayim citrásravastamam | nircké cid yó harivo vásur dadíh; 8, 46, 15. dadi réknas tanzè dadir vásu dadir vájesu puruhūta vājinam; 8, 21, 17: indro vā ghéd iyan maghám sárasvatī vā subbhágā dadir vásu; and 4, 24, 1: kā sustutíh sávasah sūnúm índram arväcinám rádhasa á vavartat | dadir hi vīro grnate vasūni where the expression vásur dadíh in the first two verses seems plainly to be equivalent to the expression dadir vásu in the third and fourth and to dadir vásūni in the fifth.

I conceive that vásur is similarly equivalent to vásu (vásūni) in pāda a also above 2 and that vásur dadhe=dadhe

- vásūni. Regarding viśvah, compare 4, 1, 1: viśvam ádevam janata prácetasam where too viśva is used as an epithet of Agni.
  - 2, 4, 2: imám vidhánto apám sadhásthe dvitá dadhur bhí gavo viksv àyóh | esú vísvāny abhy àstu bhúmā devánām agnír aratír jīrásvuḥ ||
- "Worshipping him in the abode of the waters, the Bhrgus have again established him among the clans of  $\overline{A}$ yu. May he surpass all worlds, Agni, who shines on the gods, who has swift horses." With regard to devānām aratih in pāda d, compare 8, 60, 15: ād id devēṣu rājasi addressed to Agni.
  - 3, 17, 4: agním sudītím sudṛśam gṛṇánto namasyāmas tvéḍyam jātavcdaḥ | tvām dūtám aratím havyavāham devā akṛṇvann amṛ́tasya nābhim ||
- "Praising Agni, handsome, of fine splendour, we adore, O Jātavedas, thee that deservest to be magnified. Thee that art brilliant, the gods have made the messenger, the carrier of offerings, the navel of immortality."
  - 4, 1, 1: tvām hy àgne sádam it samanyávo devāso devám aratim ny èrirá
    iti krátvā nyeriré |
    ámartyam yajata mártyesv ā devám ādevam janata prácetasam
    visvam ādevam janata prácetasam |
- "O Agni, thee indeed, the brilliant God, have the gods with one mind set up; they have set (thee) up with this aim: 'adore the immortal among the mortals; engender the wise god who is godly, engender the wholly wise one who is godly.'"
  - 4, 2, 1: yó mártyeşv améta rtávā

    devó devéşv aratír nidháyi |

    hótā yájiştho mahná sucádhyai

    havyaír agnír mánuşa īrayádhyai ||

"The brilliant god, pious, immortal, who was established as the best-sacrificing hoter among gods and mortals, may he shine greatly; may (he) Agni go (unto the gods) with the offerings of men." I construe mártycsu, devésu and hótā yájiṣṭhaḥ together in the relative clause; compare 6, 1, 13: agnír hótā grhápatiḥ sá rājā viśvā vcda jánimā jātávedāḥ | devānām utá yó mártyānām yájiṣṭhaḥ where Agni is said to be the best-sacrificing (priest) among gods and mortals, and 4, 7, 1: ayám ihá prathamó dhāyi dhātṛbhir hótā yájiṣṭhaḥ and other similar verses in which it is said that Agni was established as the 'best-sacrificing hote." It is my belief that these two ideas have been combined together by the poet in the relative clause of the above verse.

The words gádhyā, sánutaraḥ, and jīka and the expression vidáthā nicíkyat are obscure, and it is hence difficult to make out the import of this verse which describes the running of the horse Dadhikrā. I translate mechanically: "Who, seizing great (booty) in battles, moves as the better winner (of the prize) when he goes towards the cows, with his good points apparent, understanding assemblies, surpassing the brilliant one (Agni?), more than Āyu was able to obtain".

5, 2, 1: kumārám mātā yuvatíh sámubdham gúhā bibharti ná dadāti pitré ¦ ánīkam asya ná mináj jánāsaḥ puráḥ paśyanti níhitam arataú ||

The import of this verse, as also of several other verses of this hymn, is obscure; see SBE. 46, p. 368 and RV. Noten I, 312. I translate tentatively:

"The young mother carries hidden the bound son; she does not give him to the father. The people see his not changing countenance (?) before them, placed in the radiant (fire) ".

- 6, 3, 5: sá id ásteva práti dhād asişyáñ chísīta téjó 'yaso ná dhárām | citrádhrajatir aratír yó aktór
  vér ná druşádvā raghupátmajamhāḥ ||
- "He [Agni] has made himself ready like a shooter going to shoot and sharpened his flames like the edge of iron, (he) of marvellous speed, who shines at night and who speeds swiftly like a bird going to sit on a tree (i.e., going to its nest)."
  - 6, 12, 3: téjişthā yásyāratír vanerát todó ádhvan ná vṛdhasānó adyaut | adroghó ná dravitá cetati tmánn ámartyo 'vartrá óṣadhiṣu ||

"The bright one, ruling over the forest, whose (splendour) is most brilliant, shone with increasing brightness like the sun in his path; beneficent, immortal, unchecked by plants he shows himself preeminent like a swift horse".

The construction of the words téjiṣṭhā yásyāratír vancrāṭ in pāda a is difficult. Ludwig has suggested that the proper reading here is amatir, not aratir, and Grassmann, that one should read tejiṣṭhayā yaḥ instead of tejiṣṭhā yasya, a suggestion that Oldenberg thinks (RV. Noten) is perhaps correct. Oldenberg has besides observed (l. c.) that 1, 127, 4 and 1, 129, 5 point to the reading araṇi instead of arati, and also that it is possible to construe the passage without emendation as 'dessen (Glut) die schärfste ist, der arati,' though such interpretation is very artificial. He therefore proposes to interpret the passage as 'he whose arati is most sharp' without however saying what the meaning of arati is.

Now the verses 1, 127, 4 and 1, 129, 5 referred to in this connection by Oldenberg are obscure and it is difficult to find out what these verses themselves mean.

And, moreover, in the verse 10, 61, 20: ádhāsu mandró aratír vibhāvāva syati dvivartanír vaneṣāṭ, the word vaneṣāṭ 'victorious in the forest,' which is almost synonymous with the word vanerāṭ ('ruling over the forest') here, is clearly coordinate with aratíḥ and vibhāvā which makes it probable that the word vanerāṭ too here is coordinate with aratiḥ and refers to Agni. I therefore supply here the word ruc³ (fem.;=bhānu, splendour) after tejiṣṭhā on the analogy of 10, 3, 5: téjiṣṭhaih krīṭumádbhir várṣiṣṭhebhir bhānúbhiḥ and translate, 'whose (splendour) is most brilliant, the bright one, ruling over the forest, . . '

In pāda c, I regard ná dravitá only as forming the upamāna and look upon adrogha (=not injuring; i.e., favourable, beneficent) as an epithet of Agni who is the deity of this verse. Compare the epithet adrúh that is applied to Agni in 6, 15, 7: vípram hótāram puruvāram adrúham kavim sumnaír īmahe jātávedasam; 6, 5, 1: huvé vaḥ sūnúm sáhaso yúvānam ádroghavācam matíbhir yáviṣṭham ¦ yá ínvati dráviṇāni prácetā viśvávārāṇi puruvāro adhrúk and other verses.

dravitā, runner, seems to donote race-horse; compare the word atya. Regarding the expression ná dravitā... avartrá óṣadhiṣu, compare 6, 3, 4: dravír ná drāva-yasi 4 dāru dhákṣat 'Consuming the wood, thou runnest like a courser' addressed to Agni. Regarding also the sentence ná dravitā cetati tmán, compare 10, 176, 3; rátho ná yór abhívṛto ghṛṇivān cetati tmánā that is likewise addressed to Agni.

vípram ná dyuksávacasam suvrktíbhir havyaváham aratím devám rñjase ||

"I adorn with well-cut (i.e, well-fashioned) hymns your shining guest, the heaven-man, Agni, hotr of men, accomplisher of sacrifices, whose speech like that of an inspired seer is bright, the carrier of offerings, the brilliant god". Regarding the expression suvyktibhir yñjase, compare Geldner in Ved. St. 3, p. 32f.

6, 67, 8: tā jihvāyā súdam éd ám sumedhā ā yúd vām satyó aratír rté bhūt | tád vām mahitvám ghrtānnāv astu yuvám dāsúṣe ví cayiṣṭam ámhaḥ ||

The import of pādas ab is obscure. I translate, following Oldenberg (RV. Noten I, 413); "The wise one [sc. Agni] (brings) here the two (sc. Mitra and Varuṇa) at all times (and offers food) with his tongue, when (he), the powerful brilliant one, is present at the sacrifice offered to you two. May that be your greatness, O ye two whose food is ghee; you remove distress from the offerer (of sacrifices)". Compare with this stanza 3, 57, 5: yā te jihvā mādhumatī sumedhā āgne devēṣūcyāta urūcī | tāyehā visvān āvase yājatrān ā sādaya pāyāyā cā mādhūni ||.

"Praise him, the heaven-man. The gods have run to the brilliant god and made him carry offerings to the gods." I regard óhire in pāda c as being used with the causative sense with the signification 'made him carry'.

8, 19, 21: iļe girā mānurhitam yām devā dūtām aratīm nyerirē | yājiṣṭham havyavāhanam ||

"I magnify with hymn (Agni) the benefactor of men, whom, brilliant, best officiating in sacrifices, the gods set up as messenger and carrier of offerings".

aratí 115

- 10, 3, 1: inó rājann aratíh sámiddho
  raúdro dákṣāya suṣumān adarsi |

- "O king, the chief, radiant, Rudra-like, . . . for skill, being kindled, has been seen. The wise one shines with great splendour, going to the dark one and driving away the bright one". The word susumán in pāda b which I have left untranslated, is obscure; see Oldenberg's RV. Noten II, 200 where several conjectural explanations are given of it. We do not know to whom the vocative rājan in pāda a and the words áviknī and rūšatī in pāda d refer; but it is possible that the latter two words refer to Night and Dawn.
  - 10, 3, 6: asyá šúsmāso dadṛšānápaver jéhamānasya svanayan niyúdbhiḥ | pratnébhir yó rúsadbhir devátamo ví rébhadbhir aratír bhāti víbhvā ||

- 10, 45, 7: ušík pāvakó aratih sumedhá márteşv agnír amŕto ní dhāyi | íyarti dhūmám aruşám bháribhrad úc chukréna šociṣā dyám inakṣan ||
- "The immortal Agni, loving, bright, brilliant, wise, has been established among men. Reaching the sky with bright flame he raises up, carrying, the bright smoke".
- 10, 46, 4: mandrám hótāram ušíjo námobhih práñcam yajñám netáram adhvaránām | višám akṛṇvann aratím pāvakám havyaváham dádhato mánuṣeṣu ||
- "Him, bright and radiant, who leads sacrifices rightly, the ruler of sacrifices, the Usijs, with obeisances, made the dear hotr of the clans, establishing him as the carrier of sacrificial offerings among men".

Āśv. ŚS. 4, 7, 4: samiddho agnir vṛṣaṇā 'ratir divas
tapto gharmo duhyate vām iṣe madhu |
vayam hi vām purutamāso asvinā
havāmahe sadhamādesu kāravah ||

"Kindled, O ye two bulls, is Agni the illuminator of Heaven; the gharma is heated; honey is milked for your food. O ye Aśvins, we singers, most busy, invoke you in these occasions of rejoicing together".

This verse occurs in AV (7, 73, 1), with the readings rathi diváh and purudámāso in a and c, and in Śānkh. ŚS. (5, 10, 8) with the reading rayir divah in a. It is the opinion of Whitney (AV. Trans. p. 437) that the reading of Āśv. ŚS. is ratir divah and that this, as also the reading of Śānkh. ŚS., are corruptions of the AV reading which is correct.

This opinion seems to me to be untenable. The reading vṛṣaṇāratir divaḥ is found in AB. 1, 22, 2 also; and the occurrence of the expressions divó aratiḥ, ródasyor aratiḥ and diváspṛthivyór aratiḥ in RV. 7, 5, 1 and other verses explained above shows that one should read aratir divaḥ in this AB passage also, and that this is the original reading. rathī diváḥ and rayir divaḥ in AV and Sānkh. ŚS. are therefore without doubt corruptions of the reading aratir diváḥ.

The word aratih occurs, further, in RV. 10, 61, 20 which will be explained in the next article.

§ 7 dán

This word dán, about whose interpretation there has been much dispute, occurs in but seven verses of the RV. In six of them it is found at the end of the pāda, preceded by the word pátih in four (1, 149, 1; 153, 4; 10, 99, 6; 105, 2), and by patī and sisuh in one each (1, 120, 6; 10, 61, 20); in the remaining verse (10, 115, 2), it occurs within the pāda.

Sāyaṇa explains the word as  $\bar{s}atr\bar{u}n\ damayati$  in one verse, damayan in another and as  $\bar{a}dad\bar{a}nah$ ,  $dadad\ abhimatam\ prayacchan$ ,  $d\bar{a}t\bar{a}$ ,  $dhan\bar{a}ni\ prayacchan$  and  $yaṣṭ\bar{r}ṇ\bar{a}m\ dhanad\bar{a}t\bar{a}$  in the others. According to him, therefore, there are two words having the form  $d\acute{a}n$ , one derived from the root dam and the other from the root  $d\bar{a}$ .

Similarly, Roth too (in the PW) believes that there are three words of that form:  $d\acute{a}n$  in 10, 61, 20 is, according to him, a verbal form of the root dan, in 10, 115, 2, a shortened form of danta, tooth, and in the other five verses, the genitive of  $d\acute{a}m$ , house. In the latter opinion, he is followed by Bartholomae (Ar. For. 1. 70 ff), Grassmann, and Brugmann (Grundriss 1 § 108, 204, 672).<sup>2</sup>

Pischel criticised this opinion in Ved. St. 2, 93 ff., pointing out that in 1, 120, 6 and 10, 105, 2 addressed respectively to the Aśvins and Indra, the interpretation of dán as 'of the house' hardly fits, since these deities are nowhere in the RV described as 'masters of the house (grhapati)'. He therefore opined that dán denotes 'richtend, bemeisternd' in 10, 105, 2; 99, 6; and 'Ausrichter (des Opfers)' in 10, 115, 2; 1, 153, 4; 149, 1. In 1, 120, 6, dán is, according to him, a verbal form meaning 'herrichtet,' and in 10, 61, 2, too, a verbal form meaning 'ausgerichtet' and having as its subject śiśuh which is slang for 'penis.'

This opinion of Pischel was, in its turn, criticised by Oldenberg (RV. Noten II, 267) who has observed (1) that the expression sisur dán, in 10, 61, 20 is so similar to pátir dán that it is very questionable if it is to be construed in a different manner, and (2) that since sisu is a common epithet of Agni and this verse is referring to Agni, it is not proper to give it an unusual signification. He has therefore interpreted pátir dán as 'Herr des Hauses' in op. cit. II, 315, 336 and thus preferred to follow the lead of Roth and Grassmann. So also do Wackernagel who explains dán as 'des Hauses' (Ai. Gr. I, pp. 196, 258) and Macdonell who explains dán as the genitive of dám-(Ved. Gr. pp. 37, 60; see also p. 218 and n. 5 there). Similarly, Geldner too translates pátir dán and patī dán in 1, 140, 1; 153, 1; 120, 6 as 'Hausgebieter', 'Herr dieses Hauses' and 'Hausmeister' in his RV. Ueber.

Now, the criticisms urged by Pischel against the interpretation proposed by Roth, and by Oldenberg<sup>3</sup> against that proposed by Pischel, are, it seems to me, quite valid. At the same time, it also seems to be beyond dispute that dán in the combination pátir dán and sísur dán, is the genitive form of a word like dans or dains, as observed by Wackernagel (l. c.). This dans or dains cannot, for the reasons mentioned above, signify 'house'; and I therefore believe that it is identical with the word of that form which is cognate with the words dáinsas dáinsanā, etc, and is derived from the root dains 'to be strong'. This is the opinion of Pischel also, except that he thinks that the root dains signifies 'zu richten'. Compare his observations in l. c., p. 103: "Es ergiebt sich also, dass dán zu dains gehört, dessen Grund-

There are other objections, too, that can be urged against Pischel's interpretation. His separation of pátih and dán (in his opinion, both are nominatives) in the combination pátir dán cannot be correct. For, except in the cases pointed out by Grassmann (s. v. pati 8, 9), the word pati by itself (i.e., when not used in association with genitives like vājasya, vasunah, subhah, savasah etc.) is never used in the RV as an epithet of gods. Again, Pischel's interpretations of 10, 99, 6 and 10, 115, 2 seem to be forced and indicate that his explanation of the word dán is not correct.

bedeutung 'richten' ist. . . Zur gleichen Wurzel gehören damsána, damsánā, dámsas 'Meisterschaft', 'Macht', damsánāvant 'mächtig', purudámsa, purudámsas, sudámsas 'sehr mächtig', dámsistha 'sehr mächtig', dámsu 'mächtig' im Sinne von 'gewaltig', 'weit', 'hoch' u. dgl., dámsujūta 'in gewaltiger Eile' (so auch Ved. Stud. 1, 220 zu lesen; sonst weiss ich auch heut keine bessere Erklärung von 1, 122, 10), dasmá und dasrá 'mächtig', 'Meister'."

Compare also his observations on pp. 104-5 in continuation of the above.

In other words, dán in the combination sisur dán and pátir dán, is the genitive form of dams which, like tavás and sáhas, signifies 'strong, powerful, great' and also 'strength, power greatness.' The epithet sisur dán, in 10, 61, 20 addressed to Agni, thus means 'child of strength' and is synonymous with the epithets sahasah sūnu and sahasas putra that are applied to him in many verses, (see Grassmann, s. v. sahas); and the epithet pátir dán used in 10, 99, 6 and 10, 105, 2 that are both addressed to Indra is similarly synonymous with the epithet savasas pati that is applied to him in many verses (see Grassmann, s. v. savas).

I shall now show that this meaning suits the context in all the verses in which the word  $d\acute{a}n$  occurs.

10,105,2: hárī yásya suyújā vívratā vér árvantā 'nu sépā | ubhā raji ná kesínā pátir dán ||

The construction of this verse is difficult. Grassmann has translated it as "Du, dessen goldfarbenes Rossepaar schön angeschirrt, auf beiden Seiten vorwärts strebt, laufend längs den beiden Schwänzen des Vogels wie ein Hausherr zwischen den beiden behaarten Linien", Ludwig as "Des falbenpaar leicht angespannt verschiedenen seiten zustrebend anrief der vogel die renner, zwei Raji's gleich die mähnigen, der ist herr zu geben" and Pischel (l. c. p. 95) as "Dessen störrige Falben fromm

I translate as follows: "Whose two bay horses are self-yoking, difficult of control, (these) two swift runners, having like two rajis (long) hair in the tails, the lord of strength drives."

véh=drives, sets in motion; compare 1, 63, 2: ā vád dhárī indra vívratā vér ā te vájram jaritā bāhvór dhāt; 1, 177, 2: yé te vṛṣaṇo vṛṣabhasa indra brahmavújo vŕsarathāso átvāh | tān á tistha; and 10, 105, 5: ádhi vás tasthaú késavantā, suvújā = svavujā, self-voking; see p. 45 above. Compare also the epithets brahmayújā and vacoyujā 5 applied to Indra's horses in the following verses, 8, 1, 24: á tvā sahásram á satám yuktá ráthe hiranyáye | brahmayújo háraya indra kcsíno váhantu sómapītaye; 8, 17, 2: ā tvā brahmayújā hárī váhatām indra keśinā; 8, 45, 39: ā ta etā vacoyújā hárī grbhne sumádrathā; 8, 98, 9: yunjánti hárī işirásya gātháyorau rátha urúyuge indraváhā vacoyújā. vívratā=difficult to control, unruly, refractory, 'widerspenstig' (Roth in PW; Geldner, RV. Ueber., 1, 63, 2), and not 'nach verschiedenen Seiten strebend' (Grassmann). ánu śépā= in the two tails; compare 10, 97, 19: yā ósadhīh sómarājñīr vişthitāh prthivim ánu 'the plants, whose king is Soma, that are spread in the earth'; 8, 10, 6: yád antárikse pátathah purubhujā vád vemé ródasī ánu 'whether ye fly in the atmosphere (antarikşa), O ye two that possess much, or in these two worlds, namely, Heaven and Earth"; 1, 80, 1: árcann ánu svarájyam 'may they sing in thy own sovereignty'.

<sup>5</sup> It seems to me now that it is preferable to interpret  $vacoy \hat{u}j\bar{a}$  and  $manoy \hat{u}j\bar{a}$   $\acute{a}\acute{s}v\bar{a}$  as 'the two horses that are yoked by the hymn or praise recited by the priest'; that is, 'the two horses that yoke themselves to the chariot as soon as the priest recites hymns invoking and praising the deities that are their masters' instead of as 'the two horses that yoke themselves to the chariot as soon as their master thinks of setting forth or expresses in words his intention to set forth' (see p. 46 above and n. 7 there). Compare in this connection 3, 35, 4:  $br\acute{a}hman\bar{a}$  te  $brahmay \acute{u}j\bar{a}$   $yunajmi h\acute{a}r\bar{i}$   $s\acute{a}kh\bar{a}y\bar{a}$   $sadham\acute{a}da$   $a\acute{s}\acute{u}$  and 7, 36, 4:  $gir\acute{a}$   $y\acute{a}$  et $\acute{a}$   $yun\acute{a}jad$   $dh\acute{a}r\bar{i}$  ta  $\acute{i}ndra$   $priy\acute{a}$   $sur\acute{a}th\bar{a}$   $\acute{s}ara$   $dh\bar{a}y\acute{u}$ .

The meaning of raji is unknown. Grassmann suggests that it denotes an animal like an antelope or buffalo; and it is clear from the above comparison that it has very long hair. Perhaps, it denotes the camara-mṛga or Tibetan yak which has long silken hair all over the body. With regard to pāda c, compare 8, 1, 25: å tvā ráthe hiraṇyáye hárī mayūraśepyā | sitipṛṣṭhā vahatām "O Indra, may the two steeds with white backs and tails as long as those of the peacock carry thee in the golden chariot."

Or, should one interpret ánu śépā as 'proceeding from, i.e., beginning with, the two tails'? In this case, the two steeds of Indra would have long hair all over the body like the above-mentioned yak. Compare 3, 45, 1: ā mandrair indra háribhir yāhi mayūraromabhih 'come, O Indra, with beautiful steeds that have on their bodies hair (long) like the peacock ('s tail).' The sāmānyadharma in the comparison contained in the epithets mayūraśepyā and mayūraromabhih, as in the comparisons contained in many passages of later classical writers, is length. Compare, for instance, Subhāṣitaratnabhāṇḍāgāra, pp 269 f.: asyā manoharākāra-kabarī-bhāra-nirjitāh | lajjayeva vane vāsam cakruś camara-barhiṇaḥ; 7 asyāḥ sapakṣaika-vidhoḥ kacaughaḥ sthāne mukhasyopari vāsam āpa | pakṣastha-tāvad-bahu-candrako 'pi kalāpinām yena jitaḥ

Oldenberg (op. cit. II, 325) suggests  $^{6}$  with hesitation that  $\acute{a}nu$   $\acute{s}\acute{e}p\bar{a}$  in b should be emended into  $tanu\acute{s}\acute{e}p\bar{a}$  and refers in support thereof to the observation of Gunther (Beurteilungslehre des Pferdes, p. 298) that 'edle Hengste haben dünneren und kürzeren Penis, gemeine haben längeren und dickeren.' This is not very convincing, and, for my part, I do not feel that there is any need for emendation.

1, 149, 1: maháh sá rāyá éşate pátir dánn iná inásya vásunah padá á | úpa dhrájantam ádrayo vidhánn ít ||

"This lord of strength advances to great wealth, the mighty one in the abode of mighty wealth. May the stones honour him as he speeds near."

This verse is, according to the Sarvānukramaṇi, addressed to Agni; but, as observed by Geldner (RV. Ueber.), his name is not mentioned in the hymn, and the word ádrayaḥ in v. 1 and sargaḥ and śiśrīta in v. 2 seem to point to Soma as the deity. In either case, pátir dán means 'lord of strength.' Compare 5, 6, 9: utó na út pupūryā ukthéṣu śavasas pata iṣam stotṛbhya á bhara and 9, 36, 6: á divás pṛṣṭhám aśvayúr gavyayúḥ soma rohasi | vīrayúḥ śavasas pate in which the epithet śavasas pati is applied to Agni and Soma.

1, 153, 4: utá vām vikşú mádyāsv ándho gāva āpas ca pīpayanta devíh | utó no asyá pūrvyáh pátir dán vītám pātám páyasa usriyāyāh ||

"And in clans with plenty of Soma, the cows and divine waters have made the plant to swell. And of this your cow's milk, drink with relish, O ye (Mıtra and Varuṇa)—(and) first, the lord of strength (Agni)."

mádyāsu vikṣû means 'in clans having plenty of Soma' in the same way as somyāt sádasaḥ in 1, 182, 8 (asmād adyá sádasaḥ somyād ā) means 'from a seat rich in Soma'; see Geldner, RV. Ucber., I, pp. 192, 237. According to Geldner (l.c.), the sense of the verse is: "O ye Mitra and Varuṇa, the Soma juice is ready for your drinking in many houses; do ye however rather drink with relish this cow's milk of ours." As observed by Sāyaṇa, pátir dán, 'lord of strength' in pāda c denotes Agni; see also Pischel, l.c., p. 98.

Pāda c of this verse is obscure. Roth, in the PW, emends śiśuḥ into śiśnaḥ, while Pischel (op. cit., p. 94) believes that śiśuh itself is, like the German 'der Kleine,' slang for śiśna. According to him, pādas cd are parallel to 5, 7, 8: suṣūr asūta mātā krāṇā yád ānaśé bhágam and other similar verses and says that the mother gave birth to Agni immediately after copulation.

This explanation does not seem satisfactory to me (see p. 117 above); and I am inclined to believe that the verse as a whole says that Agni grew up as soon as he was born and consumed the plants, and that it is parallel to 7, 4, 2: sá gṛtso agnis táruṇas cid astu yáto yáviṣṭho ájaniṣṭa mātúh | sám yó vánā yuváte súcidan bhūri cid ánnā sám íd atti sadyáh; 10, 115, 1-2: citrá íc chisos

táruṇasya vakṣátho ná yó mātárāv apy éti dhātave | anūdhā yádi jijanad ádhā ca mi vavákṣa sadyó máhi dūtyàm cáran || agnír ha nāma dhāyi dánn apástamaḥ sám yó vánā yuvátc bhásmanā datā | abhipramúrā juhvā svadhvará inó ná próthamāno yávase vṛṣā and other similar passages. I therefore translate the verse as follows: "Then the dear (Agni), bright, radiant, two-wayed, ruling over the forest, lets himself loose in these (plants), when (he), the child of strength becomes upright like a straight line; the mother soon gave birth to the strong one, the enhancer of happiness."

Pādas d and c, in which it is said that the mother gave birth to the strong one and that the child of strength became upright like a straight line, that is, grew up and set himself into activity, should be read first; and pādas ab, which describe that Agni let himself loose in the plants (and consumed them) should be read thereafter.

āsu in a refers to óṣadhīṣu; compare 6, 12, 3 (explained above on p. 112): téjiṣṭhā yásyāratír vanerāṭ todó ádhvan ná vṛdhasānó adyaut . . avartrá óṣadhīṣu which is in many respects parallel to this. dvivartaníḥ in b refers perhaps to the two paths, upward and forwards, which Agni follows in the forest when consuming plants.

(ārdhvó bhavati) 'becomes upright' in pāda c means 'stands up (does not sit); sets himself into activity; bestirs himself'; compare 4, 4, 5: ārdhvó bhava práti vidhyādhy asmát 'get up (bestir thyself) and shoot them away from us' where the expression ārdhvó bhava is used of Agni in this sense; 5, 1, 2: ārdhvó agníh sumánāh prātár asthāt 'Agni, well-disposed, has put himself into activity in the morning'; 6, 63, 4: ārdhvó vām agnír adhvaréşv asthāt and other passages where the word ut-tiṣṭha (=ārdhvo bhava) is used of Agni. Compare also the expression todó ádhvan ná vṛdhasānáḥ in 6, 12, 3 cited above which too has the same sense.

As already observed above, sisur  $d \acute{a} n = \text{child}$  of strength.

"The strong one, most efficient, named Agni, was established, who consumes woods with pulverising (i. e., destroying) tooth, the accomplisher of sacrifices with (his) growing tongue (i. e., flame), snorting like a great bull in a field of grass."

After dhāyi in a, we have to understand vikṣú, márteṣu, duroṇé, sádane or other similar word; compare 1, 148, 2-3: nítye cin nú yám sádane jagṛ bhré prásastibhir dadhiré yajñíyāsaḥ | prá sú nayanta gṛ bháyanta iṣṭấv ásvāso nú rathyò rārahāṇấḥ || puruṇi dasmó ní riṇāti jámbhair ấd rocate vána ấ vibhấvā | ấd asya vấto ánu vāti socih.

The expression abhipramúrā juhvà in c means, according to Pischel (l.c., p. 98), 'strengthening ladle' and according to Oldenberg (op. cit. II, 336), 'with destroying tongue.' Compare however 1, 127, 1: yá ūrdhváyā svadhvaró devó devácyā kṛpā 'the god who, with his upright flame turned towards the gods, accomplishes the sacrifice' addressed to Agni; the expression ūrdhváyā svadhvaráh kṛpā in this verse is exactly parallel to abhipramúrā juhvà svadhvaráh in pāda c above. The word abhipramúrā is derived from the root murch 'to grow, to increase, to become strong,' as pointed out by Pischel (l.c., p. 112).

I have interpreted dán as 'strong' here as I have done in 10, 105, 2 above. Compare the epithet dasmá applied to Agni in 1, 148, 3 cited above and in other passages. It is possible to regard dán here as equivalent to dáme (compare the word sádane in 1, 148, 2 cited above) and to interpret it as 'in the house.' There is however no necessity to assume two words of the form dán, and it seems to me preferable to look upon it as a derivative of dams 'strong,' in this verse also.

In the opinion of Pischel (l.c., p. 100), the word dán occurs, further, in the RV in the two following stanzas also:

5, 3, 7: divó ná yásya vidható návīnod výṣā rukṣá óṣadhīṣu nūnot | ghṛṇā ná yó dhrájasā pátmanā yánn
ā ródasi vásunā dám supátnī ||

According to Pischel, the above word d'an occurs in pāda d as d'am, and is a verbal form; a d'am = ausrichtete, i.e., ausstattete, and pādas cd mean, 'der wie (der Durstige) in der Hitze im Zug und Flug gehend, Himmel und Erde, die trefflichen Gatten, mit Gut ausstattete.' I do not feel so certain that the word used in this verse is d'an; but, granting that Pischel's opinion is right, I would translate the verse as 'Whose (flame), when he worships (the gods), roars like (the thunder) of Heaven, he, the strong bright one, has roared in the plants; going with flying speed like one (seeking shelter) from the heat, the strong one has extended with light Heaven and Earth, the excellent husband and wife.'

In pāda b, the word used is, according to Roth (Ueber gewisse Kürzungen des Wortendes in Veda, p. 3) and Pischel (l.c.), rukṣé which is short for rukṣéṣu and means 'in the trees.' According to the Padapāṭha, however, the word used is rukṣáḥ which probably means 'bright'; see Grassmann and Oldenberg, RV. Noten, I, 371.

I have followed Pischel in the interpretation of pāda a; but I do not feel certain that this is what the poet had in his mind. Regarding the simile however, compare 7, 3, 6: divó ná te tanyatúr eti súşmaḥ and 4, 10, 4: prá te divó ná stanayanti súşmāḥ.

The comparison in c is, according to Pischel, concerned with one who, feeling thirsty in the heat, runs to procure some drink to quench his thirst. I am inclined to believe that it concerns one who flies for shelter from the heat; compare 6, 16, 38: úpa chāyām iva ghṛṇer áganma śárma te vayám and 1, 158, 3: úpa vām ávaḥ śaraṇám gameyam śúro nājma patáyadbhir évaih.

In d, I interpret vásu as 'light' and supply after å the word tatāna on the analogy of 6, 4, 6: å sûryo ná bhānumádbhir arkaír ágnc tatántha ródasī ví bhāsā | citró nayat pári támāmsy aktáḥ śociṣā pátmann auśijó ná dīyan.

The reading dám supátnī is, though not unintelligible, suspicious; for, as I have already observed above, the word páti by itself (i. e., not accompanied by genitives) is not used in the RV as an epithet of any deity; nor are Heaven and Earth described anywhere in the RV as 'excellent husband and wife (treffliche Gaten).' I would therefore emend dám supátnī into dámsupatnī (i.e., dámsu-patnī; compare dámsu-jūtah, rámsu-jihvah) and interpret pada d as 'he extended Heaven and Earth, lords of greatness, with his light.' dámsupatnī= great lords or lords of greatness; it is the equivalent of the epithet sudámsasā that is applied to Heaven and Earth in 6, 70, 7: ūrjam no dyaús ca prthivi ca pinvatām pitā mātā visvavidā sudámsasā and 1, 159, 1: devébhir vé deváputre sudámsasā. Roth, too, in the PW, suggests the emendation dámsupatnī; he would however interpret this word as 'einen wunderkräftigen Herrn habend.' Oldenberg (ZDMG. 55, 290) suggests the emendation tán supátnī, tán being a verbal form (= tatāna) of the root tan.

4, 19, 7: prágrúvo nabhanvò ná vákvā
dhvasrå apinvad yuvatir rtajňáh | dhánvāny ájrān aprņak trṣāṇán
ádhog indrah staryò dámsupatnīh ||

Here Roth would retain the reading dámsupatnih and interpret the word as 'whose lord is wonderfully strong'; but against this Pischel (l. c., p. 102) urges that 'sterile women whose lord is wonderfully strong' are, though conceivable, hardly within the realm of probability. He would therefore emend dámsupatnih into dám supátnih and interpret pāda d as 'es melkte Indra die unfruchtbaren (Kühe), er machte die Frauen, die einen tüchtigen Gatten haben, schwanger' d. h. "Indra bewirkt, dass die unfruchtbaren Kühe Milch geben, also fruchtbar werden, und dass die Frauen Kinder bekommen, ein Hauptwursch des Inders." Here too dam or dán is a verbal form of the root dans 'richten' and means 'er machte schwanger.' The stanza signifies, according to him, "Er füllte an die seichten Flüsse die (dabei) wie Mädchen (bei der Vergewaltigung) schrieen. Wüsten und Gefilde, die dürsteten, tränkte er; Indra schaffte Milch den unfruchtbaren (Kühen), er machte die Ehefrauen schwanger." Geldner translates pada d as 'Indra melkte die Geltkühe die einen tüchtigen Hausgemahl (in ihm) haben' in his RV. Ueber. and therefore looks upon dám as the genitive of dám or dúms meaning 'house.' Grassmann translates the pada as 'Indra molk des Dämon's gelbe Kühe' and Ludwig as 'er gewann milch von den [bisz dahin] unfruchtbaren gattinnen des wunder [tieres].'

Hillebrandt (Lieder des RV., p. 46) translates the stanza as: "Er schwängerte die Mädchen, die wie hervorbrechende Quellen tobten, er schwängerte die jungen, rechtschaffenen Frauen, welche verkummerten. Die dürstenden Triften und Felder sättigte er. Er verschaffte Milch den Unfruchtbaren, die einen wunderkräftigen Gatten hatten," and observes: "Die gewaltige, befruchtende Kraft Indra's wird geschildert. Es wird immer übersehen, dass es sich um eine Steigerung handelt. I. schwängert 1. die agrūvo, die unvermählten, 2. die jungen Frauen, die aber dhvasrā sind, 3. die, die unfruchtbar sind, obwohl sie einen kräftigen Mann haben. Unter dhvasrā sind die zu verstehen, die einen unfruchtbaren oder sie vernachlässigenden Mann haben. Die Bedeutung von dāmsu. . ist in dem Zusammenhang ganz klar: trotzdem die Frauen einen sehr kräftigen Gatten haben, bleiben sie unfruchtbar, und Indra hilft."

The other three pādas he has translated as: "Er schwängerte die Unvermählten, die wie die Quellwasser glucksten, er schwängerte die sittsamen jungen Frauen, die schmachtenden. Er tränkte die verdursteten Steppen und Ebenen."

Similarly, it is the opinion of Grassmann and Ludwig (and of Geldner) also that the first two pādas too of the stanza are concerned with Indra's impregnation of maidens, and that nabhanvàḥ in pāda a is the upamāna and not the upameya.

This opinion seems to me to be incorrect; and I believe that the stanza as a whole refers to Indra's release of the Waters or Rivers. For, on the one hand, nowhere else in the RV is Indra described as making maidens or married women fruitful. 6, 44, 21: vrsāsi divó vrsabháh prthivyá výsa síndhūnām vrsabháh stiyānām | vṛṣṇe ta indur vṛṣabha pīpāya and other similar verses which describe him as 'bull of the earth, sky,' etc., signify only that Indra is the chief person in the earth, sky, etc., (see Grassmann s. v. vrsabha 8) and are parallel in that respect to 1, 59, 2: mūrdhā divó nábhir agníh prthivyáh; 8,44,16: agnír mūrdhá diváh kakút pátih prthivyá ayám and other similar verses that describe Agni as such. And, on the other hand, Indra is described in many RV verses as the liberator of the Waters or Rivers that had been confined by Vṛtra, and as having made it easy for them to flow freely to the sea. Compare the passages cited by Hillebrandt in his Ved. Myth1., 3, 174-5; compare also 1, 32, 2: áhann áhim párvate sisriyänám tvástasmai vájram svaryám tatakşa | vāsrā iva dhenávah syándamānā áñjah samudrám

áva jagmur ápah; 2, 19, 3: sá máhina índro árno apám prairayad ahihācchā samudrám; 6, 30, 4: áhann áhim parisávānam árnó 'vāsrjo apó ácchā samudrám; 1,130,5: tvám výthā nadvà indra sártavé 'cchā samudrám asrio ráthān iva vājavató ráthān iva; 6, 17, 12; á ksódo máhi vị tám nadinām páristhitam asrja ūrmim apām | tāsām ánu praváta indra pánthām prárdayo nicir apásah samudrám. These Waters or Rivers, it is easy to understand, made fruitful all the lands they passed through on their way to the sea. Their water is hence called páyas 'milk,' in the RV, and the rivers themselves are described as overflowing with milk, páyasā pínvamānāh, in 3, 33, 4: enā vayám páyasā pinvamānā ánu yónim devákrtam cárantīh . . kimyúr vípro nadyò johavīti and 7, 51, 4: tá asmábhyam páyasā pinvamānāh sivā devir asi padā bhavantu sarvā nadyo asimidā bhavantu and as easy to milk, sudúghāh, in 7, 36, 6: váh susvávanta sudúghāh sudhārā abhi svéna páyasā pipyānāh. 1, 33, 1: gaveva subhré matára rihané vípat chutudri páyasa javete describes the rivers Vipäś and Śutudri as 'running (overflowing) with milk like two milch-cows (hastening to their calves)'.

These Waters are described as dāsápatnīḥ 'wives of the dāsa,' in 1, 32, 11: dāsápatnīr áhigopā atiṣṭhan níruddhā ápaḥ paṇíneva gắvaḥ, in 5, 30, 5: viśvā apó ajayad dāsápatnīḥ and also in 8, 96, 18: tvám apó ajayo dāsápatnīḥ. The dāsa refferred to here is Vṛtra, who, in 8, 93, 2: tám indram vājayāmasi mahé vṛtrāya hántave is called 'great (strong).' Hence the Waters or Rivers themselves are called vṛṣapatnīḥ and vṛṣṇaḥ pátnīḥ 'wives of the strong one' in 8, 15, 6: vṛṣapatnīr apó jayā divé-dive and 5, 42, 12: vṛṣṇaḥ pátnīr nadyò vibhvataṣṭāḥ; and in 4, 17, 3: vádhīd vṛtrām vájreṇa mandasānāḥ sárann āpo jávasā hatávṛṣṇīḥ, the Waters, after the killing of Vṛtra, are called hatávṛṣṇīḥ 'they whose strong husband had been killed.'

It is these Waters that are referred to as dámsupatnih in pāda d of the above verse. I therefore translate the verse as: "He caused to swell the rivers that cried out like maidens, that were covered with dust, youthful, knowers of the law. He filled the thirsty plains and deserts; Indra milked the sterile wives of the strong one (i. e. made fruit-bearing the wives of the strong one that had been sterile)."

nabhanvàh in a signifies 'rivers' as stated in the Nighantu, and denotes the Rivers that were liberated by Indra. I follow Pischel (l.c.) in looking upon nabhanvàh as the upameya and agrúvah as the upamāna. Regarding the separation of the particle ná from agrúvah, compare Pischel's observation in Ved. St., 1, 6: "ná steht auch sonst zuweilen nicht direkt hinter dem Worte, zu dem es gehört. So z. B. 5, 36, 2: rúhat sómo ná párvatasya prsthé für rúhat sómah prsthé ná párvatasya. Auch hier war das Metrum die Ursache der Umstellung."

The epithets dhvasrāh, yuvatīh and rtajāāh should be construed with both nabhanvāh and agrūvah. dhvasrā, o I conceive, is a synonym of the cognate word dhūsara dusty, covered with dust; and dhvasrāh denotes, in the case of the Rivers, that they are dusty, i.e., that their beds have little or no water and are for the most part covered with dust, i. e., that the rivers are dried up, and in the case of the agrūvah, that they are rajasvalāh (and therefore fit for impregnation.) rtajāāh denotes, in the case of the agrūvah, that they knew the rtu or proper time for intercourse (see in this connection R. Schmidt's Beiträge zur indischen Erotik, 2 p. 285f., 295f.), and, in adhog 'milked,' in d, signifies that Indra made the Waters (Rivers) bear fruit, that is, that he released them so that they may quench the thirst of the plains and make the land fruitful. Compare in this connection the words dhánvāny ájrān aprņak trṣāṇān of pāda c and pāda b of AV. 6, 22, 3 that is cited below; compare also what has been said above about páyas. The Waters (Rivers) are called staryùh because, when confined by Vṛtra, they were pent up in the mountains and could not reach the plains and make them fruitful.

Regarding the simile agrávo ná vákvāh, compare pāda c of TS. 3, 1, 11, 7-8: udaprúto marutas tán iyarta vŕstim vé vísve marúto junánti | krósāti gárdā kanyèva tunnā pērum tunjānā patyeva jāyā and AV. 6, 22, 8: udaprúto marútas tän iyarta vrstir vá vísva nivátas prnāti | éjāti gláhā kanyèva lunnā érum tundānā pálycva jāyā. The latter stanza is plainly corrupt (see while the meaning of the Whitney, AV. Trans.) former too is not clear. There is no doubt however that in both verses the Maruts are entreated to send down rain; that is to say, the situation is much the same as that referred to in RV 4, 19, 7. According to pada c of the TS verse, 12 this rain 'roars, i. e., cries, like a . . maiden that is pricked'; and the expression króśāti kanyèva tunnā in it is exactly equivalent to the expression agrúvo ná vákvāh of the RV verse.

The word  $d\acute{a}msu$  that is employed in this verse (4, 19, 7) and, in my opinion, in 6, 3, 7 also explained above, is derived from the above-mentioned root dams 'to be strong' by the addition of the suffix su; compare dakşu from dah 'to burn' and makşu from mah 'to be great (strong, vigourous, etc.)'. It is explained variously by Sayana as dantair asvaih (in 1, 122, 10), danteşu madhye (in 1, 141, 4) and as damsesu karmavatsu | yad vā grhanāmaitat | antya-lopas chāndasah | grhavad ācchādakesu . . . vad vā damsu yāga-grheşu devayajaneşu (in 1, 134, 4). Roth and Grassmann interpret it as 'wunderkräftig, auf wunderbare Weise, erstaunlich,' while Geldner, in his RV. Ueber. (I, 170, 179) has declared that the word is obscure and that the meaning 'in the house' does not suit. Pischel, in Ved. St., 2, 103, has explained this word as 'mächtig,' i. e, mighty, great, powerful; and there is no doubt that this interpretation is correct, for, as observed above, it is derived from the root dains 'to be strong.' The word therefore signifies primarily 'strong, great, mighty, powerful,' and secondarily, 'swift, quick, rapid.' Regarding the transition of meaning, compare Ved. St., 1, 16; 90f.; compare also the above-cited word maksú which signifies primarily 'great, powerful' and secondarily (and most frequently) 'quick, swift, rapid.'

dámsu seems, like maksú, to be an indeclinable, and occurs in the following three verses also of the RV:

1, 122, 10 : sā vrādhato náhuṣo dámsujūtah śárdhastaro narām gūrtáśravāḥ | vísṛṣṭarātir yāti bāļhasṛtvā víśvāsu pṛtsú sádam íc chūraḥ ||

"He is more swiftly-speeding, stronger, than the powerful Nahus; his fame is praised by men. Giving away gifts, he, the swift-goer, goes in all fights, always a hero." dámsujūtah= swiftly-speeding or 'in gewaltiger Eile' (Pischel; Ved. St., 2, 103); it is an equivalent of the word bālhasttvā that cocurs in pāda c, and means 'irresistible; difficult to check.' sáh in a refers to the person who worships Mitra and Varuṇa who are the deities of this verse (see Sāyaṇa's commentary); and dámsujūtah even without the suffix tara, seems to have the meaning of a comparative here. Or, should we construe the suffix tara of sardhastara with dámsujūta also?

Geldner, in RV. Ueber., I, 353, has pointed out the similarity of 6, 24, 8: ná vīļáve námate ná sthirāya ná sárdhate dásyujūtāya stavān | ájrā indrasya giráyas cid rṣvā gambhiré cid bhavati gādhám asmai with this verse. The words dámsujūta and dásyujūta in these two verses seem clearly to be parallel to each other. Similarly, as we have observed above, the word dámsupatnīḥ in 4, 19, 7 is parallel to the word dāsápatnīḥ in 1, 32, 11. Is it possible then that the words dāsa and dasyu are derived from the same root dams 'to be strong' from which dámsu is derived, with loss of the nasal as in the cognate words dasma and dasra?

"For thee [O Vāyu], the bright Dawns weave beautiful garments (i.e., make beautiful ornaments) in the swift rays, marvellous (garments) in the new rays. For thee does the milch-cow Sabardughā milk all riches. Thou hast engendered the Maruts from the wombs, from the wombs of Heaven." Regarding the epithet dâmsu 'swift' applied to rasmişu, compare 1, 63, 1: girâyah... bhiyâ drļhāsah kirânā naijan 'the firm mountains through fear, moved (as swiftly) as rays,' and 9, 69, 6: sūryasyeva rasmáyo drāvayitnāvah 'speeding swiftly like the rays of the sun.' Or, should we interpret dâmsu rasmişu as 'bright rays?' Regarding the transition of meaning from 'strong, swift' to 'bright,' see Ved. St., 1, 96f.

Sabardughā (literally, 'Amṛta-milker' according to Sāyaṇa) is a cow that milks all desired things and is therefore a prototype of the Kāmadhenu of the later Purāṇas and Epics.

1,141,4: prá yát pitúh paramán nīyáte páry á pṛkṣúdho vīrúdho dámsu rohati | ubhā yád asya janúṣām yád ínvata ád íd vávistho abhavad ghrnā śúcih ||

"When he (sc. Agni) is brought down from the highest father, he quickly climbs the . . plants. When the two promote his birth, he, the youngest, glowed with heat."

'The highest father,' mentioned in a is perhaps Dyaus or Heaven; see Geldner's RV. Ucber., I, 179. pra+ni however is a technical term used in the Śrautasūtras for the transportation of fire from the Āhavaniyahearth to the Uttaravedi (see Caland-Henry, L'Agnistoma, p. 78); and hence Sāyaṇa understands paramāt pitūh as referring to this Āhavaniya fire which thereafter comes to be known as the Gārhapatya fire. prksūdhah is a hap. leg. whose meaning is not known; it signifies perhaps 'strength-giving'. The 'two' mentioned in pāda c are, in all probability, the two aranis. dámsu = vigorously, swiftly; and dámsu ā rohati refers perhaps to the rapid spread of Agni when consuming the plants; compare in this connection the expression avartrá óṣadhīṣu in 6, 12, 3 explained above (p. 112).

This is a word well-known in later literature where it has the meaning  $n\bar{a}n\bar{a}$ , 'diversely, variously, separately, individually, in different ways'; and it has been assumed by the commentators, Indian as well as European, that this is the meaning in the Veda also. This assumption is indeed correct as regards, 1, 131, 2; 1, 157, 1, and some other verses; but it is otherwise with regard to 10, 91, 7:  $v\bar{a}topadh\bar{u}ta$  işitó  $v\dot{a}s\bar{a}\ddot{n}$  ánu tṛṣủ yád ánnā véviṣad vitiṣṭhase | á te yatante rathyò yáthā pṛthak sárdhāmsy

agne ajárāni dhákṣatah; 9, 86, 2: prá te mádāso madirāsa āsavo' srķsata rathyāso yathā prthak dhenur ná vatsám pávasābhí vairínam indram indavo mádhumanta ūrmáyah; and 10, 142, 4: yád udváto niváto yási bápsat prthag esi pragardhiniva senā | yadā te vāto anuvāti śocir vapteva śmásru vapasi prá bhúma all which verses contain similes with prthak as the tertium comparationis. In 10, 142, 4 it is said that Agni goes, prthak, like a swift missile; in 10, 91, 7, that the flames of Agni press forward, prthak, like the horses of a chariot; and in 9, 86, 2, that the swift gladdening streams of Soma rush forward, prthak, like the horses of a chariot. It is obvious that the meaning 'diversely, variously, separately, in different ways', is inappropriate here; for the horses of a chariot can not be said to press forward 'diversely' or 'in different ways.' On the contrary, it is their community of action and community of goal that is the point of comparison elsewhere in the RV. Compare, for instance, 3, 33, 2: ácchā samudrám rathyèva yāthah 'you, Vipāt and Sutudri, go to the sea (together) like the two horses of a chariot' (comp. anyā vām anyām ápy eti subhre in the same verse and samānám yónim ánu samcárantī in the next verse); 2, 39, 3: arvāncā yātam rathyèva śakrā 'come. O ye two mighty (Asvins) towards us (together) like the two horses of a chariot' (comp. 10, 106, 1: sadhrīcīnā vātave prém ajīgah); and 3, 36, 6: apah samudrám rathyèva jagmuh 'the waters went (together) to the sea like the two horses of a chariot' (comp. 5, 60, 3: apa iva sadhryàñco dhavadhve). Compare also the epithet sahavahah, drawing together, used of the horses which draw the chariot of Brhaspati in 7, 97, 6: tám sagmáso arusáso ásvā býhaspátim sahaváho vahanti sáhas cid vásya nilavat sadhástham nábho ná rūpám aruşám vásānāh. prthak therefore cannot mean 'diversely,' 'variously,' 'separately,' 'in different ways,' here; it must have some other signification that can yield good sense in these passages.

What this other signification is, can be determined from these passages themselves. As we have seen, pṛthag-gamana is a common characteristic of Agni, of Agni's flames, of the horses of a chariot, and of a swift missile—that is, of a weapon that has been hurled against the foe. If we find out therefore from other passages of the RV an answer to the question 'What attribute is it that is characteristic of the movement of the above-named things?', we shall in all likelihood have found out the meaning of pṛthak in these passages.

The answer to the above question is not difficult to find; for, the only attribute that characterises commonly the movement of Agni, Agni's flames, etc., is 'swiftness,' 'rapidity,' 'quickness,' 'impetuousness,' etc. Compare respectively the following passages: (a) 3, 26, 2; tám subhrám aguím ávase havāmahe . . . átithim raghuşyádam 'we invoke him for protection, Agni, the bright, the swift-moving, the guest'; 10, 6, 4: devān ácchā raghupátvā jigāti 'he (Agni), the swift-mover, goes to the gods'; 1, 140, 9: tuvigrébhih sátvabhir yāti ví iráyah 'he moves swiftly with his much-devouring flames'; 1, 79, 1: áhir dhúnir váta iva dhrájīmān '(Agni) swift (like) Ahi, flying like the wind'; 4, 4, 4: práti spášo vi srja túrnitamah 'send forth thy spies, (O Agni,) thou that art the swiftest'; (b) 4, 4, 2: /áva bhramāsa āšuyā patanti 'thy flames go swiftly'; 6, 66, 10: trşu-cyávaso juhvò nágnéh 'moving swiftly like the tongues (i.e., flames) of Agni'; 9, 22, 2: agnér iva bhramā vithā 'impetuous like the flames of Agni'; 4, 6, 10: tveṣāso agne arcayas caranti syenāso na duvasānāso ártham 'thy bright flames, O Agni, move (swiftly) like hawks coursing to their goal'; 4, 6, 5: drávanty asya vājino ná sókāh 'his flames run like racing horses'; (c) 1, 148, 3: áśvāso ná rathyò rārahānāh 'coursing like the horses of a chariot'; 10,119,3: ún mā pītā ayamsata rátham ásvā ivāsávah 'the streams (of Soma) drunk (by me) have roused me (as quickly) as swift horses (draw) a chariot'

(cf. preceding verse, prá vátā iva dódhata ún mā pītā ayamsata); 4, 1, 3: sákhe sákhāyam abhy á vavrtsvāsúm ná cakrám ráthyeva rámhyā 'carry the friend to us, O friend, with speed, as the two horses of a chariot roll the swift wheel'; 2, 4, 6: var ná patha ráthyeva svanit 'who, (Agni,) rushed forth (as swiftly) as water on its path, as the two horses of a chariot'; (d) 9, 69, 6: súryasyeva rasmáyo drāvayitnávo matsarāsah prasúpah sākám īrate 'the torpid (?), intoxicating (streams of Soma) move together, swift like the rays of the sun'; 9, 69, 7: síndhor iva pravané nimná asávo výsacyuta mádaso gatúm āśata 'the streams of Soma, falling from (the hands of) the priest proceed on their way, swift like the currents of a river down an incline'; 9, 86, 1: prá ta āśávah pavamāna dhījávo mádā arsanti raghujā iva tmánā 'thy swift, thought-inspiring, intoxicating streams, O Pavamana rush forward of themselves like horses born of fleet (sires and dams)'; 1, 5, 7: å tvā višantv āšávah sómāsa indra girvanah 'let the swift streams of Soma enter into you, O Indra fond of praise'; 9, 22, 1: cté sómāsa āsávo ráthā iva prá vājinah | sárgāh srstá aliesata 'these swift streams of Soma have moved (as swiftly) as racing chariots, (as) horses unloosed; (c) 1, 143, 5: ná vó várāva marútām iva svanáh séneva srstá dívyá váthāsánih 'that, like the rush of the Maruts, like a missile sent on its way, like the thunderbolt of heaven, can not be stopped'; 6, 6, 5: ádha jihvá pāpatīti prá visno gosuvudho näsanih srjana 'then speeds the flame of the bull (sc. Agni) like the missile hurled by the fighter for cows'; 1, 116, 1: yāv árbhagāya vimádāya jāyām senājúvā nyūhátū ráthena 'who (two) brought a wife to the young Vimada in a chariot that is as swift as a missile.'

prthak therefore signifies in 10, 91, 7 and similar verses 'swiftly', 'rapidly', 'quickly,' 'impetuously,' etc., a meaning which suits the context. It has this meaning in the following passages:

2, 17, 3: ádhākṛṇoḥ prathamám vīryàm mahád yád asyāgre bráhmaṇā śúṣmam airayaḥ | ratheṣṭhéna háryaśvena vícyutāḥ prá jīráyaḥ sisrate sadhryàk pṛthak ||

"Then didst thou, (O Brhaspati) perform (thy) first valiant deed when thou, before this (Indra), didst shatter the powerful (Vala) with thy spell. The swift (Waters) released by (Indra), who was in his chariot (and) who has tawny horses, rush forward together impetuously."

There are some difficulties in the first half of this The release of the Waters mentioned in the second half-verse indicates that the valiant deed (mahád viryam) of the first half-verse refers to the overthrow of the demon that had imprisoned them; compare 2, 22, 1: sá īm mamāda máhi kárma kártave mahám urúm saínam saścad devó devám satyám indram satyá induh; 2, 24, 14: bráhmanas páter abhavad yathāvasám satyó manyúr máhi kármā karişyatáh where also the phrase máhi kárma refers to such overthrow; cf. also 3, 33, 7: pravācyam śaśvadha viryam tád indrasya kárma yád áhim vivrscát ví vájrena parisádo jaghānāyann āpóyanam icchámānāh. I therefore take śuṣma as referring to the demon that imprisoned the Waters, and airayah in the sense of shattering, destroying—a sense which the word has in the preceding verse but one, vísvā yád gotrá sáhasā párivrtā máde sómasya drinhitāny airayat. The mention of bráhman as the instrument used for shattering shows (comp. 2, 24, 3 úd gắ ājad ábhinad bráhmaṇā valám) that the first half-verse is addressed to Brhaspati who is known as brahmanas pati or 'lord of spells.' It is indeed possible to interpret, as Oldenberg has in fact done (RV. Noten I, p. 201), the first half-verse also as being addressed to Indra. But this seems to me however to be a somewhat forced interpretation, and I prefer to regard this verse as belonging to the type of verses (cf. 1, 62, 4) whose two halves refer to Indra and Brhaspati respectively, and to interpret it as above.

The word asya in the second pada seems to refer to Indra and the words asya agre to be equivalent to asya purah. Brhaspati is, as we know from 2, 24, 9 and the Yajus texts (TS. 6, 4, 10; MS. 4, 6, 3; KS. 27, 8) the purohita of the gods  $(dev\bar{a}h)$  and therefore of their chief, Indra, also. Now, the chief function of the king's purohita is, as laid down by Indian writers, the removal, by means of magical spells, of all evils whether caused by human or by extrahuman agency. These writers therefore lay particular stress on the necessity of having as purohita one that is well-versed in Atharvanic spells; see, for instance, Kautilya's Arthaśāstra 1, 8, 5 (p. 15): purohitam uditoditakulasīlam sadange vede daive nimitte dandanītyám ca abhivinītam, āpadām daivamānuşīnām atharvabhir upāyais ca pratikartāram kurvīta; Mahābhārata 12, 73, 30-31: bhārgavāngirasām vede krtavidyah sadangavit || yajñakarmavidhijñas tu vidhijñah paustikesu ca astādašavikalpānām vidhijnah šāntikarmanām sarvarogavihīnas ca samyutah samyatendriyah | (purohitah kāryah); Yājñavalkyasmṛti 1, 313: purohitam prakurvīta daivajñam uditoditam | dandanītyām ca kusalam atharvāngirase tathā; see also ch. II of the Brhatsamhitā. An efficient purohita therefore was able to destroy all evils and enemies that threatened the king; compare the following ślokas: 1 upapannam nanu śivam saptasv angesu yasya me | daivīnām mānusīnām ca pratikartā tvam āpadām ||60|| tava mantrakrto mantrair dūrāt prašamitaribhih | pratyadisyanta iva me drstalaksyabhidah sarah addressed by king Dilīpa to his purohita Vasistha in the Raghuvamsa (I. 60, 61). In the light of these passages we can now understand better the role played by Brhaspati in the incidents referred to by the RV. The chant or shout (arka, brahman, rava, virava, kranda, stanita, etc.) with which he destroyed the demon and set free the cows and waters (see Bergaigne I, 302; Boyer, J.A., 1906, I, p. 401 ff.) represents the magical spell or mantra which he, as purohita, used in favour of his patron Indra against his foes. His comparison too, with a 'lion roaring in his den' in 10, 67, 9 (simhám iva nánadatam sadhásthe) is one that is pregnant with meaning. The lion, it is believed, kills other animals by its mere roar; compare the Jātaka stories No. 152 <sup>2</sup> and 241 <sup>3</sup> and the following sentences in Müller's translation of the first six stories of the Pisācaprakaraṇam which is without doubt derived from an Indian original (ZDMG., 48, pp. 198 ff.):

and as a purohita performs his śāntika, pauṣṭika and ābhicārika ceremonies in his yāgaśālā, and as the mantras used therein kill the enemies even though they be afar, the comparison of these mantras with the roar of a lion, and of the purohita Bṛhaspati with a lion roaring in his den is singularly felicitous. Another figure of speech compares these rites and ceremonies which he performs to a ratha or war-chariot, in 2, 23, 3, which represents Bṛhaspati as mounted on the chariot of rite (rtasya ratham) which destroys enemies, slays demons, shatters the stony enclosure imprisoning the cows and wins the light.

Sāyana, who as usual takes prthak to mean 'in different ways,' has ingeniously attempted to explain away the consequent contradiction here between sadhryàk and pithak by saying that the 'going in different ways' was caused by fear-vicyutāh svasthānāc cyāvitāh santah sadhryak sadhricināh parasparasaingatāh prthak bhityā viyuktāh santah prasisrate prakarşena dhāvanti. It is however the nature of Waters to flow together; compare 4, 47, 2: vuvām hi vantindavo nimnam apo na sadhryak; and 5, 60, 3: apa iva sadhryàñco dhavadhve; and the Waters (or Rivers) released by Indra are in many places said to have moved swiftly forward; cf. 1, 32, 2: vāśrā iva dhenávah syándamānā áñjah samudrám áva jagmur ápah 'running, like lowing cows (to their calves), the waters went straight to the sea'; 1, 130, 5: tvám víthā nadyà indra sártavé 'cchā samudrám ası jo ráthāh iva vājayató ráthān iva 'thou hast released the rivers, O Indra, to run to the sea impetuously like chariots, like racing chariots'; 2, 15, 3: vájrena khány atrnan nadínām | vrthasrjat pathibhir dirghayāthaih 'with the Vajra he bored openings for the rivers and let them loose (to flow) in long-extended paths'; 4, 17, 3: vádhīd vrtrám vájrena mandasānáh sárann apo jávasa hatávrsníh 'exulting he killed Vrtra with the Vajra: the waters, whose lord was killed, rushed forth swiftly'; and specially, 10, 111, 9-10: srjáh síndhūnr áhinā jagrasnán ad id etah prá vivijre javéna | múmukşamānā utá yā mumucré 'dhéd etā ná ramante nitiktāh | sadhricīh sindhum ušatīr ivāyan ' thou didst deliver the Rivers swallowed by the dragon and these sped forth swiftly—those desiring to be free as well as those that were freed; the swift ones do not stop; like loving (wives) they went to the sea together.' It should be noted that both the ideas of 'going together' and 'going swiftly' are given expression to in this last-quoted passage.

"Run forth now swiftly; he is not now who had detained you. Indra has hit Vrtra in his vital parts with the Vajra." This is, as is evident, an address to the Waters.

3, 56, 4: abhika āsām padavir abodhy ādityānām ahve cāru nāma !
āpas cid asmā aramanta deviḥ
pṛthag vrájantīḥ pári ṣīm avṛñjan ||

The meaning of this verse is not quite clear; I translate tentatively: "Their leader became known in the fight; I have invoked the sweet name of the Ādityas. Even the immortal Waters stopped for him; moving swiftly, they left (him)." With regard to the third pāda, compare 2, 30, 1: indrāyāhighné ná ramanta āpaḥ. The fourth pāda seems to refer to the same situation as 7, 21, 3: tvám indra srávitavā apáḥ kaḥ páriṣṭhitā áhinā sūra pūrviḥ | tvád vāvakre rathyò ná dhénā réjante vísvā kṛtrímāṇi bhīṣā and 4, 22, 6: ádhāha tvád vṛṣamaṇo bhiyānāḥ prá síndhavo jávasā cakramanta.

2, 24, 14: bráhmanas páter abhavad yathāvasám satyó manyúr máhi kármā karişyatáh | yó gā úd ājat sá divé ví cābhajan mahiva rītih sávasāsarat pṛthak ||

"The powerful spell of Brahmanaspati who was engaged in a great work had its own way (i.e., acted as desired); (he) who drove forth the cows gave it to heaven; (the herd of cows) like a great current went forward impetuously with strong force." 'The great work' refers, as I have said above, to the overthrowing of the demon that has imprisoned the waters and cows. The iva in the fourth pāda, though apparently an upamāvācaka, seems really to be used in the sense of ca, that is, as a samuccaya-vācaka with the force of 'and'; for Bṛhaspati sets free, not only cows, but the waters also. Compare 2, 23, 18: táva śriyé vy ùjihīta párvato gávām gotrám úd aṣṛjo yád aṅgiraḥ | indrcṇa yujā támasā párīvṛtam bṛhaspate nír apām aubjo arṇavám; see also 6, 73, 3; 2, 24, 73-4.

- 9, 86, 2: prá te mádāso madirāsa āsávo'
  'sṛkṣata ráthyāso yáthā pṛthak |

  indram indavo mádhumanta ūrmúyaḥ ||
- "Thy swift, gladdening streams (O Soma), ran forth impetuously like the horses of a chariot. The sweet-bearing streams (have run) towards Indra, the Vajrabearer, as a cow with milk runs to its calf."
  - 10, 44, 6: pṛthak prāyan prathamā devāhūtayó 'kṛṇvata śravasyàni duṣṭārā |
    nā yé śekúr yajñiyām nāvam ārūham îrmaivā té ny àvišanta képayaḥ ||

This verse is somewhat obscure. I translate, following Yāska (Nirukta, 5, 25, 1): "The first invokers of the gods sped forth swiftly and performed famous (deeds) difficult to surpass; the wicked people who were unable to get upon the ship of sacrifice, stayed here only."

- 10, 91, 7: vátopadhūta işitó vásān ánu

- "When thou, O Agni, being fanned by the wind, extendest thyself rapidly, following thy desires, and reachest forth eagerly after food, the unaging flames of thee, that art burning, move forward swiftly like the horses of a chariot."

10, 142, 4: yád udváto niváto yāsi bápsat
přthag eşi pragardhínīva sénā |
yadā te vāto anu vāti šocír
vápteva smásru vapasi prá bhúma ||

"When thou goest, devouring, over ups and downs, thou movest as quickly as a swift missile. When the wind is blowing behind thy flame, thou shavest the earth as a barber the moustache." pragardhini (meaning, literally, 'greedy')= swift here; compare the similar use of the words grdlnú and gidhyantam in 1, 70, 11. sādhúr ná grdhnúh 'swift like an excellent (horse)' and 4, 38, 5: padbhír gidhyantam medhayúm ná súram 'speeding with a will, like a valiant soldier in battle'. Regarding the transition of meaning from 'greedy' to 'swift,' compare the analogous words trşú 'thirsty, swift ' and tātrsāná ' thirsting, swift-moving ' in 6, 66, 10 cited above and 2, 4, 6: a vó vána tätrsanó ná bhati var ná pathá ráthyeva svänīt. Compare also in this connection 1, 143, 5 and other verses cited above (p. 139) about the swiftness of the missile and the expressions 'swift as an arrow; quick as a dart; pfeil-schnell' and other similar ones in English and German.

"The wise put the ploughs together; the clever, desiring the grace of the gods, quickly make ready the yokes."

AV. 11, 5, 13: agnaú súrye candrámasi mātarisvan brahmacāry ùpsú samidham á dadhāti | tāsām arcimşi pṛthag abhré caranti tāsām ājyam púruşo varşám āpaḥ ||

"In the fire, in the sun, in the moon, in Mātariśvan, in the waters, the Vedic student puts fuel. Their gleams go quickly to the cloud; their sacrificial butter is man, rain, waters." Compare Manusmṛti III, 76: agnau prāstāhutiḥ samyag ādityam upatiṣṭkate | ādityāj jāyate vṛṣṭir vṛṣter annam tataḥ prajāḥ.

- AV. 7, 45, 2: agnér ivāsya dáhato dāvásya dáhatah pṛthak | etâm etásyerṣyām udnāgním iva śamaya ||
- "Extinguish, as (one does) fire with water, this man's jealousy which is burning impetuously (i.e., fiercely) like fire, like forest-fire."
- AV. 4, 15, 2: sám īkṣayantu taviṣāḥ sudānavo

- "Let the strong liberal ones (sc. the Maruts) cause to behold together; let the juices of the waters attach themselves to the herbs; let downpours of rain glorify the earth; let herbs of all forms be born quickly."
- AV. 4, 15, 3: sám īkṣayasva gāyato nábhāmsy apām végāsah pṛthag úd vijantām | varṣásya sárgā mahayantu bhūmim pṛthag jāyantām óṣadhayo viśvárūpāḥ ||

"Do thou make the singers behold the clouds together; let the swift streams of water rush out rapidly; let downpours of rain glorify the earth; let herbs of all forms be born quickly."

Whitney in his Translation (p. 172) renders pṛthak in these passages as 'here and there;' and gives a note, after verse 4, that "pṛthak, lit. 'severally, separately' is used in these verses rather in the sense of 'all about, everywhere'." It seems to me that it is preferable to accept here (for verses 2 and 3) the meaning, 'quickly, rapidly' established for pṛthak above, and that this makes it unnecessary to suggest a third meaning, 'all about, everywhere,' for it. With regard to verse 4, the meaning  $n\bar{a}n\bar{a}$ , 'severally,' may be considered to suit well here and also in AV. 3, 19, 6 and 5, 20, 7, where, too, the words pṛthak and ghoṣa (in 5, 20, 7 its synonym dhvanayaḥ) occur. A better sense, however, is yielded by these passages if we interpret pṛthak here as 'strong', a meaning which is a development from that of 'rapid, quick, impetuous'; see Vedische Studien I, p. 47 and 97 for numerous examples of such development. I would therefore translate these verses as follows:

AV. 4, 15, 4: gaṇās tvópa gāyantu mārutāḥ
parjanya ghoṣiṇaḥ pṛthak |
sárgā varṣásya várṣato
várṣantu pṛthivīm ánu ||

"Let the troops of Maruts that shout strongly sing to thee, O Parjanya; let gushes of raining rain rain along the earth." Shouting strongly is a characteristic of the Maruts that is frequently mentioned in the RV; compare for instance 1, 64, 8: simhā iva nānadati prācetasaḥ; 1, 85, 2: árcanto arkām janāyanta indriyām ādhi šrīyo dadhire pṛśnimātaraḥ; 5, 54, 12: sváranti ghóṣam vitatam ṛtāyávaḥ; compare also, 1, 169, 7; 3, 26, 5, and Bergaigne II, 373.

AV. 3, 19, 6: úd dhárṣantām maghavan vājināny úd vīrāṇām jáyatām etu ghóṣaḥ | pṛthag ghóṣā ululáyaḥ ketumánta úd īratām | devā índrajyeṣṭhā marúto yantu sénayā ||

"Let their energies be excited, O bounteous one; let the shout of the conquering heroes arise; let strong shouts and clear jubilant cries go up; let the divine Maruts with Indra as chief go with the army." To pṛthag ghóṣāḥ in this verse corresponds dyumān ghóṣaḥ in 10, 84, 4. dyumántam ghóṣam vijayāya kṛṇmahe.

AV. 5, 20, 7: antarémé nábhasī ghóso astu pýthak te dhvánayo yantu síbham | abhí kranda stanáyotpípānaḥ slokakín mitratűryāya svardhí ||

"Let there be noise between these two firmaments; let thy sounds go swift and strong; roar (at them), thunder, truculent, resounding unto the victory of our friends, a good partizan." The last half-verse is unintelligible to me and I have therefore repeated here the translation of Whitney.

pithak has the sense of  $n\bar{a}n\bar{a}$  in the other RV passages where it occurs, namely, in 1, 131, 2; 1, 157, 1; 8, 43, 18 and 8, 43, 29.

- 1, 131, 2: vísveşu hi tvā sávaneşu tuñjáte samānám ékam výşamanyavah pýthak svàh sánişyavah pýthak |
  tám tvā nāvam ná parşánim
  sūşásya dhurí dhīmahi |
  indram ná yajñaís citáyanta āyávah
  stómebhir indram āyávah ||
- "(They) call urgently to thee in all Soma-libations—thee that art one and common, the people with excellent hymns (of praise), desiring to attain light, (call upon) separately. We people, glorifying Indra with praises as with sacrifices, place at the head of the strong (hymn), thee, that, like a ship, carriest us across."
- "Agni has awaked; the sun rises from the earth; the bright dawn has opened heaven and earth with her light; the (two) Asvins have yoked their chariot for going; the divine Savitr has impelled the world individually (to action)."
  - 8, 43, 18: túbhyam tá angirastama vísvāḥ sukṣitáyaḥ pṛthak | ágne kāmāya yemire ||

"Thee, O best of Angirases, have all those people with good dwelling-houses, attached to themselves, separately, in order to obtain their desires, O Agni."

8, 43, 29: túbhyam ghét tế jánā imé vísvāh sukṣitáyah pṛthak | dhāsím hinvanty áttave ||

"All these people with good dwelling-houses (O Agni) have separately impelled thee to eat the food." The words visvāh sukṣitayaḥ in these two verses though literally meaning 'all (people) that have good dwelling-houses' seem to be used in the sense of 'all (people) possessed of houses, i.e., householders'; viśvāḥ sukṣitayaḥ thus=viśve grhapatayaḥ, viśveṣu grheṣu naraḥ, grhe-grhe naraḥ. Compare 5, 14, 4; 10, 91, 2; 1, 128, 4; 4, 7, 3; etc.

Thus the meaning of pṛthak is 1. (a) quick, rapid, impetuous; (b) strong; and 2. separately, differently, diversely, variously.

Likewise, the root prath, from which the word prthak is without doubt derived, and its derivative prthu seem also to signify 'to rush, to move quickly or swiftly 'and 'swift' respectively. Regarding the latter word, namely prthu, it is the first member of the compound prthuprajña which is given in the Mahāvyutpatti (Mironow's ed.; 48) as a synonym of āśuprajña, javanaprajña, tīkṣṇaprajña, gambhīraprajña, etc. This seems to indicate that prthu in prthuprajña means āśu or javana.

§ 9 vakşám

yakṣá (neuter) is a somewhat difficult word that occurs about thirty times in the Vedic texts and that has not so far been satisfactorily explained by the exegetists. The explanations proposed for this word by the earlier ones are collected by Geldner on pp. 126, 127 of the Vedische Studien, Vol. 3, in the beginning of the article which he has written on this word. Geldner has there, after giving expression to the opinion that none of these explanations is satisfactory, come to the conclusion (p. 143) that yakşá means I. (a) Erstaunen, Verwunderung, Neugierde; (b) Wunder, Rätsel; 2. Wunder, Kunststück, Zauber, (a) Hexerei, Zauberei; (b) Verzauberung; Verwandlung; (c) Gaukelei, Blendwerk, Illusion; (d) Wunderkraft, Wunderkur, Heilzauber; 3. Gegenstand der Bewunderung oder Neugierde, Kuriosität, (a) Wundertier; (b) Schaustück, Fest; (c) Naturwunder wie grosse Bäume u.s.w. M. Boyer who has likewise written an article on this word in the Journal Asiatique (1906, I, pp. 393-477), sees no necessity for the acceptance of this long array of meanings. Following the explanation of Roth (übernatürliches Wesen, geisterhafte Erscheinung) and Bergaigne (apparition surnaturelle), he thinks that vaksá denotes only 'a form likely to create feelings of astonishment in the beholder,' une forme (visible de fait ou concue comme telle) propre á étonner le regard, and has, in his above-mentioned article, attempted to show that the meaning fantome, apparition, apparition merveilleuse. merveille, fits in best with the context and is sufficient to explain every passage in which the word occurs. Oldenberg (RV. Noten, II, p. 44) agrees with M. Boyer in thinking that there is no necessity for a long series of meanings, and that one meaning is enough explain all the passages in which the word occurs. This one meaning, however, is according to Oldenberg, 'wunderbare geheimnisvolle (darum häufig unheimliche) Wesenheit' and not 'a form likely to create feelings of astonishment in the beholder' as proposed by M. Boyer. And this seems now to be the opinion of Geldner also who in his latest book (RV. Ueber.) remarks, in connection with the verse 4, 3, 13, 'yakşám; Heimlichkeit oder Blendwerk. yaksá ist etwas Geheimnisvolles oder Wunderbares,' and thus seems to have abandoned his former suggestion in favour of that of Oldenberg. On the other hand, Hillebrandt has, ' in his recently written article on this word (Festgabe für Richard von Garbe, pp. 17-23), explained it as 1. Zauberding, Zauberwesen (RV), unheimliches Wesen (Kauś. S); 2. übernatürliches grosses Wesen höherer Art (AV); 3. yakṣa [i. e., guhyaka or follower of Kubera] (AV. XI, 6, 10 and Gobh. G.S. 3, 4, 281).

The attempt to dispense with a long array of meanings and to make one meaning suffice for all passages is without doubt laudable; but it seems to me that in saying that this meaning is a 'wonderful, mysterious (and therefore sinister) being' or 'a form likely to create feelings of astonishment in the beholder,' the savants above-named have not quite hit the mark, and that these meanings do not, any more than those proposed by Geldner, fit in a number of passages, e.g., in RV. 10, 88, 13; AV. 8, 9, 8 and 11, 2, 24; Sat. Br. 12, 2, 3, 5. I propose therefore to investigate anew here the meaning of this word yakşa.

It is necessary for me to begin first by referring to the close correspondence that exists between the words yakṣa and bhūta in post-Vedic literature. In this literature, yakṣa like bhūta, denotes a class of superhuman beings known as devayonayaḥ in Sanskrit literature (cf. Amarakoša, 1, 11: vidyādharo 'psaro-yakṣa-rakṣo-gandharva-kinnarāḥ | piśāzo guhyakaḥ siddho bhūto 'mī devayonayaḥ), and as vyantarāḥ in Jaina literature (cf. Uttarādhyayana, p. 1084: pisāya bhūyā jakkhā ya rakkhasā kinnarā ya kimpurisā | mahoragā ya gandhavvā aṭṭhavihā vāṇam-antarā and Tattvārthādhigama-sūtra, 4, 12). These beings are represented as dwelling in unoccupied houses, in trees, forests or woods, ponds, etc., which are then said to be possessed, adhiṣṭhita, by them; compare Geldner, l.c., p. 143, Jātaka stories, No. 154 and 155, and Hopkins, Epic Mythology, p. 36, and Index, s.v. yakṣa. To Yakṣas as to Bhūtas², temples were built, adoration paid and bali offered; and festivals, yātrāḥ or utsavāḥ, were instituted in their honour. They were invoked in times of danger, and vows were taken in honour of them at such times and also when people prayed for the fulfilment of any desire. Compare for instance the following passages from the Jñātādharmakathā:—

&lt;sup>2</sup> The investigations of anthropologists have shown that belief in the existence, and worship, of evil spirits (demons) plays a prominent role in the religious speculations and practices of primitive people everywhere in the world; and the opinion has expressed by writers on Vedic religion and mythology that such belief and worship were prevalent among the Āryans of Rgvedic times. Thus Oldenberg (Religion des Veda, p. 55f.) believes that the existence of such belief and practice is unmistakably indicated by certain details of the Vedic cult; and Hillebrandt (Ved. Myth., III, p. X) says that the belief in the existence of evil spirits is met with to a small extent in the RV, and that the worship too of evil spirits must have been prevalent at the time though, as he thinks, no trace of such worship is to be seen in the RV. As we know from later literature that the worship of Yaksas and Bhūtas was general and wide-spread, it is permissible to infer that the worship of evil spirits in Rgvedic times too must have, to a great extent, consisted in the worship of Yaksas and Bhūtas, or at least, that Yaksas and Bhūtas were included in the evil spirits that received worship in the time of the RV.

Jñātā., p. 409, bhūyagharāņi ya) or simply bhūta (cp. Jñātā., p. 417, nāgāni ya bhūyāni ya jakkhāni ya cited above). The generic term caitya was used to denote either class of temples--those of yakşas or of bhūtas: compare Uttarādhyayanasūtra, p. 162, Antarañjikāpuryām bhūtagrham caityam; yakkha-cetiyāni in Buddhaghosa's Sumangalavilāsini on Mahāparinibbāna itta, 1. 4; and Abhayacandra's explanation of caitya as vyantarāyatanam in his commentary on the Jñātā., q. 7. These caityas seem to have played a prominent pair in the religious life of the city or town in which they were situated. In the Jaina-sūtras specially, one finds that whenever the name of a town or city is mentioned, the name of the caitya situated in it is also almost invariably mentioned; see, for instance, Jñātā., p. 1509, 1515ff. and Vipākasūtra, pp. 241ff. 7 The Buddhist Pāli books too sometimes mention caityas in connection with towns; e.g., the Suppatițțha-cetiya in Rājagrha is mentioned in the Vinaya-piṭaka, Mahāvagga, I, 22, 1; and the Capala, Udena, Sattambaka, and Bahuputta cetivas in Vesāli are mentioned in Digha., Mahāparinibbānasutta, 3. 1. So kārayet; p. 243, pratipannam caityasthāne rātrau . . . upahāram kārayet; p. 56, caitya-punyasthāna-vana-setubandhāh kāryāḥ. In all these instances, the juxtaposition of the word devāyatana shows that the word caitya means 'temple of yakṣa or bhūta' and the compound devāyatana-caitya means 'temples dedicated to gods and to evil spirits.' The presiding deity of the Daṇḍapāṇi temple in Benares, that pious devotees visit every day, is also a yakṣa, as is related in ch. 32 of the Kāsīkhanḍa.

The worship of yakşas and bhūtas is referred to in the Bhagavad-gītā, where it is said in XVII, 4,9 and IX, 25 to that sātvika people worship gods (deva), rājasa people vaksas and rāksasas, and tāmasa people, ghosts (preta) and hosts of bhūtas, and that the worshippers of bhūtas go to them while the worshippers of the Lord go to Him. Yaksas and bhūtas are both objects of tarpana (with water) in the daily brahma-yajña rite prescribed for the householder of the first three castes (cp- $\bar{A}$ s. GS. 3, 4, 1). Similarly, the bhūtayajña, which consists in the offering of bali to bhūtas, (compare TA. 2, 10: yad bhūtebhyo balin harati tad bhūtayajñam) is also daily prescribed for such householders (cp. ibid., 3, 1). The yakşa-bali rite " is referred to by Ujvaladatta in his scholium on the Unadisutras, 4, 123, in the Jataka Stories No. 347 and 455, while its wide prevalence is attested by the common saying yakşānurūpo balih: 'As is the yakşa, so is the bali '(that is, the bali corresponds to the yakşa; if the yakşa is great, the bali offered will be considerable: if the yakşa is negligible, the bali too is negligible) cited by Śańkara in his commentary on the Chān. Up. 6, 32 (see also Laukikanyāyāñjali, II, p. 64: yādṛśo yakṣas tādṛśo baliḥ). TA. 1, 31, 123 gives details of the Vaiśravaṇa-yajña ceremony in which bali is offered to Vaiśravaṇa (i.c. Kubera) who is the lord of Yakṣas, but who is, remarkably enough, referred to by the mantra sarvabhūtādhipataye nama iti (the commentator Bhaṭṭa-bhāskara explains sarvabhūtānām alternatively as yakṣa-guhyakānām) as the 'lord of all bhūtas.'

The fourteenth day of the dark fortnight of every month is known as bliūta-caturdašī and is held sacred to the bhūtas. On that day are performed vratas intended to win the favour of Śiva, lord of the bhūtas; see Hemādri, l.c. p. 50 ff. That day, however, is held consecrated to the Yaksas also, and accordingly, on that day are performed the vratas in which worship is offered to Yaksas (namely, the Ksemavrata, p. 154), and to Vaiśravana, lord of the Yakşas (p. 155). The Saurapurāņa (apud Hemādri, 1.c. p. 156) prescribes the performance on that day of the Kṛṣṇacaturdaśi-vrata, in which the figure of a Yaksa made of bdellium (guggula) should be burnt, and says that in consequence of this vrata, the performer goes to the world of the Pināka-bearer, that is, of Siva, the lord of bhūtas (krsnapakse caturdašyām yaksam guggulakam dahet | sa yāti paramam sthānam yatra devah pinākadhṛk).

It may further be mentioned that according to the Purāṇic mythology, Īśāna (or Rudra) the lord of bhūtas, and Kubera (or Vaiśravaṇa) the lord of Yakṣas, both dwell in the north in the Himālayas and are neighbours, and that the Jaina writers so closely associated yakṣas with bhūtas that in a story related in the Jñātādharma-kathā (Adhyayana 16, p. 1149) the wives of three Brāhmaṇa brothers are respectively named Nāgasiri, Bhūyasiri and Jakkhasiri. 12

The details given above show how close is the correspondence between the words yakşa and bhūta in post-Vedic literature. The correspondence is no less close in Vedic literature also, as can be seen from the comparison of some passages of the Brhad. Upanisad. In this Upanisad, the word mahat is found used as a qualifying epithet in five passages only; in one, it is an epithet of karma (1, 4, 15: mahat punyam karma karoti), while in the other four, it is an epithet of Brahman described as mahad bhūtam in two passages (2, 4, 10: asya mahato bhūtasya niśvasitam etad yad rgvedo yajurvedah . . . . ; 2, 4, 12: idam mahad bhūtam anantam apāram vijnānaghana eva) and as mahad yakşam in two other sentences occurring in 5, 4, 1 (sa yo haitan mahad yakşam prathamajam veda satyam brahmeti; evam etan mahad yaksam prathamajam veda satyam brahmeti). In the same way, to the epithet yakşasya adhyakşam used of Agni Vāisvānara in RV. 10, 88, 13 corresponds the epithet bhūtasya adhyakṣāḥ used in AV. 1, 31, 1 of the four āśāpālāh 'lords of the quarters' (of whom Agni is one); compare also bhūtásya . . . . pátir éka āsīt in RV. 10, 121, 1. Similarly, Sat. Br. 11, 2, 3, 5: mahad dhaiva yakşam bhavati corresponds to Asv. GS. 3, 9, 6: (snātako vai) mahad bhūtam bhavati: and the words yakşa and bhūta are used parallelly in TB. 3, 11, 1, 1: tvayīdam antah | visvam yakşam visvam bhūtam visvan subhūtam.

It follows then from all this, and especially from the correspondence of mahad yakşam with mahad bhūtam in the Upaniṣad passages noted above, that the two words are convertible and that yakṣa=bhūta. And it is remarkable that Bhāskararāya, the famous and most learned Tāntrik writer of the Śākta school, has explained yakṣam in AV. 10, 2, 32, as mahābhūtam. It seems to have been felt by Roth too that yakṣa is equivalent to bhūta; for in the PW (s. v. yakṣa) he has correctly explained yakṣa in AV. 8, 9, 8; RV. 10, 88, 13 and

TB. 3,11,1, as 'die Wesen ' and the word yakşabhṛt in RV. 1, 190, 4, as 'die Wesen tragend, erhaltend.' The commentator Bhaṭṭabhāskara, too, has, on the other hand, as we have seen above, explained the word bhūta in TA. 1, 31, 123 as yakṣaguhyaka. 13

Now the chief meanings of bhūta are (a) being (concrete); such beings in the collective—all beings, the creation, world, universe; a particular class of superhuman beings; evil being, evil spirit; and (b) being (abstract), essence, substance, virtue, might, power, etc. The meanings 'essence, substance, might, power,' etc., are not given by the lexicographers; but, nevertheless, there can be no doubt that bhūta has these meanings quite regularly, for it is derived from the root  $bh\bar{u}$ , which means not only 'to be' but also 'to be powerful, to prevail, to predominate, to be master of'; compare the meanings of the cognate words bhava and prabhava and of the allied word sattva, which is derived likewise from a root (as) meaning 'to be' and which is a synonym of bhūta. And these meanings of bhūta are enough, as I shall show now, to explain the sense of the majority of the passages in which the word vaksa occurs. such passages, vaksa can be paraphrased as bhūta or sattva.

first-born being, Brahman, is verily the Real? For Brahman is verily the Real." The epithet 'first-born,' prathamaja, seems here to be used in the sense of 'first existing'; compare Brhad. Up. 1, 4, 10: brahma vā idam agra āsīt. Compare also TA. 10, 1, 4: prajāpatih prathamajā rtásyātmánātmānam abhí sám babhūva.

Kenopaniṣad, 3, 2: tad dhaiṣām vijajñau tebhyo ha prādurbabhūva tan na vyajānanta kim idam yakṣam iti ||

"It (Brahman) became aware of (this thought of) theirs; it manifested itself before them. They did not know (what it was, and thought within themselves) 'What is this being?'" Hillebrandt (l. c., p. 21) makes out that yakşa refers here to the blade of straw (tṛṇa) that is mentioned later on. This is a mistake and the context shows clearly that yakşa refers to the being that appeared before the gods.

Similarly, yakşa= being, in the other passages of this khanda where this word recurs.

Jaim. Up. Br. 1, 20, 4 [JAOS. 16, 68]: tasminn idam sarvam antaḥ | tad yad asminn idam sarvam antas tasmād antar-yakṣam | antar-yakṣam ha vai nāmaitat | tad antarikṣam iti parokṣam ācakṣate ||

"All this is within it. Because all this is within it therefore is it [called] antar-yakşa. antar-yakşa verily is its name; it is called antarikşa in occult way." antar-yakşa=that which contains all this, that is, all this creation; and the context shows clearly that yakşa here denotes the creation.

"At first, verily, the self-born Brahman existed alone. It considered 'Verily, I alone exist, the great being, That (that is, Brahman); well, I shall create from myself a second god like to me' . . . . At the moisture, wetness, that was produced on its forehead, it felt glad; It 15 said: 'We have verily easily got the great being.'" mahad yakşam, the great being referred to here, is water, apah, which at first appears as sneha ardryam on the forehead and then (see khanda 2) as svedadhārāh, 'streams of perspiration' in the pores of its skin, and is in khanda 3, expressly called by that name  $(t\bar{a} \ \bar{a}pah)$ srstvā anvaiksata). Regarding the creation of Water first by the Brahman, compare Manu, 1, 8: apa eva sasarjādau tāsu vīryam avāsrjat; Śākuntala, 1, 1 which refers to Water as  $y\bar{a}$  srstih srastur  $\bar{a}dy\bar{a}$ ; Ait, Up. 1, 1 f.: sa īksata lokān nu srjā iti sa imān lokān asrjatāmbho marīcīr maram āpah; Sat. It is said frequently in the Upanisads and elsewhere that Brahman, after the desire to create arose in it, performed tapas; and this has led to tapas being regarded as the first thing created by Brahman. Compare Sāyaṇa's commentary on this verse: yoyam tapobhimānī devah sa prathamajah | tathā copaniṣadi sṛṣṭi-prakaraṇe prathamajatvam āmnāyate | sokāmayata bahu syām prajā-yeyeti sa tapotapyata; compare also AV. 11, 8, 6: tápo ha jajñe kármaṇas tát té jyeṣṭhám úpāsata 'Tapas was born from action; that did they worship as the eldest.'

"Within thee is all being, all creation, all prosperity." This is a formula that is used twenty-four times (with variations in the number of the second personal pronoun when required by the context) in respect of the twenty-four bricks, iṣṭakāḥ, used in the Nāciketa-cayana. These bricks are identified with the earth, waters, sky, etc., and each of these is panegyrised as the container of the whole universe. The expressions viśvam yakṣam and viśvam bhūtam mean almost the same thing; compare also TA. 10, 16, 1: viśvam bhūtam bhuvanam citram, which corresponds exactly to viśvam yakṣam viśvam bhūtam viśvam subhūtam here.

AV. 8, 9, 8: yām prácyutām ánu yajñāḥ pracyávanta upatiṣṭhanta upatiṣṭhamānām |
sā virāḍ ṛṣayah paramé vyòman ||

"After whom, when she is going, the sacrifices go and with whose approach they approach; following whose ordinance and through whose impulse, the world moves,—she, O sages, is the Virāj in the highest heaven." This verse is the answer given by Kaśyapa to the inquiry made in the preceding verse by the six sages about the nature of Virāj who is said to be the father of Brahman. In contrast with pracyutām and pracyavanta in the first pāda, one expects pratiṣṭhamānām and pratiṣṭhanta in the second pāda ('after whom, when she is going, the sacrifices go and when she is firmly established, are firmly established') instead of upatiṣṭhamānām and upatiṣṭhanta that are found there. It is not therefore improbable that these latter words are here used in the sense of pratiṣṭhamānām and pratiṣṭhanta. Compare Praśnopaniṣad, 2, 4: tasminn utkrāmaty athetare sarva evotkrāmante tasmins ca pratiṣṭhamāne sarva eva pratiṣṭhante tad yathā makṣikā madhukara-rājānam utkrāmantam sarva evotkrāmante tasmins ca pratiṣṭhamāne sarva eva prātiṣṭhante 'when it (sc. the prāṇa) departs, all the others depart, and when it stays fast, all others stay fast; just as, when the king-bee departs all the bees depart and when he stays fast, all stay fast.'

It will be seen that the second half-verse speaks of the whole universe being controlled by, and obeying the impulse of, the Virāj, while the first half-verse speaks, seemingly, of the sacrifices only, vajñāh, going when the Virāj goes and coming (or staying) when the Virāj comes (or stays). This is, to say the least, incongruous, and the more so as the sacrifices are not such important things as to deserve mention in this connection. One would rather expect in the first half-verse also mention to be made of the whole universe going and coming (or staying) according as the Virāj goes and comes (or stays); compare the word sarve in the Upanisad passage sarva evotkrāmante . . . . sarva eva pratisthante cited above. I am therefore led to believe that the word vajñāh here in the first half-verse denotes 'universe,' that is, that it has the same meaning as the word yakşa in the second half-verse. In other words, the view of the Indian commentators that sees in vaksa a derivative from the root vai seems to be justified by the parallelism here of the two words vajña and vakşa.

"Who then is the bull, who the sole seer, what the abode and what the desires? The being that on earth is one-fold,-who is he? The bull is one, one the sole seer and one-grouped are the desires. The being that on earth is one-fold, he is not different." M. Boyer, following Henry, has understood these verses as referring to the sun (aditya), that is, to the sun considered as the supreme Being. This is not incorrect; but I believe that it is preferable to refer the verses, with Geldner, (l.c. p. 129) to Brahman itself, to the Virāj that is spoken of in the opening verses of this hymn. The Brahman is ekarsi, the sole seer, because from it come forth as its breath, the Rgveda, Yajurveda, Sāmaveda, etc.; see Brhad. Up. 2, 4, 10: asya mahato bhūtasya niśvasitam etad yad rgvedo yajurvedah sāmavedo 'tharvāngirasa itihāsah purānam vidyā upanisadah slokāh sūtrāny anuvyākhyānāni vyākhyānāny asyaivaitāni sarvāni nisvasitāni. The Brahman is ekavrt, one-fold, because it is one and changeless; compare Bh. Gītā, 12, 3: sarvatragam acintyain ca kūtastham acalam dhruvam 16 "The imperishable Brahman that is all-pervading, unthinkable, unchanging, immutable, eternal"; it is the dhāma or abode (of all); compare ibid. 11, 38: vettāsi vedyam ca param ca dhāma 'Thou art the knower, and the known; (thou art) the supreme abode '; ibid. 10, 12: param brahma param dhāma pavitram paramam bhavān 'Thou art the supreme Brahman, the supreme abode, the highest purifier'; Gaudapāda-kārikā, 4, 100: durdarsam atigam-

bhiram ajam sāmyam visāradam buddhvā padam anānātvam namaskurmo yathābalam; and Maitryupanishad, 6, 38: tatah suddhah sattvāntarastham acalam amrtam acyutam dhruvam vişnu-samjñitam sarvāparam dhāma satvakāma-sarvajnatvasamvuktam . . . . . pašvati. the Brahman are all asisah or desires; compare Ch. Up. 8, 1, 5: ctat satyam brahmapuram asmin kāmāh samāhitāh 'In this citadel, namely Brahman (so Sankara explains the word brahmapuram), are placed all desires'; Maitryupanisad, 6, 30: atra hi sarve kāmāh samāhitāh 'Here (in the Brahman) are all desires placed'; Ait. Up. 5, 2: sankalpah kratur asuh kāmo vaśa iti sarvāny evaitāni prajnānasya nāmadheyāni bhavanti ... prajnānam brahma 'sankalpa, kratu, asu, kāma, vasa—all these are names of only prajñana.... prajñāna is Brahman.' The Brahman is ekartu, oneseasoned, because perhaps there is no succession of days and nights in Brahmaloka, or to the Brahman there is but only one long unending day, and hence only one 'season'; compare Ch. Up. 8, 4, 1: naitam setum ahorātre taratah . . . . etam setum tīrtvāpi naktam ahar evābhinispadyate sakrd-vibhāto hy evaisa brahmalokah "This bridge is not crossed by day and night; having crossed this bridge, even night becomes day; in this Brahmaloka it is always day "; ibid., 3, 11, 3: na ha vā asmā udeti na nimlocati sakrd divā hāsmai bhavati ya etām evam brahmopanisadam veda "To him who thus knows the Brahma-mystery, there is no sun-rise and no sun-set; it is day to him once for all." Compare also Gaudapādakārikā, 3, 35: tad eva nirbhayam brahma . . . ajam anidram asvapnam . . . sakrdvibhātam sarvajnam "That is the fearless Brahman . . . . unborn, sleepless, dreamless . . . . all-knowing, to which it is always day "; and Muktikopanisad, 2, 73: sakrd-vibhātam tv ajam ekam aksaram | alepakam sarvagatam yad advayam tad eva cāham sakalam viniukta om.

M. Boyer, in the course of his explanation of these verses, says (p. 419) that, a priori, there is no reason to suppose that the five questions in v. 25 refer to the same person or thing, but that, as a matter of fact, the answers in v. 26 are capable of being referred to one deity, namely the sun. This is because he understands the last pada of v. 26 to mean that 'the marvel (as already said above, yakṣa=merveille in M. Boyer's opinion) on the earth . . . . is not surpassed by any.' It seems to me however that the words nāti ricyate should be understood, not as 'is not surpassed' but as 'does not remain over; is not different', and that therefore these words in v. 26 refer to the same subject, and that hence the questions in v. 25 too refer to the same subject.

"The fortress of the gods has eight wheels (i.e., circumvallations) and nine doors and is inexpugnable; in it is a sheath of gold, heaven, enveloped in splendour; verily, the Brahma-knowers know the animate being that is in this sheath of gold which has three spokes and is thrice-supported. Into this resplendent, yellow, invincible fortress of gold, enveloped in glory, entered the Brahman,"

The fortress of the gods is, as Sāyaņa (on TA. 1, 27. 2-3) explains, the human body; the nine doors are the nine apertures of the body, namely, the two ears, the two eyes, the two nostrils (or according to others, the nose and the brahma-randhra), the mouth, the upastha and  $p\bar{a}yu$ : and the eight wheels are the eight dhātavah or 'elements' of the body-tvac (skin), asrj (blood), medas (fat), asthin (bone), majjan (marrow), sukra (semen), māmsa (flesh), and ojas. The sheath of gold within it is the heart which is the abode of the atman: compare TA. 10, 11, 2: padmakośú-pratikāśań hrdúvam capvadhómukham | ádho nistyá vitastyante nabhyám upari tísthati || jvālamālākulam bhāti visvásvāvatanám mahat . . . . tásmin sarvám prátisthitam . . . . tásya mádhye mahan agnih . . . . tásya mádhye váhnisikhā . . . . tásyāh sikhāyā madhye parámātmā vyavásthitah | sá bráhmā sá hárih séndrah sóksarah paramáh svarát || " Like to a lotus-bud. the heart, facing downwards, is (situated) one span below the neck (that is, below the top of the windpipe), and above the navel. This great abode of all (of the world) is shining, being full of rings of flames . . . . in it is established everything . . . in its midst is a great fire . . . . in it is a flame . . . . in the midst of this flame is established the supreme ātman; he is Brahmā, he Hari (Viṣṇu), he Indra, he the imperishable supreme lord." Compare also Yogatattvopanisad, 1, 9: hrdi sthāne sthitam padmam tac ca padmam adhomukham; Dhyanabindūpanisad, 12: ūrdhvanālam adhomukham | kadalīpuspasamkāšam sarvadevamayāmbujam; Ch. Up. 8, 1, 1: asmin brahmapure daharam pundarīkam vesma "In this abode of Brahman (i.e., the body) is a small lotus chamber."

The epithets tryara and tripratisthita are not very clear. In Ch. Up. 8, 1, 3 17 we read that the  $\bar{a}k\bar{a}sa$  of the heart contains everything, heaven, earth, agni,  $v\bar{a}yu$ , etc.

The word tryara may therefore perhaps refer to the three worlds and all other similar triplicities as being contained in the heart; compare Yogatattvopaniṣad, 1, 6: trayo lokās trayo vedās trayah sandhyās trayah surāh | trayognayo guṇās trīṇi sthitāh sarve trayākṣare. The trayākṣara or praṇava is thus said to contain within itself the three worlds, the three Vedas, the three sandhyās, etc.; and as the heart is, like the praṇava, a seat, adhiṣṭhāna, of the Supreme, these triplicities may all be regarded as being contained in the heart and as forming the arāḥ or spokes thereof referred to by the epithet tryara.

The epithet tripratisthita refers perhaps to the three states of the heart spoken of in Yogatattvopaniṣad, 1, 1: akāre šocitam padmam ukāreṇaiva bhidyate | makāre labhate nādam ardhamatrā tu nišcalā which seems to mean: "When a is pronounced, the lotus (of the heart) brightens (becomes ready to open?); it opens when u is pronounced; and begins to hum when ma is pronounced; it is immobile when the ardhamātrā is pronounced." Now a, u, and ma are said (in the Māṇḍūkyopaniṣad, Gauḍapāda-kārikā, and elsewhere) to be the pādas or feet of the praṇava which thus rests or is supported on them. Similarly, the heart when it brightens, the heart when it opens, and the heart when it is humming, may be considered the feet or supports of the praṇava or Brahman.

The word svarga in the fourth pāda of v. 31 is usually interpreted as 'heavenly', svargatulya, etc. There is however no necessity for abandoning the usual meaning of the word, namely, 'heaven'; for this word is often used to denote the supreme heaven or Brahmaloka where the Brahman dwells (compare Bṛhad. Up. 4, 4, 8: dhīvā apiyanti brahmavidah svargam lokam and Śankara's comment: svargaloka-śabdas triviṣṭapa-vācy api sann iha prakaraṇān mokṣābhidhāyakah; Ch. 8, 3, 2-3: imāh prajā ahar-ahar gacchantya etam brahmalokam na vindanti . . . . tasmād dhṛdayam ahar-ahar vā evamvit svaragam lokam eti and Śankara's comment thereon). It is so used here also as is made quite clear by the reading of the parallel passage in TA. 1, 27, 3: tasyān hiranmayah kośah | svargo loko jyotiṣā vṛtah.

With regard to the word astācakrā, it has been observed by M. Boyer (l.c. p. 436) that Sayana has explained the word cakra in it as āvaraņa, or circumvallation enclosing the body that is regarded as a fortress, in his commentary on TA. 1, 27, 3,18 while in his commentary on AV. 11, 4, 22 he has explained the word as 'wheel' serving as the means for locomotion of the body that is here regarded as a chariot. This is because TA. 1, 27, 3 refers distinctly to a fort,  $\rho \bar{u} h$ , while AV. 11, 4, 22 refers equally distinctly to a chariot (compare the words ekanemi 'having one rim' and sahasrākṣara which Sāyaṇa explains as 'having a thousand axles' used in it). The discrepancy therefore, if any, is to be attributed to the texts themselves and not to Sayana who had to explain them faithfully as they stood. But is there really a discrepancy here? I am disposed to think that there is none; the meanings 'circumvallation' and 'wheel' are not mutually exclusive, and in all probability they are both intended (see p. 21 above) by the word cakra in aştācakrā which would thus mean 'having eight circumvallations and eight wheels to move with' or 'having ramparts and moving.' In other words, the fort,  $p\bar{u}h$ , spoken of in AV. 10, 2, 31, seems to be a mobile fort, jangamo durgah or carişnüh püh. Such a mobile fort is, besides the 'firm' forts, drdhāh purah, that are frequently mentioned, known to the RV which refers to one in 8, 1, 28: tvám púram carisnvám vadhaíh susnásya sám pinak "Thou (O Indra), didst shatter with thy

From the descriptions given of the Tripura and of the pura of the Paulomas and Kālakeyas (this was named Hiranyapura), it will be seen that not only were these mobile forts, moving in the sky according to the desire of the kings dwelling in them, but they were also provided with high ramparts and gates and they were impregnable to the assaults of gods (deva), Danavas, Yaksas, etc. The fort named Hiranyapura was, in addition, 'as bright as Agni (fire) and Sūrya (sun)' and 'better than the abode of Brahman'; and these descriptions recall the expressions devānām ayodhyā pūh 19 (in v. 31), aparājitā pūh (in v. 33), hiranyayah, jyotisā vrtah, svargah, prabhrājamāna, vašasā samparīvrta in the above verses as also the expressions aṣṭācakrā and navadvārā. All these traits and especially the one about Hiranyapura being better than the abode of Brahman seem to me to point particularly to the description of the brahmapura and the kośa therein that is brilliant, prabhrājamāna, yellow, harinī, surrounded with glory, yaśasā samparīvrta, and golden, hiranyayī, that is contained in the above verses (AV. 10, 2, 31-33) and to be based thereon. In any case, they make it probable that the word cakra in astācakrā signifies circumvallations and at the same time mobility also. Compare Kathopanisad 1, 3, 3: ātmānam rathinam viddhi sarīram ratham eva ca buddhim tu sārathim viddhi manah pragraham eva ca, and other similar passages which compare the body to a chariot.

This mode of interpretation which makes the verses refer to the human body does not find favour with M. Boyer, who has observed (l.c. p. 438) that the wording of verses 31 and 33 is such that they can not but both refer to the same thing. The expression aparājitā pūḥ in v. 33 therefore must denote the same thing as the expression ayodhyā pūh of v. 31; and though the epithets astācakrā and navadvārā may be said to be quite appropriate to the human body, it is hardly possible, he observes, to say the same of the epithets prabhrājamānā, harinī, yasasā samparīvrtā and hiranyayī used in v. 33. M. Boyer therefore thinks that the verses refer to a celestial citadel of Brahman, and that the kośa, sheath, which is referred to as being within the citadel, is the sun. According to this interpretation, too, the citadel referred to is a mobile one provided with gates and cakras or means for locomotion (the numbers nine and eight, however, in the epithets aṣṭācakrā and navadvārā says M. Boyer, have no particular significance beyond that of multiplicity). The 'sheath' spoken of being the sun, the epithets svarga (which M. Boyer explains as 'celeste'), jyotiṣā vṛta and hiranyaya are quite in place; the epithets tryara and tripratisthita refer to the three worlds as being contained in the sun and as being the support ( $pratisth\bar{a}$ ) of the sun.

This interpretation of M. Boyer or one very like it, is, for a reason that will presently be mentioned, quite possible. The objection however that he has raised against referring the verses to the human body can, it seems to me, be easily met. The 'fortress that is impregnable to the assaults of the gods even,' devānām  $ayodhy\bar{a} p\bar{u}h$ , mentioned in v. 31 as having eight circumvallations and nine gates is not the same as the aparājitā former verse is the body that is elsewhere also referred to as pūh or pura (compare Bh. Gītā, 5, 13: navadvāre pure dehī naiva kurvan na kārayan; Švet. Up. 3, 18: purah puruşa āvisad iti | sa vā ayam puruşah sarvāsu pūrsu purisayah; TA. 10, 10, 3; yat pundarīkam puramadhya-sanstham; Ch. Up. 8, 1, 1 yad idam asmin brahmapure daharam pundarikam vesma, etc.), while the fortress mentioned in v. 33 is the heart that is also sometimes referred to as pura or brahmapura, compare Mundakopanisad, 2, 2, 7: divye brahmapure hy eşa vyomny ātmā pratisthitah (Roth in the PW. s. v. explains brahmapura as 'heart'); Atmabodhopanisad, 1: yad idam brahmapuram pundarīkam tasmāt tadid-ābha-mātram; Nārāyanopanisad, 5: tad idam puram puņdarīkam. This is shown by the epithet hiranyaya that is common to the kośa of vv. 31, 32 and the  $p\bar{u}h$  of v. 33, as also by the parallelism of the expression jyotisā vrta in v. 31 with yasasā samparīvrta in v. 33. Now this heart has been described, in TA. 10, 11, 2 cited above as 'shining' and 'full of rings of flames.' It is described as hiranyaya 'golden' in Mundakopanisad 2, 2, 8. The epithets prabhrājamāna, harita, yasasā sampariveta, and hiranyaya of v. 33 can all be therefore appropriately used of the heart, and the incongruity pointed out by M. Boyer does not in fact exist.

These verses, as also the corresponding ones in the Taittirīya Āraņyaka (1, 27, 3) are explained by the writers on Sākta Tantrism-e.g., by Laksmīdhara in his commentary on v. 11 of the Saundaryalahari or Anandalaharī, by Bhāskararāya in his commentary on Latitāsahasranāma and also in his commentary, named Setubandha, on the Vāmakesvara-tantra of Nityāsodaśikārnava-as referring to the Śrī-cakra. As the Śrīcakra is, as is well-known, a symbol of the human body (see on this point the Bhāvanopanişad, Tantrarāja-tantra edited by A. Avalon and the Vāmakešvaratantra mentioned above), such interpretation is not so far-fetched as it may at first sight seem to be; and what is more, it has also to be admitted that the Tantrik interpretation brings out the meaning of the various epithets more strongly and clearly than the usual interpretation does. reproduce 20 here as a specimen that given in the Setubandha (p. 189) where, as I have already observed,

Bhāskararāya explains the term yakşam as mahābhūtam pūjanīyam: tathā cātharvaņāh Saunaka-śākhīyā āmananti astācakrā navadvārā devānām pūr ayodhyā tasyām hiranyayah kosah svargo jyotisā vrtah tusmin hiranyaye kose tryare tripratisthite | tasmin yad yaksam ātmanvat tad vai brahma | taittirīya-śākhāyām prathamāntam iti višesah trailokyamohanādi-sarvasiddhipradānta-cakrāstakayuktam nava-yoni-ghatitam anyeşām asādhyam devatāvāsabhūtam Śri-cakra-nagaram vat tatrāpy uttamah kośo jyotirmayah svarga-tulyas trikona-nāmako 'sti | tasmin kone tridhā pratisthitam tri-samasti-svarūpam bindu-cakram asti\tasmin bindu-cakre svātmanīva yad yakşam mahābhūtam pūjanīvam tad brahmaiveti vāsanām ajnā (sic) jānanti. Substantially the same explanation 21 of these two verses is given by him in his Lalitāsahasranāmabhāşya (p. 179 of the Nirnayasagara ed.); but yakşa is here explained as pūjyam only.

I have said above that the explanation of M. Boyer or one similar to it, which makes the verses refer to the sun as being the citadel in which Brahman dwells, is a quite possible one; and I have also said that the explanation of Bhāskararāya and other Tāntriks that makes them refer to the Śrī-cakra, is not a far-fetched one. I have further given an explanation of these verses above on the line followed by Sāyaṇa, which makes them refer to the human body. The reason why so many explanations are possible of these verses is this: the verses refer to the ātmanvad yakṣam(=ātmanvad bhūtam or bhūtātman) or the soul, dwelling in a kośa. Now the soul in the body is identical with the puruṣa in the sun according to the teaching of the Upanisads; compare Taitt. Up. 3, 10, 4: sa yaś cayam puruse | yaś casav aditye | sa ekah; Maitryupanisad, 7, 7: yaś cāyam hrdaye yaś cāsā āditye sa esa ekah; and this explains why the kośa mentioned in v. 32 can be understood as the human heart or as the sun. The Śrī-cakra, too, as I have said above, is a symbol of the human body, and therefore the Tantrik explanation of the verses is, in essence, one that refers to such body. Similarly the Upanisadic doctrine of the sun being identical with Brahman (compare Ch. Up. 3, 19, 1: āditvo brahmetv ādešah and TA. 2, 2, 2: asāv āditvo brahma) explains why some verses of the AV where the word vaksa occurs have been referred to the sun by Henry and Boyer, and to Brahman by Geldner. In these verses vaksa in effect refers to the Brahman, even where the interpretations do not contain that word at all, but refer instead to the sun or the soul.

AV. 10, 8, 43: puṇḍárīkam návadvāram tribhír guṇébhir āvṛtam tásmin yád yakṣám ātmanvát tád vai brahmavido viduḥ ||

"The lotus that has nine doors and that is enveloped thrice,—verily the knowers of Brahman know the animate being in it." The 'lotus with nine doors' is, like the sheath, kośa, in the 'fortress with nine gates' in the verse explained above, the heart in the human body. The 'nine doors' are those of the human body, and the 'lotus' can be said to have them in a figurative sense only. The 'triple envelope' seems, as suggested by M. Boyer, to consist of satya (truth), yasas (glory) and śrīh (beauty) which are said in AV. 12, 5, 2: satyénávrtā śriya pravrta yaśasa parivrta to be the envelopes of the Brāhmana's cow, brahmagavī; compare the epithet ivotisā vrtah of the kośa mentioned in AV. 10, 2, 31 and the epithet yaśasā samparīvṛta used (in v. 33 of the same hymn) of the aparājitā pūh which, as I have said above, refers to the heart. Geldner explains the expression tribhir gunebhir āvṛtam as 'enveloped by the three gunas (i.e., sattva, rajas and tamas).'

AV. 10, 7, 38: mahád yaksám bhúvanasya mádhye tápasi krāntám salilásya pṛṣṭhé | tásmiñ chrayante yá u ké ca devā vṛkṣásya skándhaḥ paríta iva śākhāḥ ||

"The great being in the centre of the world has passed into tapas and into the back of the water; they that are gods (that is, all the gods) rest attached in it as the branches of a tree round the trunk." The hymn 10, 7 in which this verse occurs is addressed to Skambha which, according to the Culikopanisad (v. 11), is another name of Brahman. The 'great being in the centre of the world,' referred to here, is therefore the Brahman; and the word krantam in the second pada refers to the 'passing' or transformation of Brahman into tapas and water—an idea which we have met with above (p. 164), where it was said that lapas and water were first created by Brahman or were first born of Brahman. This verse, however, speaks instead of 'creation' or 'birth' (utpatti of the later Naiyāyikas; compare the preceding verse but one, yáh śrámāt tápaso jātó lokān sárvān samānasé tásmai jyeştháya bráhmane námah referring apparently to water) from Brahman, of the 'passing' or transformation (parināma of the Sānkhya system,) of Brahman into tapas and Water; and it is very remarkable that the parinama doctrine of the Sānkhyas should be thus met with in the AV. With regard to the gods resting in the Brahman, compare RV. 1, 164, 39: rcó aksáre paramé vyòman yásmin devå ádhi vísve nişedúh; Kathopanisad, 2, 1, 9: tam devāh sarve 'rpitāh: Kausītaki Up. 2, 9: sa tud bhavati yatraite devāh. The word prsthe has no particular significance here; the expression salilasya prothe is simply equivalent to salile.

AV. 10, 8, 15: dūrė pūrnėna vasati dūrá ūnėna hīyate | mahád yaksám bhúvanasya mádhye tásmai balím rāstrabhito bharanti ||

"It lives far from the full; it is abandoned in the distance by the not-full. The great being in the centre of the universe—to it bring tribute the rulers of kingdoms." The great being at the centre of the universe is of course the Brahman that is far removed from the full and the not-full, from the big and the not-big, from the small and the not-small, etc.; compare the passage nyūnam anyat sthānam sampūrnam anyat (the author of the Ratnaprabhā calls this a śruti) cited by Śankara in the Brahmasūtra-bhāsya in the course of his introduction to the Anandamayadhikarana along with Brhad. Up, 3, 8, 8: asthūlam ananv ahrasvam adīrgham "It is not big, not small, not short, not long." rāṣṭrabhṛtah means, not feudatories (as M. Boyer understands), but those who rule kingdoms, or kings, that is, as Geldner has pointed out, the gods, the chief gods; compare AV. 13, 1, 35: yé devá rastrablito 'bhito vánti súryam "The kingdomruling gods who go round the sun"; and ibid. 10, 7, 39 yasmai hústābhyām pādābhyām vācā srótrena cúksusā: vásmai deváh sáda balím pravácchanti "To which the gods always render tribute with the two hands, with the two feet, with speech, hearing and with sight." These passages make it probable that the 'gods' spoken of here are the same as those mentioned in the Prasnopanisad, 2, 1-2: bhagavan katy eva devāh prajām vidhārayante katara etat prakāšayante kah punar eşām varistha iti . . . . ākāšo ha vā eşa devo vāyur agnir āpah pṛthivī vāi manas cakşuh srotram ca "How many gods, O venerable, uphold the creature (i.e., the body)? Which of them illumine it? And which again of them is the greatest? These gods verily are Akasa, Vayu, Agni, Water, Earth, Speech, Mind, Eye and Ear", that is to say, the pranas. Compare the story related in Brhad. Up. 6, 1 about the dispute that arose amongst the pranas as to who was the best and how the mukhya-prāna in whose favour the dispute was settled, made the others pay tribute to itself (6, 1, 13: tasyo me balim kuruteti tatheti): compare also

"May the manas (mind), that is in men, by means of which the wise ones, clever and intelligent, perform the rites in the sacrifice, in the religious ceremonies—may the manas that is in me, be auspiciously inclined." This mantra is the second of the six sivasamkalpa-mantras that are found in the beginning of ch. 34 of the VS. The epithets applied to manas in these verses show that the manas spoken of is not the mind in men, but the ego or soul or Brahman; compare for instance, the epithet jyótiṣām jóytih in v. 1, hrt-prátistham in v. 6, and the description yát prajñanam utá céto dhátis ca váj jyótir antár amátam prajāsu in v. 3, and vásminn reah sama vájūnsi vásmin prátisthitā rathanābhāv ivārāh | yásmins cittán sárvam ótam prajánām in v. 5. Hence the description of this manas in this verse as apūrvam vaksam which means not only 'wonderful being,' as interpreted above, but also 'the being before which none existed; first-born being'; compare Brhad. Up. 2, 5, 19: tad ctad brahmāpūrvam anaparam anantaram abāhyam. Compare also Ait. Ār., 5, 1, 1: mana ivāpūrvam vāyur iva slokabhūr bhūyāsam "May I be ever new like manas (mind) the origin of śloka (sound; fame; Sayana, however, explains as sangha) like Vāyu," and Sāyaņa's comment thereon: uttarottaram abhivrddhikānkşayā prayatamānam sat tattat-phala-prāptyā nūtanam rūpam pratipadyate.

RV. 1, 190, 4: asyá ślóko diviyate prthivyám átyo ná yamsad yaksabhéd vícetāḥ | mṛgāṇām ná hetáyo yánti cemá béhaspáter áhimāyān abhí dyún ||

"His voice rushes in heaven and in earth. He, the supporter of the universe, the wise, raised (his shouts or chants) as a horse (does his neigh). These chants of Brhaspati go forth, like missiles on beasts, on the enemies who are as crafty as Ahi," yaksabhit = the supporter of the universe, as Roth has correctly explained. It is the equivalent of the word bhūtabhrt which is also used in the same sense; compare Bh. Gītā, 9, 5: bhūtabhṛn na ca bhūtastho mamātmā bhūtabhāvanaḥ, 'supporting the universe but not in it'; and Mahābhārata, 13, 254, 16 (Visnu-sahasranāma): bhūtakrd bhūtabhrd bhāvah. I follow Geldner in supplying ślokam in the second pāda as object of the verb yamsat, and in understanding abhi dyun (ought we not rather to read  $abhidy\bar{u}n$  as one word?) as 'attackers' or 'enemies'. After imāh in the third pāda, we have to understand vācah, girah or other similar word meaning 'words; chants', which Brhaspati as purohita makes use of on behalf of his patron (see Geldner, l.c., p. 137). These rush on the enemies and destroy them, as the arrows of a hunter speed towards the beasts and destroy them; compare p. 141 f. above and the Raghuvamsa verse (1, 61) cited there, addressed by King Dilīpa to his purohita: tava mantrakyto mantrair dūrāt prašamitāribhih pratyādisyanta iva me drsta-laksya-bhidah sarāh "My arrows that are able to pierce such objects only as are visible to me are made to recede to the background by the mantras (spells) that have been employed by you, the mantra-maker, and that kill enemies from a far distance." Note here too the comparison of the purchita's spells with arrows shot at some object.

nákṣatram pratnám áminac cariṣṇú
yakṣásyādhyakṣam taviṣám brhántam ||

"The worshipful wise ones, the gods, engendered Agni Vaiśvānara, the imperishable, the ancient, mobile luminary (star), the supervisor of the universe, the mighty, the great." yakṣasya adhyakṣam or 'supervisor of the universe' is equivalent' to 'lord of the universe'; compare 1, 98, 1: vaiśvānarásya sumataú syāma rājā hi kam bhúvanānām abhiṣrīh | itó jātó viśvam idám vi caṣṭe vaiśvānaró yatate sūryeṇa "May we dwell in the favour of Vaiśvānara; he is the king and the ornament of the world. Born from here, Vaiśvānara beholds this world; he competes with the sun." Vaiśvānara is thus, in this latter verse, a being different from the sun, while in the former (10, 88, 13) the words nákṣatram áminac cariṣṇú seem to indicate that Vaiśvānara is identical with the sun.

Šat. Br. 11, 4, 3, 5: te haite brahmaņo mahatī yakṣe |
sa yo haite brahmaņo mahatī yakṣe
veda mahad dhaiva yakṣam bhavati ||

"These two (sc.  $n\bar{a}ma$  and  $r\bar{u}pa$ ; name and form) are the two great beings (that is, forms, ex-istences) of Brahman. He who knows these two great beings (that is, forms, ex-istences) of Brahman, becomes himself a great being."

Kauśika-sūtra, 95, 1: atha yatraitāni yakṣāṇi dṛṣyante tad yathaitan markaṭaḥ ṣvāpado vāyasaḥ puruṣarūpam iti tad evam āśaṅkyam eva bhavati ||

"When these evil beings are seen, as for instance, an evil being having the form of a monkey, or of a beast of prey, or of a crow, or of man, then the same apprehension is to be felt." The word yakṣa here denotes 'evil being', and as monkeys, and crows can not, by themselves, be said to be evil beings, it follows that the words markaṭaḥ and vāyasaḥ denote evil beings having that form; compare RV. 7, 104, 18: rakṣásaḥ sám pinaṣṭana | váyo yé bhūtvī patáyanti naktábhiḥ "Crush the demons who fly about at nights after having become (i.e., in the form of) birds." In other words, the word rūpam that forms the last element of the compound puruṣarūpam, connects itself with each of the foregoing words markatah, śvāpadah and vāyasah forming the compounds markatarūpam, śvāpadarūpam and vāyasarūpam (which together with purusarūpam are in apposition with, and qualify, the word vaksāni). Now according to later grammatical usage the words markata, śvāpada, vāyasa and puruşa should be all joined together in a dvandva-compound and such compound be further joined with  $r\bar{u}pa$ , forming a sasthī-tatpurusa, in order that the word rūpa may be connected with all these words—dvandvante śrūyamanam padam pratyckam abhisambadhyate. It is interesting to note that here  $r\bar{u}pa$  connects itself with the words markata, etc., though there is no dvandva or other compound, and the words stand singly in the nominative case. A similar usage is observable in the following mantra also that comes immediately after the above sentence: śvāpado vāyaso vadīdam rāstram jātavedah markatah patāti puruşa-rakşasam işiram yat patāti | dvişantam ete anuyantu sarve parāñco yantu nivartamānāh. Here too the word raksasam that stands at the end of the compound puruşa-rakşasam has to be construed with markatah, śvāpadah and vāyasah also used in the first pāda.

Instead of puruşarūpam (yakşam), the word puruşarakşasam is used in this latter mantra indicating that puruşarūpam yakşam=puruşa-rakşasam or evil being in the form of man.

The word yakşa is found in Kh. 93 also of the Kauśika-sūtra, where too, it has the meaning 'evil being.'

AV. 11, 2, 24: túbhyam āraṇyāḥ paśávo mṛgā váne hitā hamsāḥ suparṇāḥ ŝakunā váyāmsi |

"For thee are the beasts of the jungle, the animals placed in the forests, the swans, the kites, the birds great and small; thy might, O Pasupati, (is felt) in the waters; the divine waters flow for thy enhancement (that is, for the enhancement of thy glory)." In other words, 'the beasts of the jungle, the birds of the air, and the rivers are subject to thy power and act as thou impellest them to act. Thy might is felt in the water, in the air, and on the earth.' This praise is addressed to Pasupati or Rudra as the supreme god; and the ideas expressed here belong to the same class as those expressed in RV. 1, 101, 3: yásya vraté váruno vásya súrvah | vásvéndrasya síndhavah sáscati vratám ('in whose control is Varuna and the sun; whose, Indra's, ordinance is followed by the rivers'); ibid. 2, 28, 4: rtám síndhavo várunasya yanti | ná śrāmyanti ná vi mucanty eté ('the rivers follow the ordinances of Varuna; they flow without tiring, without ceasing.'); AV. 13, 3, 2: vásmād vátā rtutha pávante vásmat samudra ádhi viksáranti ('on account of whom the winds blow in season and the oceans flow'). Compare also Brhad. RV. 5, 70, 4: må kásyādbhutakratū yakṣám bhujemā tanúbhiḥ | må śćṣasā må tánasā ||

"May we not, O ye (Mitra and Varuṇa) who have wonderful strength, feel, either ourselves or in our offspring or in our posterity, the might of any one." That is, 'may we not feel the weight of the might of any one; may we not be oppressed by the thought that any one is more mighty than we ourselves and able to injure us.' The expression yakṣam bhujema here is equivalent to the expression dakṣam bhujema in 4, 3, 13 which will be explained below.

RV. 7, 88, 6: yá āpír nítyo varuņa priyáh sán tvām āgāmsi kṛṇávat sákhā te | mā ta énasvanto yakṣin bhujema yandhi ṣmā viprah stuvaté várūtham || "Who, O Varuṇa, being thy own dear friend and comrade, has committed evil against thee—may not we who have sinned, feel, O mighty one, thy (might); do thou that art wise offer protection to thy praiser." We have to understand the word yakṣa here in the third pāda as the object of the verb bhujema. The meaning is, 'may we not suffer from thy might, that is, feel the weight of thy displeasure, on account of the sins that we have committed.' The two ideas of eno bhujema (punishment for sins committed; compare 6, 51, 7; 7, 52, 2) and yakṣam bhujema (see 5, 70, 4 above) are combined here in this one pāda.

As I have already observed (see p. 18), the relative clause yá āpír nityaḥ... tvām āgāmsi kṛṇávat qualifies vayam (understood) that is the subject of bhujema in the third pāda; as the plural vayam is only the pluralis majestaticus, the use of the singular number in yaḥ, etc., in the first two pādas and in stuvate (fourth pāda) is not improper.

RV. 7, 61, 5: ámūrā višvā vṛṣaṇāv imā vām ná yāsu citrám dádṛṣe ná yakṣám | drúhaḥ sacante ánṛtā jánānām ná vām ninyāny acite abhūvan ||

"O ye wise and strong (sc. Mitra and Varuna), for you (are) all these (praises) in which is seen neither ornament (brilliance) nor substance. The Druhs follow the iniquities of men; secrets did not remain unknown to you." The meaning of this verse is obscure. The author of the Padapātha reads the words amūrā and visvā as duals and apparently construes them with the dual vrṣaṇau referring to Mitra and Varuna, a view that is accepted by Geldner, but from which M. Boyer dissents. I believe that the Padapātha is right in reading amūrā (and referring it to Mitra and Varuna); at the same time, however, I believe that it is preferable to read visvāḥ instead of visvā (dual) and construe it with imāh, after which, I follow Sāyaṇa in supplying the word stutayah (girah). The sense therefore of the first half-verse is, "These praises that we offer to you, O Mitra and Varuṇa are not polished and brilliant (do not contain alaṅkāras); nor is there substance in them, that is, there is no artha-gāmbhīrya or bhāva-gāmbhīrya in them; we pray that you will nevertheless take them to your heart and like them."

citra here does not signify āścarya as Sāyaņa and, following him, Geldner, think, but rather 'ornament,' alankāra; it has here the same sense as it has in books on rhetoric (kāvyālankāra-sāstra) and means artha-citra (arthālaikāra) and śabdacitra (śabdālaikāra). It is an often-expressed sentiment of later books that a kävya, stuti or other composition in words should, in order to be acceptable, contain alankāras and yield a good meaning; compare, for instance, Subhāṣitaratnabhāṇḍāgāra, 5th edition, Kāvyaprašamsā, verses 17 and 21, in praise of alankāra and vv. 22, 24 in praise of artha, and the expression bhāvālankaraņocitāgamavatī in v. 44; compare also v. 51 in ibid., p. 35: arthan kecid upasate krpanavat kecit tv alajikurvate vešvāvat khalu dhātuvādina ivodbadhnanti kecid rasān | arthālankṛti-sadrasa-dravamucām vācām prašastispršām kartārah kavayo bhavanti katicit punyair aganyair iha. The first two padas of the above mantra too, give expression, as I think, to an idea in the same sphere; in them the poet confesses that his praises cannot be said to be good, that they contain neither alankāra nor artha. Contrast in this respect Kumārasam bhava, 2, 3: atha sarvasya dhātāram te sarvatomukham | vāgīšam vāgbhir arthyābhih pranipatyopatasthire; Raghuvamśa, 4, 6: stutyam stutibhir arthyābhir upatasthe Sarasvatī; Nīlakanthavijayacampū, 4, 16: iti stutibhir arthyābhir dhyāyato niścalam Śivam | aspandeşv asya gātresu paspande daksino bhujah, arthyā vāk means, as Mallinātha explains, arthayuktā vāk, speech or praise in which there is artha or bhava or richness of content.

Compare further the opinion, cited and refuted by Viśvanātha in his Sāhityadarpaņa (p. 14; Nirṇayasāgara ed. 1902): sālankārau sabdārthau kāvyam. Hence the authors of the Rāmāyaṇa and Kādambarī have said of these works that they have been constructed of 'brilliant' words and thoughts; see Rām., 1, 2, 42: udāra-vṛttārtha-padair manoramais tad asya Rāmasya cakāra kīrtimān . . . yašaskaram kāvyam udāradhīr munih; and Kādambarī, v. 9 of introduction: haranti kam nojjvala-dīpa-kopamair navaih padārthair upapāditāh kathāh.

For the second half-verse, I have, with much hesitation, given the explanation of M. Boyer as this seems to be better than that proposed by Sāyaṇa; I feel however very doubtful whether either of these is the correct explanation.

RV. 4, 3, 13: må kásya yakşám sádam íd dhuró gā må vesásya praminató måpéh | må bhråtur agne ánrjor rnám ver må sákhyur dákşam ripór bhujema ||

"Do not at any time go to the sacrifice of any enemy (literally, injurer) or harmful neighbour or comrade; do not get into the debt, O Agni, of our crooked brother; may we not suffer from the power of our friend (turned into) enemy." I have already said above (p. 165) that the view of the Indian commentators that yakşa is derived from the root vaj is justified by the parallelism of the words yakşa and yajña in AV-8, 9, 8. Sāyana is therefore right in explaining yakşa here as yajña, sacrifice. The expression, 'do not get into the debt of our crooked brother,' in pāda c signifies the same as pāda a; it means, 'do not go to the sacrifice of, and partake of the offerings given by, our deceitful brother'; for the term 'debt' when used of a deity with reference to a human, means, as has been shown by Geldner, l.c., pp. 133, 134, the debt that such deity owes to a human in return for the offerings that have been made and accepted; compare also Bh. Gitā, 3, 11-12 in this connection. Similarly, the fourth pāda too, seems to refer indirectly to the same thing, to implore Agni not to attend the sacrifice of the friend who has turned inimical and make him rich and powerful in return. This verse therefore is one of the class that implore the deities not to favour by their presence the sacrifices of rival yajamānas; see Hillebrandt, Ved. Myth. I, pp. 119 ff.; and Bloomfield, Johns Hopkins University Circulars 1906, no. 10, p. 1049 ff.

RV. 7, 55, 16: átyāso ná yé marútah sváñco yakṣadṛśo ná subháyanta máryāḥ | té harmyeṣṭhāḥ sísavo ná subhrā vatsāso ná prakrīlinah payodhāḥ ||

"They who are swift like coursers, the youths, (sc. Maruts) made themselves bright (that is, decked themselves with ornaments), like people that (go to) see sacrifices; they are radiant like children that are in mansions and frisky like calves that drink". Sāyaṇa explains yakṣa here as utsava, festival. Now, yakṣa, as we know, means 'sacrifice,' 'worship'; and many of the Soma-sacrifices were in fact grand festivals and are explicitly called or described by the name of utsava in the Purāṇas and Itihāsas.

Compare, for instance, the following passages: Śrīmad-bhāgavata, 4, 3, 3 ff.:

tasmin brahmarṣayaḥ sarve devarṣi-pitṛ-devatāḥ |

"(Dakṣa) began the sacrifice known as Bṛhaspatisava to which went in well-being all the Brahmaṛṣis, the Devaṛṣis, pitṛs and devas, and also their wives with their husbands. Satīdevī, the daughter of Dakṣa, hearing of this from the chatter of those going in the sky, and seeing near her dwelling the wives of Upadevas (i.e., of Gandharvas, Kinnaras, Kimpuruṣas, etc.) going with their husbands in vimānas from all directions, wearing fine clothes and necklaces and brilliant ear-rings and with eyes glancing here and there, said to her lord Siva in excitement: 'The grand festival-like sacrifice of thy father-in-law, the Prajāpati, has, I hear, commenced . . . . See also other women going there in troops, wearing jewels, in the company of their husbands, O thou that art birth-less.'"

Mahābhārata, 2, 72, 1: tataḥ sa Kururājasya sarva-karma-samṛddhimān | yajñaḥ prītikaro rājan sambabhau vi pulotsavaḥ ||

Ibid. 14, 90, 43:

evam babhūva yajñaḥ sa Dharmarājasya dhīmataḥ |
tam mahotsava-samkāśam hṛṣṭa-puṣṭa-janākulam |
kathayanti sma puruṣā nānā-deśa-nivāsinaḥ ||

"Then took place that sacrifice of the wise Dharmarāja . . . And this sacrifice that was like a great festival and was attended by many joyous and thriving people was extolled by people that lived in different countries (who were present at it)." Read also the descriptions of the Rājasūya sacrifice celebrated by Yudhiṣṭhira given in the Mahābhārata (2, 71) and Bhāgavata, 10, 75.

It is therefore not surprising if, in the circumstances, the word paksa, meaning 'sacrifice' took on the meaning of utsava also, though as regards this verse, it is not necessary to assume this latter meaning for yakşa. The original meaning itself, namely, 'sacrifice,' fits in well with the context here. Compare the passage cited above from the Bhagavata where it is said that the wives of Upadevas were going to the yajña-mahotsava wearing fine clothes and jewels in the company of their husbands, and the passage cited above (p.155) from the Jñātādharmakathā that describes the dress and jewels worn by ugras, ugraputras, Brāhmaṇas, Kṣatriyas, etc., on days of Indramaha, Yaksamaha and similar other utsavas. See also the description of the city and people on the occasion of kaumudī-mahotsva given in Hemādri, l.c., p. 352 and in Jñātādharmakathā, p. 536. It becomes clear from all these that the people used to put on in former times (as in fact they do now) fine clothes and jewels when going to grand sacrifices or other utsavas; and the Maruts are compared with such people because they always deck themselves with ornaments; see 5, 54, 11; 5, 55, 6; 5, 60, 4, etc., and Macdonell's Ved. Mythology, p. 79.

Gobhila-gṛhyasūtra, 3, 4, 28: ācār yam sapariṣatkam abhyetyācāryapariṣadam īkṣate yakṣam iva cakṣuṣaḥ priyo vo bhūyāsam iti ||

"Approaching the teacher with his entourage, he looks at the teacher and entourage (saying): 'May I be pleasing to your eye like a sacrifice.'" I have here, like M. Boyer and Geldner, construed cakşuşah with priya. Oldenberg has, however, contended (RV. Noten, II, p. 45) that this is not right and that such construction would be proper only if the text had read yakşam iva cakşuşo vah priyo bhūyāsam. He therefore maintains that the correct meaning is, "May I be dear to you as the wonderful thing is to the eye" (as already noted above, yakṣa='wonderful thing' for Oldenberg) and that the 'wonderful thing' here is the pupil of the eye! But, apart from the consideration that one fails to understand why the pupil of the eye should be called a 'wonderful thing' (the passage from Sat. Br. to which Oldenberg refers has no bearing at all in this connection) the idea of comparing a thing to the pupil of the eye in respect of dearness is one that is foreign to Sanskrit literature.

As regards however the above-mentioned contention itself, it must be admitted that there is some force in it; but, as yakşa does not mean 'pupil of the eye' but 'sacrifice' (or perhaps utsava) here, it makes in effect no difference whether caksusah is construed with priva or not. In the first case, the meaning is, "May I be pleasing to your eye like a sacrifice". In the second case, the meaning is, "May I be pleasing to you as a sacrifice is pleasing to the eye"; and the expression 'may I be pleasing to you' here obviously means 'may I be pleasing to your eye.' In any case, therefore, the sense of the mantra is, "May I be dear to your eyes as a grand sacrifice; may you have as much pleasure in looking at me as people have in looking at a grand sacrifice or other similar utsava." Compare RV. 7, 84, 3: kṛtâm no yajñâm vidátheşu carum kṛtâm brahmani sūrişu prašastā 'Make our sacrifice handsome (or beloved) amongst assemblies, make our hymns laudable amongst poets'; 10, 100, 6: yajñás ca bhūd vidáthe carur antamah 'May the sacrifice be handsome (or dear) and most cherished in the assembly'; and the expression carum adhvarám 1, 19, 1 and 5, 71, 1. See also Mahābhārata, 14, 90, 43 cited above from which we learn that the people of all countries flocked to see the sacrifice celebrated by Yudhisthira and 2, 72, 1 ibid. where the epithet prītikara is applied to the sacrifice.

Compare also ibid., 2, 71, 44-45:

lokesmin sarva-viprās ca vaisyāh sūdrā nṛpādayah !
sarve mlecchāh sarvajanās tv ādi-madhyāntajās tathā ||44||
nānādesa-samudbhūtair nānājātibhir āgataih |
paryāpta iva lokoyam Yudhiṣṭhira-nivesane ||45||

"All the Brāhmaṇas in this world and all Kṣatriyas, Vaiśyas and Śūdras, all Mlecchas, and all people of all castes, the highest, lowest and middle castes, (were there). From the people, born in different countries and of different castes, that were present there, it seemed as if the whole world was contained in the dwelling of Yudhiṣṭhira"; and ibid., 2 71, 16:

Jambūdvīpo hi sakalo nānājanapadāyutaḥ | rājann adrsyataikastho rājñas tasmin mahākratau ||

'The whole of Jambūdvīpa with all its different countries, O king, was seen assembled at one place in the grand sacrifice of that king.' These grand sacrifices were thus so beloved that the people used to flock to them.

I take the word ācāryapariṣadam as a dvandva compound meaning 'the teacher and his entourage.'

AV- 11, 6, 10: dívam brūmo nákṣatrāṇi bhūmim yakṣāṇi párvatān | samudrā nadyò vešantās té no muñcantv ámhasaḥ ||

"We praise the sky, the constellations of stars, the earth, the trees, and the mountains. The oceans, rivers and ponds—may they free us from evil." The word yakṣāṇi here has been explained as Yakṣas (followers of Kubera) by Henry (Les Livres X, XI et XII de l'Atharvaveda, pp. 118 and 155), Bloomfield (Hymns of the Atharvaveda, p. 161), and Hillebrandt (Garbe-festschrift, p. 22) and as 'Naturwunder und Naturschönheiten wie die grossen Bäume' by Geldner (l.c. p. 143). Geldner's explanation is almost correct, but the way by which he arrives at it is not, in my opinion, the proper way. yakṣāṇi signifies trees here not because yakṣa means 'Wunder,' citra, but because the trees are here regarded as the abode of Yakṣas or superhuman beings.

I have said above (p. 156) that the temples dedicated to Yaksas had the name of caitya also. This name caitya, it may be remarked, is applied to trees also, to trees that are wellgrown and rich in foliage and are regarded as being the abodes of superhuman beings; cp. Trikandasesa, 2, 4, 2: caityo devatarur devāvāse karabha-kunjarau: Mahābhārata, 12, 68, 44f. caityānām sarvathā tyājyam api patrasya pātanam | 44|| devānām āsrayās caityā yakşarākṣasabhoginām | pišāca-pannagānām ca gandharvāpsarasām api | raudrānām caiva bhūtānām tasmāt tān parivarjayet and also the Mahābhārata verse given in 1, 49, Hidimbavadha in Bopp's Ardschuna's Reise zu Indra's Himmel. The name caitya thus is applied to a tree for the same reason that it is applied to a temple namely, because the tree is, like the temple, the abode of a vaksa, bhūta or other supernatural being and is thus holy and deserving of worship. The same is the case with the word yaksa also; this name is applied to temples as also to trees, that are the abodes of yaksas, bhūtas or similar superhuman beings and are thus holy and deserving of worship. I have cited above (p. 156) instances of the word yakşa denoting temples; this verse offers an instance of the word yakşa denoting trees.

This closes the list of passages where the word yakşa (neuter) occurs. M. Boyer however is of opinion that this word yakşa is found, further, (as a component of the word yakşya) in RV. 8, 60, 3 also: ágne kavír vedhá asi hótā pāvaka yákşyah | mandró yájiştho adhvaréşv idyo viprebhih sukra mánmabhih and has explained yakşya there as 'having a marvellous form.' As he has himself observed, however, (l.c., p. 394) the expression hótā pāvaka yákṣyaḥ in 8, 60, 3 is parallel to agniḥ pāvaká idyaḥ in 3, 27, 4, to śúciḥ pāvaká idyaḥ in 7, 15, 10, and to śúciḥ pāvaka vándyaḥ in 2, 7, 4; and since the word yakṣa itself is, as has been shown above, derived from the root yaj, there is not the least doubt that yakṣya comes from yaj 'to worship.' I believe therefore that the verse means: "Thou, O Agni, art the wise one, the worshipper, and the adorable hotr, O purifier; thou art dear, the most capable in sacrificing, praised in sacrifices, O brilliant one, with hymns by priests."

The meanings of yakşa therefore are: 1. worship, sacrifice (and perhaps utsava, festival). 2. (a) being (concrete), beings in the collective, the creation, universe, world; a particular class of superhuman beings; evil beings, evil spirits; (b) being (abstract); reality, essence, principle, substance, virtue, power, might. The meanings enumerated under 2. are those of the word  $bh\bar{u}ta$  which is a synonym of  $bh\bar{u}ta$ ; they seem to be  $r\bar{u}dhi$  meanings, while those enumerated under 1 are clearly yoga meanings.

It becomes apparent from what has gone above that yakṣa masculine has the same relation to yakṣa neuter as bhūta masculine bears to bhūta neuter. bhūta neuter has a large number of meanings (see above; see also Apte, s.v., and PW) including those of 'being (concrete), a class of superhuman being; evil being'; while bhūta masculine has these meanings only and no other. Similarly yakṣa masculine too means the same, namely, 'being (concrete), superhuman being, evil being' while yakṣa neuter signifies these things, and also, many other things in addition. Similar too, it may be noted, is the relation of sattva masculine to sattva neuter; the masculine word signifies 'being (concrete), not-human being, (and not 'superhuman being' only; sattva is used of animals), evil being' while the neuter word has these as well as other significations.

This explains the use of the word yakşa masculine in Buddhist literature in contexts where the usual meaning of guhyaka or 'follower of Kubera' is inappropriate, and where therefore the translators have in some cases felt perplexed. Thus, in Samvutta Nikāya, III, 2, 25 (and elsewhere too; see Index to the Transl. of Sam. Nik. in SBE., vol. 10), Māra (who is not a guhyaka or follower of Kubera) is called a yakkha; in the Milindapañha, IV. 4. 32 (p. 202), the term yakkha is used in connection with Devadatta and the Bodhisatta who were at that time (see Jātaka-story No. 457; vol. IV, pp. 100 ff.) born as devaputtas. Similarly, in the translation of this book (SBE. vol. 35, p. 289, n. 2), Prof. Rhys Davids has observed that 'this is by no means the only instance of the term yakkha being used of gods.' In the same way, Prof. Kern has noted (Manual of Indian Buddhism, p. 59, n. 9) that the epithet yakkha is applied sometimes to Indra (e.g., in Majjh. Nik. I, p. 251) and the Buddha (f. i. in ibid., I, p. 386: āhuneyyo yakkho uttamapuggalo atulo) and that it is used of devaputtas in Sain. Nik., I., p. 54. 22 The expression yakkhassa suddhi too is found used in Sam. Nik. III, 4, 25 and IV, 11, 14-15: ettāvat' aggam pi vadanti h' eke yakkhassa suddhim idha panditāse which Fausböll has translated (SBE., vol. 10, p. 167) as: "Thus some (who are considered) wise in this world say that the principal (thing) is the purification of the yakkha," without however saying anything as to what is intended by the 'purification of the yakkha.'

In the light of what has been said above about the meaning of the word yakşa, it is easy to see that this word means 'evil being' when it refers to Māra. When used in connection with devaputtas, it means in all probability, 'superhuman being,' while when used of Indra and the Buddha, it is probable that it signifies, as has been suggested by Kern (l.c.), 'a being to be worshipped or a mighty being '-a meaning that combines in itself the two different significations of 'being (concrete)' and of 'worship' or 'might' (see p. 21 above). The expression yakkhassa suddhi which is equivalent to bhūtasya śuddhi or bhūta-śuddhi is somewhat ambiguous. In Tantrik practice, the term bhūtaśuddhi signifies the cleansing or purification of the bhūtas or elements ('earth,' 'water,' 'fire,' etc.), that make up the body of the worshipper, and is one of the many preliminary acts that precede and lead up to the worship proper of the chief deity; see Principles of Tantra (II, pp. 365 ff.) by A. Avalon, pp. 41 ff., of Mantramahārnava, ch. 8 of Devi-bhāgavata, etc.; compare also Rāmatāpanyupanişad, 5, 1: bhūtādikam sodhayed dvārapūjām ca krtvā padmādyāsanasthah prasannah "(The worshipper) should cleanse the elements (of his body) etc., then after worshipping the gates, assuming the padmāsana or other posture, with calm mind . . . . . " I feel however doubtful if it is this Tantrik practice that is referred to by the Sain. Nik., the more so, as this is a preliminary act to which not much importance is attached. And I am inclined to believe that the bhūtasuddhi mentioned here refers perhaps to the cleansing or purification of the bhūta being or self, through the eradication of what Apastamba calls bhūtadāhīyā doṣāh 'blemishes or vices that sear, that is, destroy, the being or self,' consisting of anger, elation, covetousness, etc.; see A pastamba-dharmasūtra, 1, 23, 5. By the eradication of these through yoga, says Apastamba, the wise man attains 'security(abhaya)' an expression which is explained by Haradatta as abhayam mokşam, 'the liberation where there is no more fear'; compare ibid., 1, 23, 3: doṣāṇām tu nirghāto yogamūla iha jīvite | nirhṛtya bhūtadāhīyān

kşemam gacchati panditah "In this life, the destruction of vices (is to be accomplished) by means of yoga; after getting rid of the vices that sear the being, that is, the self, the wise man attains security." Compare also ibid., 1, 23, 6: tāny anutisthan vidhinā sārvagāmī bhavati "He who practises these (yogas that eradicate the bhūtadāhīya-doṣas) according to rule, attains the All." third interpretation also is possible of the term yakkhasya suddhi; yaksasuddhi or bhūtasuddhi or 'the purification of the being (self) ' may be understood as the purification of the being or sattvašuddhi that is spoken of in Ch. Up., 7, 26, 2: āhāra-śuddhau sattva-śuddhih sattvaśuddhau dhruvā smrtih | smrtilambhe sarvagranthīnām vipramoksah | tasmai mrditakasāyāya tamasah pāram daršavati bhagavān Sanatkumārah "When the food becomes pure, the being (sattva; according to Sankara, this denotes antahkarana here) becomes pure; when the being becomes pure, an unfailing memory (will be established); by the attainment of memory, all knots are severed; and to him whose impurity (kaṣāṇa) is (thus) overcome, Lord Sanatkumāra will show (the Brahman) beyond the darkness." As the Sam. Nik. says nothing more about yakkhassa suddhi, of the causes which lead up to it or of the effects which this leads to, it is not possible to determine which of these three ideas was intended by the author; perhaps, it is the second of those mentioned above.

§ 10 ábhva

The word yakṣá leads us to the nearly-allied word ábhva, of which no satisfactory explanation has yet been given by the exegetists. This word is enumerated twice in the Nighaṇṭu, once amongst the udaka-nāmāni (1.12) and once amongst the mahan-nāmāni (3.3). These two meanings udaka and mahat, however, are inadequate to explain the sense of many passages in which the word occurs; and hence Sayana has, in his RV. Commentary, been obliged to suggest other explanations for this word. He thus explains it as 'enemy' (ābhavatīty abhvah satruh) in 1, 39, 8, as 'speed' (vega) in 1, 24, 6, as 'cloud' (megha) in 1, 168, 9; and even when seemingly retaining the meaning mahat, he practically helps himself with new meanings when he explains abliva as ati-vistrtam jagat in 2, 33, 10, mahad dhanam in 5, 49, 5, mahat karma in 6, 4, 3, mahat sarvam vastu-jātam in 6, 71, 5, and mahato bhaya-hetoh pāpāt in 1, 185, 2-8. Of the European exegetists, Roth explains the word as 'Unding; Ungeheur; Unheimlichkeit; ungeheure Macht, Grösse, u.s.w.; Schwüle'; and Grassmann repeats these explanations with the addition of two more, 'der Widerwärtige, das Ungethum; das grauenerregende Dunkel.' Bergaigne, in his article on this word in his Etudes sur le lexique du RV, comes to the conclusion that it means 'obscurity; evil in general; demoniacal might,' and in one passage (Sata. Br. 11, 2, 3, 5) 'might' in general, while Geldner, in his article on this word in Ved. St., vol. 3 (p. 117 f.), has followed the lead of Roth and set down 'Schrecknis, Graus, Schreckensgestalt, Schreckenserscheinung, Gespenst, Spuk, Popanz' as the meaning of this word. Substantially the same explanation is given of this word by him in his Glossar also.

How insufficient these meanings are to explain the sense of the passages in which the word ábliva occurs will become clear to every one who reads Geldner's intepretation of them in the course of his article mentioned above. And particularly, in one of these passages, namely, in Sata. Br. 11, 2, 3, 3-5:

yad veda rūpeņedam rūpam iti tad rūpam | etāvad vā idam yāvad rūpam caiva nāma ca | te haite brahmaņo mahatī abhve | sa yo haite brahmaņo mahatī abhve veda mahad dhaivābhvam bhavati | te haite brahmaņo mahatī yakṣe | sa yo haite brahmaņo mahatī yakṣe veda mahad dhaiva yakṣam bhavati ||, it is hard to believe, as Geldner would have us do, that  $n\bar{a}ma$  and  $r\bar{u}pa$  are here to be understood as the two ghore  $r\bar{u}pe$  or Popanze or Phantome of Brahman, and that he who thus knows  $n\bar{a}ma$  and  $r\bar{u}pa$  as the two ghore  $r\bar{u}pe$  or Popanze or Phantome of Brahman, becomes himself a ghoram  $r\bar{u}pam$  or Popanz or Phantom.

The clue to the real meaning of the word abhva is contained in the above-cited passage itself, in which the sentence te haite brahmano mahatī abhve! sa yo haite brahmano mahati abhve veda muhad dhaivābhvam bhavati is closely parallel to the sentence following: te haite brahmano mahatī yakşe | sa yo haite brahmano mahatī yakşe veda mahad dhaiva yakşam bhavati This parallelism indicates that the word abhva has the same value as the word yaksa. Now in the article preceding on yaksa, I have shown that this word has the value of bhūta and that it means (a) being (concrete); beings in the collective, the creation, universe, world; a particular class of superhuman beings; evil being, evil spirit; (b) being (abstract); reality, essence, principle, substance, virtue, power, might. These are the meanings of abhva also, and I shall now show that these meanings fit well into the context in all the passages where this word occurs. I begin with the above-cited passage Sata. Br. 11, 2, 3, 3-5, which I translate as—

"Then the Brahman itself went up to the sphere beyond. Having gone up to the sphere beyond, it considered, 'How can I descend again into these worlds?' It then descended again by means of these two—Form and Name. Whatever has a name, that is Name; and that again which has no name and which one knows by its form, 'This is (its) form,' is Form: as far as there are Form and Name, so far, indeed, (extends) this universe. These, indeed, are the two great beings (i.e., manifestations) of the Brahman; and, verily, he who knows these two great beings (i.e., manifestations) of the Brahman becomes himself a great being. These, indeed, are the two great beings (i.e., forms, ex-istences) of the Brahman; and, verily, he who knows these two great beings (i.e., forms, ex-istences) of the Brahman becomes himself a great being."

Šata. Br. 3, 2, 1, 25-28: so'yam yajño vācam abhidadhyau mithuny etayā syām iti | tām sambabhūva | indro ha vā īkṣāmcakrc | mahad vā ito'bhvam janiṣyate | yajñasya ca mithunād vācas ca | yan mā tan mā'bhibhaved iti sa indra eva garbho bhūtvaitan mithunam pravivesa | sa ha samvatsare jāyamāna īkṣāmcakre | mahā-vīryā vā iyam yonir yā mām adīdharata | yad vai meto mahad evābhvam nānuprajāyeta yan mā tan nābhibhaved iti | tām pratiparāmṛṣyāveṣṭyācchinat ||

"That Yajña (sacrifice) lusted after Vāc (speech) thinking, 'May I pair with her.' He united with her. Indra then thought within himself, 'Surely a great being will be born out of this union of Yajña and Vāc: [I must take care] lest it should vanquish me.' Indra himself then became an embryo and entered into that union. When being born after a year's time, he thought within himself, 'Verily, of great potency is this womb which has contained me: [I must take care] that no great being will be born from it after me, that it should not vanquish me.' Having seized and pressed it tightly, he cut it off."

RV. 1, 63, 1: tvám mahän indra yó ha súsmair dyävä jajñānáh pṛthivi áme dhāḥ | yád dha te vísvā giráyas cid ábhvā bhiyā dṛļhāsaḥ kiráṇā naíjan ||

"Thou art great, O Indra, that, when being born, didst set Heaven and Earth in agitation through thy strength; and when, from fear of thee, all beings, even firm mountains, trembled like particles of dust." The correct reading is  $visv\bar{a}$  and  $\dot{a}bhv\bar{a}$ , neuter, as given in the Padapātha (see also Bergaigne, op. cit.), and not viśvāh and ábhvāh as assumed by Roth (PW) and Geldner (op. cit.). vísvā ábhvā=visvāni bhūtāni=all beings, that is, the creation, the world, the universe; and Bergaigne (op. cit.) rightly observed that 'víśvā . . . . ábhvā sont l'expression d'un tout dont les montagnes, giráyas cit, font partie.' Compare 1, 61, 14: asyéd u bhiyā giráyaś ca drlhā dyāvā ca bhūmā janúsas tujete; 4, 17, 2: táva tvisó jániman rejata dyaú réjad bhúmir bhiyásā svásya manyóh | rghāyánta subhvàh párvatāsa árdan dhánvāni sarávanta ápah ||

"Thou, O venerable, carriest bow and arrows; thou, O venerable, the all-formed necklace deserving of worship. Thou, O venerable, rulest all this universe; there is none, O Rudra, more mighty than thou." Or, should we take áblivam here in the sense of 'evil being' and translate the third pada as 'Thou, O venerable, cuttest to pieces all the evil beings here ' (compare Max Müller's translation in SBE. 32, 427: 'Worthily thou cuttest every fiend here to pieces') or as 'Thou, O venerable, rulest all these evil beings'? Rudra is, as we know, the lord of all evil beings (known as pramatha or bhūta in later literature) not only in post-Vedic literature but even in the Yajus-samhitas; compare TS, IV, 5, 11, 1: yé (sc. rudrāh)bhūtānām ádhi patayo visikhāsah kapardínah. Compare also Śāńkh. ŚS. 4,20,1 and Sāyana's commentary, esa devah | esa iti hastena pradarsya rudro 'bhidhiyate | tat

"He, Savitr, raised high his (two) golden well-formed arms, like a speaker; he climbed over the heights of heaven and of the earth; he stopped all swift-moving beings." upavaktā = a speaker, one who harangues others, an orator; that is, one who calls for the attention of other people. To attract attention, such speaker holds his hands high; compare Ratnapālanṛpakathānaka (Bhavanagar ed., p. 5), st. 106: nivartayantī tumulam hastam utkşipya düratah | avocat spaşţa-vācaivam samrabdhān sarva-bhūbhujah; ZDMG. 54, 529; yogindrah sanaisśanair dhyānam muktvā hasann evam uvāca kim kasmai pradīyate | kas trāyate bhavārnavāt | sa nara ūrdhva-bāhur evam jagāda | dhanāyāham tavātithih; Bhārata-pañcadašopodghāta, p. 26: satyam satyam punah satyam uddhrtya bhujam ucyate | Bhāratān na param sāstram cāsti loke mahārthadam. So also does Savitr; compare 2, 38, 2: vísvasya hí srustáye devá ūrdhváh prá bāhávā prthúpānih sísarti | āpas cid asya vratá ā nímṛgrā ayám cid vāto ramate párijman. "He, the god (sc. Savitr) with wideextending hands, holds forth his arms aloft for the hearing of the universe (that is, that the world may pay attention to him and hear him); even the Waters follow his law: this Vata even stops in his course (at his command)." 1

I follow Sāyaṇa in asking patayat as a participle. The sense of the third pāda is, 'he checks, he causes to stop, all things.' Compare 2, 38, 3: árīramad átamānam cid étoḥ | ahyárṣūṇām cin ny àyām aviṣyām "He (sc. Savitṛ) stopped even the swift-moving (wind) from moving; he checked the course of even those who were pressing forward like ahīs." Compare 2, 38, 2 explained above and also 7, 56, 19: imé turám marúto rāmayanti "These Maruts bring the swift-moving one to a halt."

1, 92, 5: práty arci rúsad asyā adarsi
vi tisthate bādhate kṛṣṇám ábhvam |
svárum ná péso vidátheṣv añjáñ
citrám divó duhitā bhānúm asret ||

"Her (sc. the Dawn's) bright light is seen; it spreads itself and dispels the black being. Adorning the sacrificial post in sacrifices as if with an ornament, the Daughter of Heaven has spread her brilliant light."

It is possible to translate ábhvam here as 'substance' or as 'evil being' also. In any case the sense of the passage remains the same as it is the darkness that is herbeirufen als solches charakterisierendes ist, wol aber wenn es sich um ein herbeirufen im speciellen sinne handelt, bei welchem gewisse äusserliche bewegungen regelmässig stattfinden und selbstverständlich sind, wie es eben das ausbreiten der arme bei anrufung der götter überall ist (vgl. III, 14, 5. VI, 16, 46. 63, 3. X, 79, 2)."

This opinion seems to me to be incorrect. In the first place, the verses 3, 14, 5, etc., referred to by Ludwig, allude to the stretching or spreading of the arms in front (uttānahasta); this is quite different from raising the arms on high which is a characteristic of one who wants to attract the attention of others. Compare the passages cited above. (As a matter of fact, the raising high of the arms is a gesture that is used every-where by every one, including school-children, to attract the attention of other people). Secondly, not one of the Śrauta ritual books prescribe that the upavaktr (that is, the maitrāvaruṇa or praśāstr; see Oldenberg, Religion des Veda<sup>2</sup>, 390: Ludwig's suggestion that he is the acchāvāka is untenable) should raise his hands high on any occasion.

referred to by that word (see Bergaigne, op. cit). Compare 7, 77, 1: ákar jyótir bādhamānā támāmsi, "She (sc. Uṣas) made light after dispelling darkness"; 7, 78, 2: uṣâ yāti jyótiṣā bādhamānā viśvā támāmsi duritāpa devi "The goddess Uṣas goes, dispelling with her light all darkness and evil"; 7, 80, 2: gūdhvī támo jyótiṣoṣā abodhi "She (sc. Uṣas) has awakened hiding the darkness with her light."

The sense of the third pada is not very clear. I follow Pischel (Ved. St., 2, 124) in taking añján as standing for anianti and translate it as above. The top of the sacrificial post that is touched and illuminated by the bright ray, citró bhānúh, of the Dawn appears as if adorned with ornaments; and hence, Usas is said to adorn the post, as it were, with a jewel. Compare 1, 92, 1: eta u tya uşasah ketum akrata pürve ardhe rajaso bhanum anjate; 7, 79, 2: vy ànjate divó anteșv aktun viso na yuktā usáso yatante; 7, 78, 1: práti ketávah prathamá adrsrann ūrdhvā asyā anjayo vi srayante; 1, 113, 14: vy àñjibhir divá átāsv adyaut, where Usas is said to 'adorn' with her rays or where her rays themselves are called ornaments, and also 3, 8, 9: śukra vásanah sváravo na aguh "The sacrificial posts bearing bright ornaments have come to us", where the ornaments of sacrificial posts are referred to.

"Then those (flames) of this (Agni) move swiftly forward destroying the black being, and putting on great splendour when he goes caressing the wide earth, panting, thundering, roaring." dhvasáyantah in the first pāda does not mean 'sparkling' as Oldenberg (SBE. 46, 141) understands; nor is the expression kṛṣṇâm âbhvam the object (Oldenberg, l.c., Geldner, op. cit., p. 121) of kárikratah in addition to máhi várpah. As the passage rátho ha vām bhūri várpah kárikrat ('your chariot that has put on much splendour') in 3, 58, 9 shows, várpah alone is the object of kárikratah in the above verse, and not kṛṣṇâm ábhvam also. This latter is the object of dhvasáyantah, 'destroying, pulverising,' which is derived from the root dhvas, dhvams 'to destroy, to pulverise.'

AV. 4, 17, 5 (=7, 23, 1): daúşvapnyam daúrjīvityam rákşo abhvàm arāyyàḥ | durṇāmnīḥ sárvā durvācas tā asmán nāsayāmasi |

RV. 1, 39, 8: yuşméşito maruto mártyeşita å yó no ábhva işate | ví tám yuyota sávasā vy ójasā ví yuşmākābhir ūtíbhih ||

"The evil spirit, O Maruts, that has been sent by you or by mortals, and is rushing on us—remove it from us by strength, by might, through your protections." ūti, protection, denotes here really the deeds of prowess done by the Maruts in order to protect; compare 1, 129, 5: ní şū namātimatim káyasya cit téjiṣṭhābhir arāṇibhir nótibhir ugrābhir ugrotibhih "Suppress well the pride of any one with thy fierce protections, i.e., deeds of prowess, that are most brilliant like firesticks, O thou fierce one." According to Sāyaṇa, Max Müller (SBE. 32, 97) and Ludwig, the second distich means, 'deprive him of power, of strength, and of your favours.' This interpretation however implies that the Maruts sometimes help the evil spirits sent by mortals, and hence does not seem to be satisfactory.

sánemy ábhvam marúto junanti |
agnis cid dhi ṣmātasé susukván
ápo ná dvīpám dádhati práyāmsi ||

"That spear of thine, O Indra, has been attached (to thy body) on our behalf; the Maruts drive away totally the evil being. He has burnt up (the evil spirits) as Agni does brushwood; they bear food as the Waters, the island." This stanza is obscure, and in padas c and d there is nothing to indicate who it is that is said to be susukvān and to carry food. According to Geldner (RV. Ueber., p. 222), who refers to the occurrence of the phrase dadhati prayāmsi in 3, 30, 1 and 10, 91,9 (10, 91, 1 is a misprint), the two padas refer to the men who prepare the sacrifice; susukván stands really for susukvámsah and the meaning of the two padas is, "denn wie Feuer im Gestrüpp glühend bereiten sie (die Priester) ein Gastmahl wie die Gewässer eine Insel." Regarding pada a, he observes that the translation 'dein Speer hat sich gegen uns gerichtet' does not fit well in the context and that, moreover, nowhere in the RV is a rsti spoken of in connection with Indra. He is therefore inclined to connect this word rsti with vrsti in 1, 52, 5; 14 (cf. vrsabhá and rṣabhá) and rṣvá, and translates pāda a as 'An uns hat sich deine Hoheit (?), O Indra, angeschlossen.' Pāda b he translates as 'Die Marut setzen ihre gewaltige Erscheinung vollständig in Bewegung.'

All this seems to me to be hardly satisfactory. I think that padas c and d refer, like a and b, to Indra and the Maruts respectively. Regarding c, compare 6, 18, 10: agnir ná súskam vánam indra heti rákso ní dhaksi "Burn the evil spirits with thy weapon, O Indra, as Agni does dry forests." I take cit here as an upamā-vācaka; compare Nirukta, 1, 4, 13; Nighanţu, 3, 13; and Geldner's translation, cited above, of this stanza.

Regarding rsti, it is true that, as observed by Geldner, this word is nowhere else in the RV used to denote the weapon of Indra. But the root rj  $(r\tilde{n}j)$  from which it is derived means 'to let loose, to throw' so that rsti denotes primarily that which is thrown. It is thus a synonym of heti (from hi, 'to throw, to impel) 'missile, weapon' which is used in connection with Indra in 6, 18, 10 cited above and in other verses. There seems to be no doubt therefore that it denotes the Vajra or other weapon of Indra in the above verse and that padas a and c together are a paraphrase of 6, 18, 10 cited above.

The comparison in pāda d is obscure. The meaning of the pāda seems to be, 'they, the Maruts, bear food as the Waters bear islands on their bosom.' Compare in this connection 1, 88, 1: ā vārṣiṣṭhayā na iṣā vāyo nā paptatā sumāyāh; 1, 166, 1: nītyam nā sūnūm mādhu bibhrata ūpa krīļanti krīļāh; 5,55, 1: marūto bhrājad-rṣṭayo brhād vāyo dadhire rukmā-vakṣasah; and 7, 58, 3: brhād vāyo maghāvadbhyo dadhāta, in which the Maruts are represented as bringing food to their worshippers.

4, 49, 5. prá yé vásubhya ivad á námo dúr yé mitré váruņe sūktá-vācaḥ | ávaitv ábhvam kṛṇutā várīyo divás-pṛthivyór ávasā madema || "Who offered such adoration to the bright ones, who speak hymns of praise to Mitra and Varuna—(from us) let the evil being depart; make (for us) broad space. May we be glad through the favour of Heaven and Earth." The relative pronoun  $y\acute{e}$  in pādas a and b has for antecedent asmat (understood) in pāda c. The expression, 'let the evil being depart, make for us broad space' means, 'drive off the evil beings and make the space around us clear of such beings; make us secure.' The phrase kṛṇutā várīyaḥ has the same sense as varīvaḥ kṛṇota (see Grassmann, s.v. varīvaḥ).

"Thy might, thy strength, thy wrath,—even these birds that fly did not attain (i.e., did not measure its extent); nor (did) these waters that move unceasingly, nor they that contemn (i.e., surpass) the might (i.e., the speed) of Vāta." As explained by Sāyaṇa, ábhvam, might, is here equivalent to vega; for it is in vega that the might of Vāta is chiefly manifested. The sense of the fourth pāda is, 'Not even they that are swifter than the wind, and still less the wind itself, can go beyond reach of thy strength, of thy might, of thy anger.'

"Pṛśni brought forth for the great fight the terrible troop of the impetuous Maruts. They, alike in form, produced (i.e. made manifest) their might and then saw around them the invigorating food." The sense of the second distich is obscure. sapsárāsaḥ=alike in form; see Ved. St., 3, 197, and svadhā= sudhā, the food of the gods; see pp. 41 f. above.

2, 4, 5: å yán me ábhvam vanádah pánantosígbhyo námimīta várņam | sá citréṇa cikite rámsu bhāsā jujurván yó múhur á yúvā bhút ||

The import of the first two padas of this stanza is not clear. vanádah is a hapax legomenon and is regarded by Oldenberg (SBE. 42, 205; RV. Noten, I, 192) as a compound of van 'the forest' and of ad 'to eat.' The stanza means therefore according to Oldenberg, "When they praised to me the monstrous might of the eater of the forests, he produced his (shining) colour as (he has done) for the Usijs. With shining splendour he has shone joyously, he who having grown old has suddenly become young (again)." Similarly Geldner too translates the distich as "Was sie mir als das Grossartige des Holzfressers rühmen: Er veränderte seine Farbe wie für die Uśij" in his RV. Uebersetzung. In Ved. St., 3, 120, on the other hand, he regarded the word vanád as being formed, (like bhasád, and sarád) from the root van with the suffix ad and denoting 'wish, prayer'; and he translated the distich as, "Als meine Gebete seine Schreckensgestalt abseilschten, da veränderte er seine Farbe wie für die Usij." I am inclined to agree with Geldner's former opinion and look upon vanád as being derived from the root van 'to wish, to long for' with the suffix ad. vanádah therefore means 'longing, eager,' and denotes, I conceive, the 'eager,' i.e., swift-moving flames of Agni; compare 6, 66, 10: trşu-cyávaso juhvò nāgnéh 'greedily, i.e., swiftly moving like the tongues (i.e., flames) of Agni' and the other verses referred to on p. 138 above. I therefore translate the stanza as: "He produced (i.e., put on) splendour as if for the Usijs when the eager (flames) proclaimed his might to me; he shone with brilliant joyous light, he who having grown old, became again and again young."

pṛthvim, 'then his splendours (i.e., flames) proclaim his greatness as he, cutting, goes along the earth.' The expressions āpananta and panayanta in the above verses refer to the sound made by Agni's flames which are here represented as bards attending on kings and heralding their approach, that is, as the vandinaḥ, māgadhāḥ or sūtāḥ that are mentioned in later literature as accompanying kings and sounding their praises; compare 9, 10, 3: rājāno nā prāsastibhiḥ sómāso göbhir ajyate; 9, 65, 6: rājā medhābhir īyate. In 1, 87, 3: svayām mahitvām panayanta dhūtayaḥ, on the other hand, it is said of the Maruts that they themselves proclaimed their greatness, that is, that they were their own bards.

amimīta in pāda b is derived, as pointed out by Geldner in Ved. St., 3, 119, from the root mi, mī and not from mā. The expression várṇam amimīta is synonymous with the expression várṇaḥ kárikrat that we have met with above in 1, 140, 5 and means 'he produced, i.e., put on, splendour or brilliance.' Compare 2, 13, 3: rūpā minān tādapā éka īyate and 5, 42, 13: rūpā minānó ákṛṇod idām naḥ. With regard to múhuḥ, see Pischel, Ved. St., 3, 186 ff.

"Whose might they praise like that of Dyaus, he (sc. Agni), brilliant like the sun, clothes himself in splendour; he who, bright and unaging, drives away (enemies) and destroyed the old (fortresses) of Asna even." The sense of the first pada is not quite clear, and the explanations given of it by Pischel (Ved. St., 1, 201) and Geldner (ibid., 3, 121) are not very satisfactory. If dyāvah is to be taken as nominative plural (as it has to be in the other RV passages where it occurs) the meaning would be 'whose greatness the heavens (i.e., the sky) praise as it were.' This is the course followed by Ludwig who has translated the pada as 'des gewalt die himmel gleichsam bewundern,' which is sufficiently close to the translation given by me above; compare 1, 15, 8: táva dyaúr indra paúmsyam prthivi vardhati śrávah, : The sky, O Indra, magnifies thy valour and the earth thy renown.' I believe however that the passage yields better sense if the word dyavah is taken as genitive singular and the pada interpreted as 'of whom they praise the greatness as of Dyaus.' The greatness of Dyaus is referred to in 4, 21, 1: dyaur ná ksatrám abhíbhūti púşyāt 'May he (sc. Indra) flourish, like Dyaus, in might surpassing those of others'; KS. 7, 13: dyaur mahnāsi bhūmir bhūmnā 'Thou art Dyaus (the sky) with (in?) greatness, the earth with (in?) vastness' and in 1, 131, 1; 1, 122, 1; etc., where the epithet asurah, mighty, is applied to Dyaus. Compare also in this connection 1, 131, 1; 1, 63, 1 and other similar passages, which describe the might of Indra and other deities by saying that even the sky and the earth quaked with fear or drew back with fear at their approach.

This closes the list of passages in which ábhva occurs. It will be noted that, like the word yakṣá, this word too is used in the masculine as well as in the neuter gender; and there can be no doubt that, like its synonym yakṣaḥ (see p. 194), the word ábhvaḥ too denotes 'being (concrete); a class of superhuman beings; evil being', while ábhva neuter has, like yakṣá neuter, these as well as the other meanings mentioned on p. 199 above.

§ 11 admasád

This word, about whose explanation there has been much dispute, is enumerated in 4, 1, amongst difficult words, by the Nighanţu; and Yāska, in his commentary on this section, has explained the word as admasad admānnam bhavaty admasādinīti vā 'nnasāninīti vā, that is, as Durga explains, grhādhikārc niyuktā anna-sādhikā strī. This explanation is adopted, in his commentary on RV. 1, 124, 4, by Sayana who explains the word as adyata ity adma annam tasya pākāya grhe sīdatīti admasat pācikā yoşit, but who gives in addition another explanation of the word—vad vā admeti grha-nāma | varūtham admeti tan-nāmasu pāthāt | tatra sīdatīty admasaj jananī. In the other verses, however, where this word occurs (6, 30, 3; 7, 83, 7; 8, 44, 29) he gives the derivation admani sīdatīty admasad and takes the word as a masculine, interpreting adma as havih in 7, 83, 7 and 8, 44, 29 and also in 6, 4, 4, where the nearly-allied word admasadvā is used. In 8, 43, 19, he interprets adma-súdyāya as annasya bhaianāva.

Like Sāyaṇa, Roth too in the PW understands the word as equivalent to annasad or 'one who sits down to food'; he howeves interprets it as Gast beim Mahle and the allied word admasadya as Tisch genossenschaft, an interpretation which was accepted by Bergaigne (Etudes, p. 43) but dissented from by Haug (GGA. 1875, p. 80). Geldner, on the other hand, favoured, in Ved. St. 2, 179, the explanation reported by Durga as put forward by 'some' that the word signifies  $mak sik \bar{a}$  or fly, observing that, in 7, 83, 7, the Vasisthas style themselves flies jokingly. In his Glossar, however, he has modified this opinion and said that the word denotes 'fly' in 1, 124, 4 (in his RV. Ucher., too, he has accordingly translated pāda c as, 'wie eine Fliege weckt sie die Schläfer') and 6, 30, 3, while in 7, 83, 7 it denotes 'der bei dem Opfermahle sitzende Priester.'

Geldner's explanation (in Ved. St., 2, 179) has been criticised by Oldenberg on p. 91 of his Vedaforschung where this savant has declared his preference for that proposed by Roth, with the reservation however that he does not believe that it is 'vollkommen sicher.' Similarly, Hillebrandt too (Licder des RV., p. 1, n. 3) has rejected the explanation of Geldner and adopted that of Roth in his translation of 1, 124, 4. Dr. Neisser, on the other hand (Zum Wörterbuch des RV), agrees with Geldner in thinking that the word means 'auf die Speise sich setzend,' that it denotes 'fly' in 1, 124, 4 and 6, 30, 3, and that it is, in the other verses, an attribute of Agni and of the priest.

None of these explanations seems to me to be satisfactory. The word admasad occurs in but four passages; and I find it difficult to believe with Sāyaṇa and Geldner that, in one passage, it denotes 'fly' or 'cook' (fem.), and in another 'priest.' Similarly I find it difficult to accept Roth's explanation that it means 'guest'; for, nowhere, either in the RV or in any other Vedic or post-Vedic book, do we ever hear of a guest awakening those that are asleep. On the contrary, RV. 8, 44, 1: samidhā 'gnim duvasyata ghṛtair bodhayatātithim | āsmin havyā juhotana seems to suggest that, in the time of the Rgveda, it was the host that awakened the guest in order to feed him.

Likewise, Yāska's explanation, too, of the word as 'one who sits down to or in food (annasad)', is without doubt wrong. The Nighantu mentions in 2, 7 as synony ms of anna the following twenty-eight words, namely, ándhah, vájah, páyah, práyah, prksáh, pitúh, váyah, sínam, úvah, kşú, dhāsíh, írā, ílā, ísam, űrk, rásah, svadhā, arkáh, ksádma, némah, sasám, námah, áyuh, sūnŕtā, bráhma, várcah, kīlālam and yásah, of which all are found in the RV with the exception of némah. But no verb meaning 'to sit' is found used in the RV in any passage in connection with the locative or dative case of any of these twenty-seven words or of their synonyms ánna and havís also. Nor, I believe, can an instance be met with elsewhere in Vedic or later literature where human beings or divinities are said or exhorted 'to sit in (loc.) or for (dat.) food.' The expression commonly used in such a situation in later times is bhoktum or bhojanāya upavisati or its equivalents, and not anne or annāya upavisati and its equivalents (compare for instance Śańkara's commentary on Ch. Up. 3, 3, 5: Śaunakam Kāpeyam Kapi-gotram Abhipratāriṇam ca nāmataḥ Kakṣasenasyāpatyam Kākṣasenim bhojanāyopaviṣṭau pariviṣyamāṇau sūpakārair brahmacārī brahmavic chauṇḍo bibhikṣe bhikṣitavān). And in the RV itself, a poet in a similar situation has said, (7, 57, 2) ā vītāye sadata pipriyāṇāḥ. Similarly, the idea of Tischgenossenschaft is expressed in Sanskrit not by admasadya or its equivalents but by the word sahabhojana or its equivalents.

In thus becomes evident that neither the explanation of Yāska nor those of the above-mentioned exegetists, based on it, are correct and that the meaning of the word admasád is still a riddle. As it happens, the four passages in which the word occurs, as well as other connected passages of the RV, furnish enough clues to enable one to solve this riddle.

It is shown by 1, 124, 4c: admasán ná sasató bodháyantī that the awakening of others is a characteristic of the admasádaḥ; and it is similarly made clear by 6, 30, 3c: ni párvatā admasádo ná seduḥ that sitting down is another characteristic of the admasádaḥ. A comparison therefore of the upamānas in the RV passages in which sitting is the sāmānya-dharma with the words that are used as subjects of verbs meaning 'to awaken' in other RV passages' will show us what persons or things are described by the RV poets as both awakening others and sitting down and will thus enable us to determine the meaning of admásad.

```

- 8, 21, 5: sīdan!as te váyo yathā;
- 9, 57, 3: syenó ná vámsu sīdati;

  - 1, 104, 1: tám á ní sida svānó nārvā;

- 10, 43, 2: rájeva dasma ní sadódhi barhisi; and
- 7, 32, 2: mádhau ná mákṣa āsate;

sakunáh, hamṣáḥ, rājā, hótā and also admasád. The words used as subjects of the verb jāgṛ 'to awaken' are uṣāḥ, sómaḥ, agníḥ and dūtáḥ, and of the verb budh (caus.) to awaken' are śvā, jāráḥ, jāriṇī?, agníḥ, índraḥ, uṣāḥ, śruṣṭīvā, jaritā, yajña-hotā, and also admasád.

It will be seen from the above that, excluding the admasád, the only person or thing to which the RV poets attribute the characteristic of 'sitting' and which they at the same time describe as awakening others, is the priest who is called hoty in 7, 30, 3 and 9, 92, 2 cited above, and jarity and yajña-hoty in 10, 42, 2: prá bodhaya jaritar jārám indram and 8, 9. 17: prá bodhayoşo aśvinā prá devi sūnyte mahi | prá yajñahotar ānuṣák prá mádāya śrávo byhát. And it follows hence that the word admasád denotes in all probability the hoty or the priest who chants the prayers addressed to the gods.<sup>4</sup>

This conclusion is confirmed by 7, 83, 7: satyā nṛṇām admasādām úpastutiḥ from which we learn that admasadana is an attribute of human beings and 8, 43, 19: agnim dhībhir manīṣiṇo médhirāso vipascitaḥ | admasādyāya hinvire in which it is said that the priests urged Agni to become, or assume the function of, an admasad. It becomes evident from these passages that admasadana is in all probability equivalent to hotṛtva. For, as

The jaritr and yajña-hotr are explicitly mentioned as subjects of the verb bodhay in 10, 42, 2 and 8, 9, 17. In addition, there is no doubt that the verses 5, 14, 1; 1, 22, 1 and 8, 44, 1 (which according to Sāyaṇa are addressed to the stotr, adhvaryu and rtvijah respectively) are addressed to the priest and that we have to understand jaritr or similar word as the subject. In 7, 44, 2 too, the subject vayâm refers without doubt to the priests or singers.

observed by Prof. Macdonell (Ved. Myth., p. 96): "In consequence of his main function in the Veda of officiating at the sacrifice, Agni comes to be celebrated as the divine counterpart of the earthly priesthood. He is therefore often called generically the 'priest' (rtvij, vipro) or specifically the 'domestic priest' (purohita), and constantly, more frequently in fact than by any other name, the 'offerer' (hotr), or chief priest, who is poet and spokesman in one. He is a Hotr appointed by men (8, 49, 1; 10, 7, 5) and by gods (6, 16, 1). He is the most adorable, the most eminent of Hotrs (10,2,1; 91, 8)."

The word ipastuti too in 7, 83, 7c cited above can, by its very nature be associated only with priests and is in fact so associated with them in the RV, as likewise are its synonyms gir, stuti, stoma, etc. And this fact too indicates that the expression admasado narah in the above pāda signifies priests that praise, that it is a synonym of hotarah or jaritarah.

The above-mentioned considerations thus place it beyond doubt that admasád means hótr or the priest who chants hymns of praise. And that being so, the question arises in our mind, "What is the literal meaning of the word admasád, and why does it denote the hótr?" The clue to the answer of this question is contained in Sāyaṇa's úpastutih that admasád denotes human beings, we have to pass over all such words as also over all the words that denote inanimate things (párvatāh, mayúkhāh, gávyūtih, cakrám, rájah) or birds, insects and beasts (syenáh, váyah, hamsáh, sakunáh, sakúnih, gávah, mrgó mahisáh, makṣáh) and also admasád whose meaning we are investigating, and include in our comparison such words only as refer to human beings. These are—naráh, manuṣyāh, kanyā, dásyuh, ṛṣayah, rájā, vīráh; and hótā, pótā, brahmá, stotārah, sūráyah, brahmakṛtah, sákhāyah. The last-mentioned four or five words are synonyms of hotr.

holy, referring to the priest, is found as subject in about ten of the passages in question, and referring to or in apposition with Agni, in about fifteen passages. words: yad vā admeti gṛha-nāma | varūtham admeti tannāmasu pāṭhāt | tatra sīdatīty admasaj jananī cited on p. 212 above. The reference here is presumably to Nighaṇṭu 3, 4, which enumerates twenty-two synonyms of gṛha; but, curiously enough, the word varūtha only is found amongst these twenty-two names and not adman which is mentioned by Sāyaṇa. The dictionaries of Monier-Williams and Apte, however, mention in connection with this word the meaning of house also; and there is thus no doubt that adman is a synonym of gṛha.

admasád therefore means literally 'one who sits in the house', and through  $r\bar{u}dhi$ , it denotes the hoty who sits, and sings, in his 'abode'. This abode or seat is called by the name of sádma (this is one of the twenty-two grha-nāmāni enumerated in Nighaņļu 3, 4) in 1, 73, 1: (agniḥ) hóteva sádma vidható ví tārīt; 1, 73, 3: nákṣad dhótā pári sádma mítā yán; 7, 18, 22: hóteva sádma páry emi rébhan; 9, 92 6: pári sádmeva pasumānti hótā; 9, 97, 1: páry eti rébhan mitéva sádma pasumānti hótā; and by the name of sádana in 9, 92, 2: sīdan hóteva sádane camūṣu. It is also called hotṛṣadana in 2, 9, 1: ní hótā hotṛṣádane vídānas tveṣó dīdivān asadat sudákṣaḥ.

The hoty and his 'abode' were, as is natural, very familiar to the RV poets; and he was, in their minds, so

For the rest, it is my belief that adman is mentioned in some of the Sanskrit lexicons as having the meaning grha, though I have not, so far, come across any such passage in the lexicons that I have examined.

<sup>6</sup> This abode seems to be identical with the hotr-sadana or hotr-dhisnya (hotr-khara) of the later ritual books or with the sadas closely associated with his abode that his going to it, singing, and his sitting in it, became, as is evidenced by the above-cited passages, common figures of comparison. It is no wonder therefore that, in the circumstances, the word admasad became an appellative of the hoty, 'who sits in the abode.'

In any case, there is no doubt that admasád signifies 'hotr' and I shall now show that this meaning fits well into the context in all the passages where this word and the allied words admasadya and admasadvan occur.

This has already been translated above; see p. 32. Regarding the hote's awakening of those that are asleep, compare 8, 9, 17 and 10, 42, 2 cited above, in which the hote is exhorted to awaken the deities. Compare also 10, 29, 1: śúcir vām stómo bhuraṇāv ajīgaḥ; 7, 67, 1: yó (sc. stomaḥ) vām dūtó ná dhiṣṇyāv ájīgaḥ; 7, 73, 3: śruṣṭīvéva préṣito vām abodhi práti stómair járamāṇo vásiṣṭhaḥ in which the hymns of praise sung by the priests are said to have awakened the Aśvins. And regarding the Dawn's awakening of sleepers, compare 1, 113, 9: úṣo . . . yán mānuṣān yakṣyámāṇān ájīgaḥ; 6, 65, 1: kṣitīr ucchántī mānuṣīr ajīgaḥ and the passages referred to by Grassmann s.v. budh (bodhayantī).

rivers when thou didst cut out a path for them. The mountains sat down, like hotes (at thy behest). The worlds, O wise one, have been made firm by thee". nū cit=in the time to come; see Geldner, Glossar (s.v.). Yāska (Nirukta, 4, 17), and following him, Sāyaṇa, however interpret it as purā. The words 'at thy behest' have to be understood here; compare Sāyaṇa: tvad-ājñayā parvatā girayo nişeduḥ. The tertium comparationis in pada c is, according to Sāyaṇa, and Geldner (Ved., St., 2, 179), naiscalyena upavešanam. But the simile sidan hóteva occurs in 9, 92, 2: ácchā nrcákṣā asarat pavitre nāma dádhānah kavir asya yonau | sidan hoteva sadane camuşupem agmann rsayah saptá viprāh which says that the Soma juice settled in the bowls like the hotr in his abode. Now, the Soma juice setting in bowls, vats or jars is, in 9, 38, 4; 9, 57, 3 and other passages cited on p. 215 above, compared with the falcon sitting (i.e., going to sit) in his nest; and the tertium comparationis in these verses is, as I have already pointed out, not 'sitting' but 'swift movement.' This is the case in 9, 92, 2 and also in 9, 92, 6: pári sádmeva pasumánti hótā rájā ná satyáh sámitīr iyanah somah punanah kalasan ayasit sidan mrgo na mahisó vánesu and 9, 97, 1: sutáh pavítram páry eti rébhan mitéva sádma pasumānti hótā. Compare also 1, 180, 9: prá syandrā yātho mánuşo ná hótā "O ye swift ones (sc. Aśvins), you go (as swiftly) as the human hotr, i.e., as the hotr priest," and 1, 73, 1: hóteva sádma vidható ví tārīt " (Agni) went to the worshippers (as swiftly) as the hoty does to his abode " where too the sāmānya-dharma is swift-going.

The simile admasádo ná seduh in pāda c of the above verse is but a paraphrase of the simile sidan hóteva; and hence the tertium comparationis in this pāda too is swift movement. The meaning of the pāda is, "At thy behest, the mountains sat down (i.e., began to sit down) as quickly as hotrs." Compare 2, 11, 8: ní párvatah sādy áprayucchan "The mountain, taking heed, sat (at thy behest); that is, the mountain, heeded thy behest and sat"; and 2, 11, 7: áramsta párvatas cit sarisyán, "Even the mountain that was moving stopped (and settled on the earth at thy behest)." The reference here is to the well-known story of Indra cutting off the wings of the flying mountains and making them settle permanently on the earth; see Pischel, Ved. St., 1, 174.

"The ten impious kings, O Indra and Varuṇa, did not fight (i.e., did not gain a victory over) Sudās in battle. The praising of the hotr priests bore fruit; the gods stood by them when they were invoked." The battle of Sudās with the ten kings is described more fully in the hymn VII, 18; see Sāyaṇa's commentary thereon and Geldner's Kommentar.

"Thou, O Agni, art a wise hot, watchful always like a priest. Thou shinest in the heavens." The expression dhirah admasád is equivalent to hótā kavikratuh (1, 1, 5), hótā vidúsṭarah (1, 105, 13-14), vípro hótā (1, 14, 9) and other similar expressions. The epithet jāgṛví is frequently applied to Agni; see Grassmann, s.v., and the víprāḥ or priests are described as jāgṛvāmsaḥ in 1, 22, 21 and 3, 10, 9.

It is possible to construe the words vipro ná with the preceding word admasád; and this is what Geldner has in fact done in Ved. St., 2, 180. The meaning of the first two pādas would then be, "Thou, O Agni, art wise, a chanter sitting in the abode like a priest, and always watchful." The word admasád has both the yaugika and rūḍhi meanings here and denotes the 'hotṛ who sits in the abode.' Regarding the simile, compare 10, 78, 1: viprāso nā mānmabhiḥ svādhyàḥ "like priests with hymns, singing songs"; compare also 7, 30, 3: ny àgniḥ sīdad ásuro nā hótā huvānó átra subhágāya devān "The mighty Agni sat (in the abode) like the hotṛ, calling the gods here for good fortune."

"Thou, O son (of strength), art (our) speaker, (our) hoty. Agni, from his birth (i.e., as soon as he was born), made his way to food. Bestow on us vigour, O thou vigour-bestower; thou conquerest like a king and dwellest in a secure place." sūno in pāda a stands without doubt for sūno sahasah; compare 6, 13, 6: vadmā sūno sahaso no víliāyāh and Oldenberg, ZDMG, 55, 291. Pāda b is somewhat obscure; Roth (ZDMG, 48, 679), regards janúsā in janusājmānnam as standing for janúsām, while Grassmann is inclined to substitute ájman for ájma. Ludwig, without proposing any alteration translates pāda b as "Von jeher hat Agni sich seine ban und seine speise gemacht." This does not seem to be very satisfactory; and I therefore construe annam as depending on aima (annam prati ajma) and translate it as above. Compare 4, 7, 10: sadyó jātásya dádršānam ójo vád asya váto anuvāti socih vrnákti tigmām atasésu jihvām sthirā cid

&lt;sup>7</sup>The description of the hot r as the 'sitter in the abode,' the allusion in the verses cited above (on p. 220) to him and his sadman, to his going to the sadman singing, and to his awakening of sleeping men and deities with his chants, as also the juxtaposition of the words hot r and huvāna in this verse, all indicate that his function, in the time of the RV as in that of the Śrauta-sūtras, was to chant hymns of prayer. Hence Yāska (comp. Nirukta, 7, 15: hotāram hvātāram) seems to be right in deriving the word from hu' to call,' and Aurņavābha wrong in deriving it from hu' to offer oblations.'

8, 43, 19: agnim dhībhir manīşiņo médhirāso vipascitaḥ | admasádyāya hinvire ||

"The wise, intelligent and inspired priests urged Agni with hymns (i.e., prayers) to become hotr." Compare 3, 29, 8: sida hotah svá u loké cikitván; 1, 76, 2: éhy agna ihá hótā ní ṣīda; and 2, 36, 4: úsan hotar ní ṣadā yóniṣu triṣú in which Agni is exhorted to assume the office of hotr; compare also 6, 4, 1; 6, 11, 1; 6, 11, 4; 6, 15, 16; 3, 4, 3; 3, 62, 12; 7, 39, 1, etc., in which verses too Agni is prayed to to become hotr.

§ 12 vireká

This word occurs in eight passages of the RV and in no independent passage elsewhere. It is not mentioned in the Nighantu, and since, moreover, it does not occur in any of the passages cited in the Nirukta, Yāska and Durga have had no occasion of explaining it. Sāyana derives the word from ni+ric 'to empty' or nir+i 'to go' (comm. on 8,96,3: ni-pūrvād ricyater vā nih-purvād eter veti samdehād anavagrahah) and explains it differently as nairdhanya, durgati or dāridrya (1, 51, 14; 7, 18, 23; 7, 90, 3), dāna (7, 20, 8), dhana (8, 24, 4) and nirgamana (8, 24, 3; 8, 33, 2; 8, 96, 3) in his commentary on the RV and as reko riktatvam | tadrahitam karma nirekam tādrše sarvasādhanasam pūrņe karmaņi in his commentary on TB. 2, 8, 1, 1 (=RV. 7, 90, 3). Uvaţa and Mahīdhara, on the other hand, in their commentaries on the same verse (VS. 27, 24=RV. 7, 90, 3) interpret the

Roth, too, in the PW, derives the word from ni+ric and explains nirekam (acc.) as 'etwa bleibender Besitz; Eigenthum' and nireke (loc.) as '(eigenthümlich) bleibend; auf die Dauer; für immer.' This interpretation was considered unsatisfactory by Geldner (Ved. St., 1, 155) who therefore proposed (ibid., p. 157) the meanings '1. Subst. bevorzugter-, Ehren-platz, Vorrang, Vortritt 7, 20, 8; 1, 51, 14; 8, 33, 2; 7, 18, 23; 8, 24, 3; 8, 96, 3; (2) Adj. eine bevorzugte Stellung einnehmend, bevorzugt 8, 24, 4; 7, 90, 3 dunkel.' In his Glossar however he has, following Roth, interpreted nireka as "alleiniger Besitz 8, 24, 4; Ausschliesslichkeit; loc. in alleinigem Besitz 1, 51, 14; 7, 18, 23; 7, 90, 3; 8, 96, 3; ausschliesslich, ganz allein 7, 20, 8; 8, 24, 3; 8, 33, 2". Similarly Oldenberg too writes (RV. Noten. I, 49): "Wie prareká Hinausreichen, Ueberschiessen ist nireká m E. wörtlich etwa Hineinreichen d. h. das Stehen in engsten Zusammenhang mit Jemand, Zugehören zum intimsten Besitz Jemandes; vgl. nítya".

The above interpretations are all based on the supposed derivation of the word from the root ric with ni, and are mere guesses. None of them fits into the context in, for instance, 1, 51, 14: indro asrāyi sudhyò nireké and 7, 90, 3: idha vāyúm niyútah sascata svā utá svetám vásudhitim nireké; and a comparison of the passages in which this word occurs with other connected passages shows that the real meaning of the word is something quite different from those mentioned above.

In 8, 24, 4: å nirekám utá priyám indra darşi jánānām, we find nireká used as the object of ādarşi while in the preceding verse (8, 24, 3): sá na stávāna å bhara rayim citrá-śravastamam | nireké cid yó harivo vásur dadíh, it is said of Indra that he gives wealth in nireka.

A comparison therefore of the words that are used in RV passages as objects of the root dr or dar 'to burst open' with the words used in the locative case in connection with the word dadi in the passages in which that word occurs 'will show what is common to both groups of words and will thus guide one to the meaning of nireka.

Now, the words used as objects of the verb dr or dar are, besides nireká, the following, namely, átka, ádri, áp, ápihita, amítra, ásvya, ís, útsa, (diváh) kávandha, kósa, gó, gotrá, gódhāyas, dásyu, dánu, drlhá, púr, bhúvana, rádhah, valá, vája, vrajá, satá, sátru, sámbara, sahásra, sugráthita and sūkará.

The word dadi is used in twelve verses in nine of which it is not connected with any word in the locative case. In the remaining verses, it is connected with the locative nireka in 8, 24, 3 as we have seen above; and in 1, 81, 7: máde-made hi no dadir yūthā gávām rjukrātuh | sām gṛbhāya purū satobhayahastyā vāsu sisīhi rāyā ā bhara and 8, 46, 15: dadī rēkņas tanvè dadīr vāsu dadīr vājeşu puruhūta vājinam | nūnām ātha, it is connected with the locatives māde-made and vājeşu respectively.

It will be seen that, beside  $nirek\acute{a}$  whose meaning we are now endeavouring to determine, the word  $v\acute{a}ja$  is the only one that is common to both groups; and this indicates that  $nirek\acute{a}$  is probably equivalent to  $v\acute{a}ja$ .

The comparison of 7, 20, 8: yás ta indra priyó jáno dúdāsad ásan nireké adrivah sákhā te with its parallel passages and of 7, 90, 3: ádha vāyúm niyútah saścata svá utá svetám vásudhitim nireké with its parallel passages points likewise to such equivalence and hence makes it certain that nireká=vája. In 7, 20, 8, Indra is exhorted to regard, in nireká, the offerer (of oblations) as his friend, that is, to befriend the offerer (of oblations) in nireká. The only other verses in the RV in which a similar prayer or exhortation is addressed to Indra, and words in the locative case are used in connection with sakhi, are 8, 13, 3: tám ahve vájasātaya indram bhárāya susminam | bhávā nah sumné ántamah sákhā vrdhé; 6, 33, 4: sá tvám na indrákavabhir ūti sákhā visváyur avitā vrdhé bhūh | svàrsātā yád dhváyāmasi tvā yúdhyanto nemádhitā prtsú śūra; and 1, 129, 4: asmākam va indram usmasīstāve sákhāvam visvāvum prāsáham vujám vājeşu prāsáham yujám | asmākam bráhmotáyé 'vā prtúşu kāsu cit | nahí tvā śátruh stárate strnósi yám visvam sátrum strnósi vám. In the first of these verses, Indra is exhorted to befriend the suppliant in sumná, in the second, in svàrṣāti and prt (note that these are synonyms of vaja), and in the third, in  $v\dot{a}ja$ . Compare also in this connection 4, 24, 6: krnóty asmai várivo vá itthéndrāya sómam ušaté sunóti | sadhrīcinena mánasāvivenan tám ít sákhāyam kynute samátsu; 8, 21, 8: vidmá sakhitvám utá sūra bhojyàm å te tå vajrinn īmahe | utó samasminn å sisīhi no vaso vāje sušipra gómati; 3, 51, 9: aptūrye maruta āpir esó 'mandann indram ánu dátivarah i tébhih sakám bibatu vrtrakhādáh sutám sómam dāsúsah své sadhásthe; and 6, 21, 8: sá tú śrudhindra nútanasya brahmanyató vira kārudhāyah | tváin hy àpih pradívi pitrnáin sásvad babhútha suháva éstau and the locatives váje, samátsu, apturye and éstau, (these three are synonyms of vaja), used therein.

In 7, 90, 3: ádha vāyúm . . . nireké, it is said that the team (of horses) accompany Vāyu in nireka. Compare with this verse 7, 91, 6: vā vām salám nivúto vāh sahásram indravāyū visvávārāh sácante | ábhir yātam suvidátrābhir arvāk pātám narā prátibhrtasya mádhvah in which the word nivitah and the verb sac occur, and in which Indra and Vayu are exhorted to come to the sacrifice (this, be it noted, is one of the meanings of valantialai), accompanied by the team (of horses). Compare also 7,91,5. å no niyúdbhih satínībhir adhvarám sahasrínībhir úpa vāli vajnám | vávo asmín sávane mādavasva; 7,92,3: prá vábhir vási dásvámsam ácchá nivúdbhir vávav istáve duroné; and 1, 135, 7: áti vāyo sasató yāhi śáśvato yátra grávā vádati tátra gacchatam grhám indras ca gacchatam ví sūnýtā dádrše riyate ghrtám á pūrnáyā nivútā vātho adhvarám indras ca vātho adhvarám in which Vāyu is prayed to come with his team to the yajñá or adhvará (which also is a synonym of  $v\hat{a}ja$ ).

All this makes it certain and places it beyond doubt that  $nirek\acute{a}$  is equivalent to  $v\acute{a}ja$ . And hence it becomes evident that this word is derived, not from ni+ric, but from ni+ri or  $r\bar{\imath}$  'to run' (ri gatau;  $r\bar{\imath}$  gati-reṣaṇayoḥ) by the addition of the suffix  $ka^2$ ; compare ślóka (from $\delta ru$ ) and (su)  $m\acute{e}ka$  (from mi).  $nirek\acute{a}$  thus denotes, like its equivalent  $v\acute{a}ja$  which is derived from vaj 'to go'  $(vaja\ gatau)$ , strength, quickness, race, booty, prize, battle, sacrifice, etc. (see PW and Grassmann s. v.  $v\~{a}ja$ ); and I shall now show that these meanings fit well into the context in all the verses in which the word occurs.

According to Hemacandra's Anekārthamālā and the Medinī (see the PW s. v.), durdhara is a synonym of rşabha. The

indra darşi jānānām |
dhṛṣatā dhṛṣno stāvamāna ā bhara ||

"Thou, O Indra, also cuttest open (the receptacle of, and makest accessible) for people, the dear wealth. O thou valiant one, bring (us wealth) boldly, being praised." Regarding the expression nirekám ádarsi, compare 2, 12, 15: váh sunvaté pácate dudhrá å cid vājam dárdarsi sá kílāsi satyáh; 4, 16, 8: sá no netā vájam á darsi bhúrim gotrá rujánn ángirobhir grnanáh; and specially, 8, 33, 3: kánvebhir dhrsnav á dhrsád vájam darsi sahasrinam; and 8, 45, 40-41: bhindhi visvā ápa dvísah pári bādho jahi mŕdhah | vásu spārhám tád á bhara | yád viláv indra yát sthiré yát páršanc párabhrtam vásu spārhám tád á bhara all addressed to Indra, and also 9, 68, 7: ávyo várebhir utá deváhūtibhir nýbhir vató vājam ā darsi sātuye addressed to Soma, and 10, 69, 3: sá revác choca sá gíro jusasva sá vájam darsi sá ihá srávo dhāh addressed to Agni. And regarding the phrase privám nirekám, compare the expressions privám vásu, spārhám vásu, kāmyam vásu, vāmám vásu, etc. (for references, see Grassmann under these vocables).

expression durdhuro gāvaḥ is accordingly equivalent to rṣabhāḥ. Compare 5, 56, 3 cited above and also 10, 103, 1: āśūḥ śiśāno vṛṣabhô nā bhīmāḥ in which the bull is mentioned as upamāna in respect of impetuous rush.

The verb ri or ri, without the prefix ni, is used with the sense of running in 5, 58, 6:  $ks\delta danta$  apo rinate vanani; 1, 85, 3: vartmany esam and riyate ghrtam and other verses; see Grassmann s. v.

pajréşu stómo dúryo ná yūpaḥ | aśvayúr gavyū rathayúr vasūyúr
indra id rāyáḥ kṣayati prayantā ||

"Indra has been raised high (i.e., highly praised or glorified) in the sacrifice of the pious (sacrificer), and the hymn that longs for horses, cows, chariots, and wealth, has been raised high among the Pajras, like the door post. Indra alone rules over wealth and is (its) bestower." In pāda a, aśrāyi has been translated by Geldner (RV. Ueber., I, 58) as 'gegeben', which seems to me to be incorrect. Compare 6, 11, 5: áśrāyi yajñáh súrye ná cáksuh 'the sacrifice has been raised high as the eye to the sun'; 5, 1, 12: gávişthiro námasā slómam agnaú... asrct 'Gavisthira, has, with adoration, raised high the hymn for Agni'; 5, 28, 1: sámiddho agnír diví socir asret 'Agni, kindled, has raised high his light in the sky'; 4, 6, 2: ūrdhvám bhānúm savitā devó ašret 'God Savitr has raised high his ray'; and 1, 10, 1: gayanti tvā gāyatrinó 'rcanty arkám arkinah | brahmánas tvā śatakrata úd vamsám iva yemire 'The singers besing thee, the chanters chant chants; the priests, O thou that art hundred-fold wise, have raised thee high like a pole.' The last-cited verse, it may be observed, indicates that the comparison dúryo ná vůpah in pada b is to be understood of indrah also in pada a.

Pāda b is somewhat cryptic. It is translated by Geldner (RV. Ueber.) as 'wie ein Türpfosten ist das Preislied bei den Pajra's'; and this is explained by him as "Das Loblied hält so fest wie der Türpfosten. Dasselbe Bild in 8, 23, 24: stómebhih sthūrayūpavát". But there seems to be no doubt that in this verse, the word sthūrayūpa is, like the word vyašva in the preceding verse, jyéṣṭhābhir vyašvavát, a proper name (see Grassmann s. v., PW s.v., and Sāyaṇa) and that it has nothing to do with a 'stout post.' The meaning of 8, 23, 24 is, "Jetzt singe dem gewaltigen mit Lied nach Sthūrayūpa's Art" as given by Grassmann (RV. Ueber.). I believe therefore that the verb aśrāyi in pāda a is the predicate of stoma and  $y\bar{u}pa$  also in pada b (this is the opinion of Oldenberg also; see RV. Noten, I) and that the tertium comparationis is 'raising high' or (uc) chrayana. Compare 3, 8, 2-3: úc chrayasva mahaté saúbhagāya | úc chrayasva vanaspate vársman prthivyá ádhi addressed to the sacrificial post  $(y\bar{u}pa)$ ; compare likewise the expressions ūrdhvás tisthāh, tasthivámsah, ún nayanti, unnīyámānāh, śráyamānah, etc., used of this post in that hymn and also the other verses referred to on p. 102 of Oldenberg's Vedaforschung and sthūnārājam ucchrayati in Śānkh. GS. 3, 2, 8 (Sāyaṇa, it may be observed explains duryo yūpah in 1, 51, 14 as dvāri nikhātā sthūņā). Regarding the expression stómo aśrāyi, compare 3, 14, 2: áyāmi te náma-uktim jusasva; 1, 153, 2: prástutir vām dhāma ná práyuktir áyāmi mitravarunā suvrktíh; 10, 50, 6: yajñó mántro bráhmódyatam vácah; 1, 80, 9; indrāva bráhmódyatam; and 1, 190, 3: úpastutim námasa údyatim ca slókam vamsat savitéva prá  $b\bar{a}h\dot{u}$  which all refer to hymns 'being raised high'; compare also 7, 83, 3: indrāvaruņā divi ghóşa āruhat.

The words asvayúh, etc., are, according to Sāyaṇa, Grassmann and Ludwig, attributes of Indra. This opinion seems to me to be untenable; for it is difficult to conceive of Indra that he is 'longing for horses, cows, chariots and wealth.' I therefore agree with Geldner (op. cit.) in thinking that they are the attributes of stómah in pāda b. Compare 7, 67, 5: prācīm u devāsvinā dhiyam mé 'mṛdhrām sātáyc kṛtam vasūyúm and 1, 62, 11: vasūyávo matáyo dasma dadruh in which the epithet vasūyu is applied to mati or hynn; compare also 8, 78, 9: tvām úd yavayúr máma kāmo gavyúr hiranyayúh | tvām asvayúr éṣate.

śirşánn indrasya krátavo nireká āsánn éşanta śrútyā upāké ||

"In Indra is attached the iron Vajra (thunderbolt); in Indra's two arms is the greatest strength; in Indra's head are insights. In the sacrifice, there run remarkable (praises or offerings) into (his) near mouth." With regard to padas a, b, c, compare 1, 55, 8: ápraksitam vásu bibharsi hástayor ásālham sáhas tanvi srutó dadhe āvrtāso 'vatāso ná kartýbhis tanúsu te krátava indra bhūrayah "In thy hands, thou carriest inexhaustible wealth. The famed one bore invincible strength in his body. In thy body, O Indra, are many insights, concealed, like wells hidden by the makers", and 2, 16, 2: yásmād indrād brhatáh kim caném rté visvāny asmin sámbhrtādhi vīryā | jatháre sómain tanvī sáho máho háste vájrain bhárati śirsáni krátum "Without whom, the great Indra, nothing (happens), in him all mights are gathered. In his belly, he bears Soma, in his body, great strength, in his hand, the thunderbolt, in his head, insight."

The sense of pada d is obscure. The Padapatha reads śrutyai here (as it does in 2, 2, 7: duró ná vājam śrutya ápa vrdhi and 10, 111, 3: indrah kila śrutya asyá veda) for which Grassmann (s. v. śrutya) proposes śrutyāh, a suggestion which I have adopted in my above translation. Sāyaṇa explains the pāda as: asan āsye ca yāni karmāni yuddhārtham vājino gajān sannāhayatetyādīni bhavanti kim ca śrutyai samgrāmāya nirgacchato'nušāsata indrasya vākya-śravanārthain sarva upajīvino bhrtyā upāke 'ntika eşanta ayam indro 'smān kutra kutra kārye niyokşyatīty etena manasā tadantike samantād āgacchanti; and Oldenberg observes (RV. Noten, II): "śrútyā: man erwartet zunächst Nom.; in der Tat srútyäh nicht unwahrscheinlich (vgl. Gr. WB; zu II, 2, 7; X, 111, 3): "zu seinem Mund (Lok. des Ziels) streben sr (Hören); d. h. an seinem Mund hängt Hören und Gehorchen des Andern. Doch kann auch śrútyai (Pp) richtig sein; die krátu in seinem Haupt (c) strebt auf seinem Munde fort um Gehör zu finden (so Ludw.), oder: 'nach seinem Munde drängen sich (alle) um . . zu Hören' (Geldner Rel. Lesebuch, 79)." These explanations seem to me to be unsatisfactory, and the more so, as there is nothing parallel to the ideas contained in them in any other verse of the RV. The word srutya is used as an epithet of brahman, hymn, in 1, 165, 11: ámandan mā marutah stómo átra ván me narah śrútyam bráhma cakra; and the verb is found used with mati, hymn, in 5, 67, 5: tát sú văm éşate matih. Compare with this 6, 47, 14: áva tvé indra praváto nórmír gíro bráhmani niyúto dhavante 'in thee, O Indra, run hymns and praises in teams (i.e., many hymns of praise) as (swiftly as) the current down an incline,' and also 6, 36, 3: samudrám ná síndhava ukthásusmā uruvyácasam gíra á višanti; 1, 176, 2: tásminn á vesayā gíro yá ékas carşaninám which refer to hymns running into or 'entering into' Indra. This, presumably, is through the mouth; and hence it is probable that śrutyāh refers to girah and that the meaning of the pada is, as given above, 'the remarkable praises run into (his) near mouth.' Regarding the expression upāká āsán, compare the analogous expression upākáyor hástayoh in 1, 81, 4: śriyá rsvá upākáyor ní sipri hárivan dadhe hástayor vájram ayasám.

At the same time, it must be observed that Grassmann's suggestion (l. c.), too, that śrútyāḥ refers to sómāḥ, is not improbable. Compare 3, 46, 4: indram sómāsaḥ pradivi sutāsaḥ samudrām ná sravāta ā višanti 'into Indra enter at all times the Soma juices that have been expressed as rivers into the ocean'; 9, 85, 7: éndram višanti madirāsa indavaḥ; 9, 97, 36: indram ā viša bṛhatā rāveṇa; 9, 2, 1: indram indo vṛṣā viša; 9, 108, 16: indrasya hārdi somadhānam ā viša samudrām iva sindhavaḥ; and 9, 66, 15: éndrasya jaṭhāre viša in which the Soma juice is said to enter into Indra, presumably through the mouth. Compare also 7, 15, 1: upasādyāya mīṭhūṣa āsyè juhutā havīḥ; 7, 102, 3: tāsmā id āsyè havīr juhūtā mádhumattamam; 10, 91, 3: áhāvy agne havír āsyè te; and 4, 49, 1: idám vām āsyè havíh priyám indrā-bṛhaspatī in which the word havíh is used in connection with āsyè, 'in the mouth.' Hence it is not improbable that śrútyāh denotes 'remarkable offerings (of Soma or oblations).'

The sense of the pada remains unchanged even if one agrees with the Padapatha that the word used in it is śrútyai and not śrútyah. The meaning of śrútyai is 'so that it is heard of; i.e., as is well-known'; and we have still to supply as the subject of éşanta the word gírah or sómāh or havimṣi. The meaning of the pāda would thus be, the 'hymns (or offerings) run, as is well-known, into (his) near mouth in the sacrifice.'

7, 18, 23: catváro mā paijavanásya dánāh smáddiṣṭayaḥ kṛŝaníno nireké | ṛjráso mā pṛthiviṣṭhāḥ sudásas tokám tokáya śrávase vahanti ||

This will be explained in the next article on smáddisti. Regarding nireké, compare 8, 4, 19: sthūrám rādhaḥ satāsvam kurangásya divistisu 'great is the gift, comprising hundred horses, of Kuranga in the sacrifices.'

"The dear one, O Indra, who makes offerings to thee, may he, O thou with the thunderbolt, be thy friend in battle (i.e., when he is fighting, be thou his friend and aid him). May we be most acceptable in this thy favour, in the shelter, in the protection, of thee that art gracious." With regard to pāda b, compare 6, 33, 4; 4, 24, 6; 1, 129, 4; 3, 51, 9; and 6, 21, 8 cited above (p. 226).

rāyé devî dhişáṇā dhāti devám |
ádha vāyúm niyútaḥ saścata svå
utá švetám vásudhitim nireké ||

"Whom these bright Heaven and Earth bore for prosperity, him, the god, the goddess Dhiṣaṇā raises high (i.e., glorifies) for prosperity. And then the own teams of Vāyu accompanied the white one, who bestows wealth, to the sacrifice." Compare 7, 91, 6; 7, 91, 5; 7, 92, 3; and 1, 135, 7 cited above (p. 227).

rayim citrásravastamam |
nireké cid yó harivo vásur dadíh ||

"Bring to us, being praised, wealth that is most wonderful and renowned, O thou with bay horses, that bestowest wealth even in sacrifice." Compare 1, 81, 7 and 8, 46, 15 cited above (p. 225).

"O thou bright one, when (the Soma juice) is expressed, the men that are reciting praises, call to thee in the sacrifice. When wilt thou, O Indra, thirsting for the Soma juice, come to the house (i.e., the sacrificial place), as (swiftly as) a roaring bull (to a pool of water)"? Regarding the simile in pāda d, compare 1, 130, 2: pibā sómam indra suvānám ádribhiḥ kóścna siktám avatám ná vámsagas tātṛṣāṇó ná vámsagaḥ; 5, 36, 1: sá á gamad indro yó vásūnām cíketad dātum dāmano rayīṇām | dhanvacaró ná vámsagas tṛṣāṇás cakamānáḥ pibatu dugdhám amsúm and also 8, 4, 3: yáthā gauró apā kṛtám tṛṣyann éty ávériṇam | āpitvé naḥ prapitvé tùyam ā gahi káṇveṣu sú sácā piba.

This is a word that occurs in four passages of the RV only; it is neither mentioned nor explained in the Nighantu and Nirukta. Sāyana gives four different explanations of it,—bhadravākya, prašastadaršana, prašastātisarjanasraddhādidānāngayukta, and kalyānādesin. Roth explains it as 'geschult, dressiert, eingeübt' in the PW, and Grassmann as 'mit Lenkung versehen, 1) gut lenkend; 2) gut zu lenken'. Ludwig, in his RV. Ucber., has interpreted it differently as 'die glück herbringen'; 'deine weisung geht hieher (=du selbst unabhängig mit herrschaft über uns)'; 'mir hier bestimmte' and 'hieher die weisung habende.' Geldner, in his Glossar, gives the meanings "1) dessen Weisungen gleich sind, gerecht 3, 45, 52; 2) gleichmässig geschult,—eingelernt 6, 63, 9; 7, 18, 23; 10, 62, 10." In his RV. Ueber., however, he translates the word in 3, 45, 5 as 'gleichmässig zuteilend' and gives the following note: "smáddisti sonst ein technischer Ausdruck der Danastuti's (6, 63, 9; 7, 18, 23: 10, 62, 10). Hier wohl in etwas anderem Sinn. disti ist im RV unbelegt und småd auch sicher nicht bestimmt. Say.: bhadravakyah in dem er smát im Sinn von sumát nimmt," Oldenberg, on the other hand, observes 1 (RV. Noten, I, 251): "smáddisti mir dunkel. Es findet sich sonst (6, 63, 9; 7, 18, 23; 10, 62, 10) von geschenkten Sklaven, Rossen, Stieren (?) in Danastutis. In Bezug auf eine Schenkung heisst es V, 36, 6: vó róhitau vājinau vājinīvān tribhih sataih sacamānāv adista: gibt dies ádista, wenn es von dis kommt, den Schlüssel zu smáddisti? diś wäre offenbar "zuweisen"; smáddisti hiesse etwa "begleitet von (einem Akt der) Zuweisung."

&#x27; He also urges against Geldner's explanations (in Glossar) the criticisms (1) that they are not in accord with the meaning of smat, and (2) that the two proposed meanings are separated by too wide a gulf.

Ein solches Wort lässt sich von Geschenke brauchen, aber auch—und das müsste hier angenommen werden—vom Schenken, der, wo er auftritt, von Taten der Freigebigkeit begleitet ist."

It is plain from the above that Geldner and Oldenberg, Sāyaṇa and Ludwig, are at sea regarding the meaning of the word; and as for the meanings proposed by Roth and Grassmann, it can be readily seen that they do not fit well into the context in all the four passages and that they are therefore incorrect.

The word smáddisti is a bahuvrihi compound composed of smat (or smad) and disti. This latter word disti, though it does not (as observed by Geldner) occur elsewhere in the RV, is used frequently in later literature where it has the sense of 'fate, fortune, good fortune'; see Apte. The former word smát is found used in the RV only; it occurs, uncompounded, in thirteen passages, and compounded with abhīsu, ibha, ista, ūdhas, puramdhi and rātisāc in one passage each, and with disti, in four passages. In these four passages, Sāyaṇa, as we have already seen, explains smat as prasasta, bhadra, or kalyāna. Likewise, in ten of the remaining passages too, (1, 51, 15; 5, 41, 15; 5, 41, 19; 5, 87, 8; 7, 3, 8; 8, 18, 4; 8, 20, 18; 8, 25, 24; 8, 26, 19; 8, 28, 2) he declares it to be a synonym of, or explains it as, su-, prasasta or sobhana. In explaining 1, 186, 6, he writes: smat sahārthe prāsastye vā vartate | atra prašamsāyām; and he regards it as the equivalent of saha in 8, 186, 8 and 8, 34, 6 and of saha or prasasta in 7, 87, 3. In 1, 100, 13, he explains it as bhṛṣam, in 2, 4, 9 as ati-prabhūtam, in 10, 61, 8, as asmattah, and in 1, 73, 6 as nitya (smac-chabdo nitya-sabda-samānārthah); in 10, 42, 4 he regards smadibha as a proper name.

The meanings atiprabhūta, bhṛśa, nitya and asmattaḥ seem to have been invented by Sāyaṇa for the occasion and need not be considered seriously. The meanings sobhana (prasasta, su-) and saha, on the other hand, belong to a different category; and in fact, it is the opinion of Roth (PW), Grassmann, Wackernagel (Ai. Gr. II. 1.p.287), Macdonell (Vcd. Gr. p. 424), Oldenberg (RV. Noten II, p. 7) and other European exegetists, that smát is a synonym of saha, while, for my part, I am inclined to prefer the meaning sobhana. See below.

As far as the compound word småddisti is concerned, its meaning remains the same whether one regards småt as the equivalent of saha or of sobhana. In the former case, the word means 'accompanied by good luck,' and in the latter case, 'having good luck.' In either case, therefore, the word småddisti means 'with good luck; having good luck.'

The good luck that is referred to here is that caused, or brought, by auspicious marks; for it is the belief of the Indian Aryans that certain marks on the body, borne by men, women, horses dogs, cocks, etc., bring good or bad luck to the possessor. Such belief, for instance, is alluded to in Aśvalāyana's words (GS. 1. 5, 3): buddhi-rūpa-śīla-lakṣana-sampannām arogām upayaccheta which enjoin that the girl one marries must have lakşanāni or auspicious marks on her body. A similar injunction is contained in Yājñavalkyasmrti 1,52: aviplutabrahmacaryo laksanyām striyam udvahet; while Sānkh. GS. 1, 5: kumāryai pānim grhnīyāt | yā lakṣana-sampannā syāt | yasyā abhyātmam angāni syuh samāh kesāntāh | āvartāv api yasyai syātām pradaksinau grīvāyām | sad vīrān janavisyatīti vidyāt specifies some of the auspicious marks and Manu (3, 8-10): nālomikām nātilomām . . na pingalām hamsa-vāraņa-gāminīm tanulomakeśa-daśanām mydvangīm describes some of the inauspicious as also auspicious marks of a girl.

is a charm against unlucky marks: the gods Savitr, Varuṇa, Mitra, Aryaman and Anumati are implored to remove, i.e., to render innocuous, the evil marks (in a woman's body according to Kausika-sūtra 42, 19: nir lakṣmyam iti pāpa-lakṣaṇāyā mukham ukṣaty anvṛcam dakṣiṇāt keśa-stukāt) and to confer bhadrāṇi and saubhagam (i.e., auspicious marks) on her. Similarly, Ap.MB. 1, 1, 3: ábhrātṛghnīm varuṇāpatighnīm bṛhaspate | indrāputraghnīm lakṣmyàm tām asyai savitaḥ suva refers to marks that presage good to brothers, husband and sons, and ibid. 1, 10, 3: yā 'syām patighnī tanūh prajā-ghni pasughni lakşmighni jāraghnim asyai tām kṛṇomi refers to the body, i.e., without doubt, to the bodymarks, that forebode destruction and death of husband, children, cattle and wealth. Similarly, there is no doubt that the expressions ápatighnī and śivā paśúbhyaḥ in RV. 10, 85, 14: ághoracakṣur ápatighny edhi śivā paśúbhyaḥ sumánāḥ suvárcāḥ have the same meaning as the words ápatighnī, etc., have in Ap. MB. 1, 1, 3 cited above and refer to bodily marks that presage good to husband and cattle.

Geldner's view (Ved. St., 1, 314 ff.) that the whole hymn is concerned with the domestic cat seems to me untenable.

A detailed description of such bodily marks and of their effects is given in Agnipurāņa, Garudapurāņa, Brhat-samhitā and other such works. In the last-mentioned book, ch. 69 deals with kanyālakṣana, and Varāhamihira observes in verse 1, after enumerating some auspicious marks, that the person who marries the girl with such marks would become king (täm udvahed yadi bhuvo 'dhipatitvam icchet), and in verse 3, that the marks described therein bring the possessor much wealth (vipulām śriyam ādadhāti). The commentator Bhattotpala too cites in the course of his commentary on the 3rd and 4th verses, the following observations of Samudra: näbhi-desah suguptas ca yasyāh sā dhana-bhaginī; jaghanam vipulam yasyah susparsam romavarjitam | suvarnābharanair yuktā sā bhaved rājya-bhāginī. Similarly, Varāhamihira observes in ibid, 61.1-2, with reference to some auspicious marks of the dog and the bitch: yasya syāt sa karoti postur acirāt pustām śriyam śvā grhe and vā sā rāstram kukkurī pāti pustā (i.e., the owner of such bitch becomes the ruler of a kingdom), and in 62.3, with reference to a hen having auspicious marks: sā dadāti suciram mahīksitāin śrī-yaśo-vijaya-vīrya-sainpadah. ibid. 63.2. he describes some auspicious marks of tortoises and remarks of a tortoise having such, that it causes the expansion of the kingdom (so 'pi nṛ pāṇām rāstra-vivrddhyai) and Bhattotpala cites, in his commentary on 63.3, the verse: stri-putra-matidam vidyāt kūrmam rāṣṭra-vivardhanam. In ibid. 64.9, Varāhamihira, after describing four kinds of well-favoured goats, writes, te catvāraḥ śriyaḥ putrā nālakṣmīke vasanti te; and in 60.18 observes of a bull with auspicious marks that he brings wealth to his owner (svāminam acirāt kurute patim lakṣmyāḥ).

smáddiṣṭi thus primarily signifies 'possessing auspicious marks that bring to the possessor good luck (i.e., śrī, yaśaḥ, vijaya, vīrya, rājya, strī, putra, buddhi, etc., as described above).' Since however the possession of auspicious marks makes for beauty also, the word has the secondary sense of 'handsome, beautiful.' It is a synonym of the words bhadra, kalyāṇa, mangala, śobhana, (cf. Amara-kośa 133: bhadram kalyāṇam mangalam śubham), subhaga and subhāga a all which mean 'having good luck; handsome, beautiful.'

"Thou, O Indra, goest wherever thou listest; thou art sovereign, handsome and very famous. O thou that art much praised, be our best hearer, growing in strength." The word svayúh in pāda a is obscure. If one interprets it in the manner of aśvayú, vasūyú, rathayú, etc., the meaning would be, 'eager for one's own self,' which is not very intelligible. The word occurs again in

2, 4, 7: sá yó vy ásthād abhi dákṣad urvim paśúr naíti svayúr ágopāḥ where it is said of Agni that he spreads himself on the earth, burning, and that he is svayú, like a cow without a cowherd. svayú seems to denote here, 'one who goes wherever one lists' and I have hence so explained it in 3, 45, 5 also.

sváyašastara= súyašastara (see p. 44) and not 'selbst-bewusst' as Geldner translates in his RV. Ueber. smád-diṣṭi= having auspicious marks, handsome; compare the epithets bhadrá and susamdýš that are applied to Indra in 1, 82, 3: susamdýšam tvā vayám mághavan vandiṣīmáhi and 1, 132, 2: áhann índro yáthā vidé sīrṣṇā-sīrṣṇopavācyaḥ | asmatrá te sadhryùk santu rātáyo bhadrā bhadrásya rātáyaḥ.

"And [were given] to me two swift mares by Puraya, a hundred by Sumīḍha, and cooked foods by Peruka. Śāṇḍa gave ten oxen, big, obedient (?), having auspicious marks, and adorned with gold ornaments." Regarding the auspicious marks of oxen, see ch. 60 of Bṛhat-saṃhitā; and regarding the gift of oxen decked with golden ornaments, compare Mahābhārata 1, 216, 7: [Pāṇḍubhyaḥ prāhiṇod dhariḥ] dāntān sauvarṇaiḥ subhraiḥ paṭṭair alaṃkṛtān.

7, 18, 23: catváro mā paijavanásya dánāh smáddistayah kršaníno nireké | rji áso mā pṛthivistháh sudásas tokám tokáya śrávase vahanti ||

"The four fleet horses, decked with golden ornaments and having auspicious marks, given to me by Sudas, son of Pijavana, in the sacrifice, being on the earth, carry me (and my) offspring to offspring and renown." Regarding the auspicious marks of horses, see ch. 65 of Brhat-samhitā. nircké=vāje, in the sacrifice.

The import of the second hemistich is not clear and the word prthivisthah in pada c is perplexing. Geldner, in his Glossar, gives the word as prthivistha (though the Samhitā and Padapātha both have *t/låh) 'auf der Erde stehend' but does not indicate with what word it is to be construed. Ludwig regards it as an irregular genitive singular referring to Sudas, who, according to him, stays on the earth 'ausz hochachtung'! It seems plain that the word is an epithet of rirasah or horses, and I have so explained it in my above translation. I cannot see, however, any force in the word, and I am inclined to believe that the opposite of prthivisthah, namely, divisthah, would be much more appropriate here; compare the expression divi dhavamanam used of a horse in Kaurayana's Danastuti of Medhyātithi Kānva in 8, 3, 21: yám me dur indro marútah pákasthāmā kaúrayānah | vísvesām tmánā sóbhistham úpeva diví dhavamanam.

Regarding the words  $m\bar{a}$ ... tokam in this hemistich, I have followed Geldner (Kommentar) in understanding it as 'me (and my) offspring'; Sāyaṇa, however, regards tokam as an attribute of  $m\bar{a}$  (tokam putravat  $p\bar{a}lan\bar{\imath}yam$   $m\bar{a}m$  vasiṣṭham); and similarly Oldenberg too (RV. Noten, II, p. 23) suggests the explanation, "(mich) der ich (selbst) das kind (eines berühmten, ähnlich erfolgreichen Vaters) bin."

"And Yadu and Turva gave me for my service two handsome slaves, supplemented by cows (i.e., in addition to cows)." Regarding the gift of slaves, compare, 8, 56, 3: satám me gardabhānām satám ūrṇāvatīnām | satám dāsān áti srájah and also the following verses:

.... tadā rājā Yudhişţhiraḥ || .eko ratho vāraṇa eka eva

saṭam gavām hema-vibhūṣaṇānām

in Jaiminīyāśvamedha (64,46-48; p. 152a) which describe the gifts made by King Yudhiṣṭhira to the priests who officiated in his asvamedha sacrifice.

With reference to the word smát, I have already observed on p. 237 above that it is the opinion of Sāyaṇa (on 1, 186, 6-8; 7, 87, 3), Roth, Grassmann, Oldenberg and other exegetists that it is the equivalent of saha, a meaning, which, it must be acknowledged, fits fairly satisfactorily into the context in all the verses in which the word occurs. I have also observed that Sāyaṇa (on 1, 51, 15; 5, 41, 15; etc.) has explained the word as the equivalent of su-, prašasta, šobhana, kalyāṇa or bhadra and that, for my part, I am inclined to believe that this is the real meaning of the word. The reasons for such belief are as follow:

1. It is the opinion of Sāyaṇa, given expression to in the course of his commentary on 2, 4, 9 (smat sumad ati-prabhūtam), 8, 26, 19 (smat sumat šobhanam), 8, 25, 24 (smat sumad ukāra-lopas chāndasaḥ) and 8, 28, 2 (smat sumat šobhanā) that smat is identical with sumat. A like opinion is expressed by Roth, too, who writes (PW; s.v. sumat) "Wir halten es für eine andere Aussprache von smat"; and similarly Oldenberg, too, observes (RV. Noten, I, p. 76): "Dass Identität von sumat und smat aufzugeben ist (Geldner, Ved. Stud. 2, 190; Bartholomae BB. 17, 115), bezweifle ich. Der Gebrauch beider Worte zeigt zu auffallende Gleichartigkeit," and draws attention to the similar formation of the compounds sumádratha and smád-abhīšu, and of the sentences sīdatām sumat and smat sadantu, smac caranti ye. This opinion seems to me to be justified and I agree with the above-named savants that smát is identical with sumát.

This word sumát, too, it is true, is explained by Roth, Grassmann, Oldenberg, and other exegetists as the equivalent of saha. A But Geldner has, in his short article on this word in Ved. St. 2, p. 190, pointed out that Sāyaṇa interprets it as śobhana or kalyāṇa in his commentary on 2, 36, 3; 3, 3, 9; 8, 45, 39; 87, 4; and 10, 32, 3, and expressed the opinion that sumat can be best explained as śobhana. It is his belief that this word is derived from su with the suffix mat and means 'schön;' and in support of such conclusion, he points to the parallelism of sumádratha, used in 3, 3, 9 and 8, 45, 39 of Agni and harī with surátha used likewise of Agni and harī in 4, 2, 4 and 7, 36, 4.

This parallelism is by itself significant enough; but in addition we find the word bhadrá-jānayaḥ in 5, 61, 4 is parallel to sumáj-jāni that occurs in 1, 156, 2 and bhadrá-vrāta in 10, 47, 5 to sumád-gaṇa which occurs in 2, 36, 3; and the word sumád-aṁsu too, applied to a mare in 1, 100, 6 seems to be parallel to sutúka and sváñc that are applied to horses in 10, 3, 7 and 7, 56, 16. Hence there does not seem to be any doubt that sumat is, as said by Geldner, equivalent to śobhana, kalyāṇa or bhadra; and I shall show presently that this meaning fits well into the context in all the passages in which the word occurs. Since however smat is identical with sumat, it follows that smat too signifies kalyāṇa, śobhana or bhadra.

2. A like conclusion is pointed to by the parallelism of some compounds beginning with smát also. To the word smád-abhīsu, used of a horse in 8, 25, 24 corresponds the word svabhīsú used likewise of horses in 8, 68, 16-18; to the word smád-disti correspond, as already pointed out above, the words subhága and subhāgá; and to the word smád-rātiṣācah 'conferring splendid gifts' in 8, 28, 2: váruṇo mitró aryamá smádrātiṣāco agnáyah corresponds surātáyah in 9, 81, 4: á nah pūṣā pávamānah surātáyo mitró gacchantu váruṇah sajóṣasah.

It is therefore my belief that sumát or smát is the equivalent of sobhana, kalyāna or bhadra; and I shall now show that this meaning fits well into the context in all passages. I shall begin with those in which the form sumat occurs.

"The red brown (mare) of fine speed, bright (i.e., glossy), pleasing, having a spot on the forehead, that has been given to Rirāśva and draws the chariot yoked with a steer has attracted notice among the Nahus clans." sumád-amsu in pāda a is somewhat ambiguous Geldner, in his RV. Ueber., translates it as 'schöngezeichnet (?)' and observes: "sumádamsu; mit schönen oder gleichmässigen amsú versehen, amsú unbekannt, ob von der Zeichnung oder sonstigen Zieraten des Tiers?" Apte. in his Dictionary, assigns to this word the meanings, among others, of (1) lustre, brilliance; (2) speed; and (3) garment, decoration; and I have in the above translation, preferred the meening 'speed.' Compare the epithets sutuka, and svañc, both meaning 'fine-going, i.c., swift' that are applied to horses in 10, 3, 7: agnih sutúkah sutúkebhir ásvaih and 7, 56, 16: átyāso ná vé marútah sváñcah. It is however possible that the poet may have used the word amsu here in the sense of 'lustre, brilliance' (cp. the epithet śobhistham applied to a horse in 8, 3, 21: visveṣām tmánā sóbhiṣṭham úpeva diví dhāvamānam: compare also the epithet candrāmsusama-varcasām in the Mahābhārata passage, 1, 247, 40 cited below) or of 'garment, decoration'; compare the epithets hiraņinaḥ and kṛṣaninaḥ in 6, 63, 2 and 7, 18, 23 cited above. Compare also 8, 68, 16: suráthān ātithigvé svabhīṣūn ārkṣé | āṣvamedhé supéṣasaḥ and Māhabhārata 1, 216, 17: [Pāṇḍubhyaḥ prāhiṇod dhariḥ] gajān vinītān bhadrāmṣ ca sad-aṣvāmṣ ca svalamkṛtān | rathāmṣ ca dāntān sauvarṇaiḥ ṣubhraiḥ paṭṭair alamkṛtān; ibid. 1, 247, 40: vāḍavānām ca ṣuddhānām candrāmṣu-samavarcasām | dadau Janārdanaḥ prītyā sahasram hemabhūṣitam ||

"He who makes offerings to Viṣṇu, the old, very young, wise one, that has a beautiful wife; he who announces the great birth of this great one, he will surpass even his friend in renown." As observed above, sumájjāni is the synonym of bhadra-jāni that occurs in 5, 61, 4: párā vīrāsa etana máryāso bhádra-jānayah, and means 'he who has a beautiful wife.' It is very probable that, in both verses, the beautiful wives are thought of as accompanying their husbands. Geldner's translation of the word as 'dem die Frauen lieb sind' (RV. Ueber., p. 193) seems to me to be incorrect: so far as we know, -jāni denotes 'wife' and not 'woman' and smát does not mean 'lieb.'

2, 36, 3: ámeva naḥ suhavā á hí gántana ní barhíṣi sadatanā ráṇiṣṭana | áthā mandasva jujuṣāṇó ándhasas tváṣṭar devébhir jánibhiḥ sumád-gaṇaḥ ||

"Come to us as to your house, O ye that are easy to call (i.e., ye that at once hear our call); sit on the barhis and be glad. Rejoice, finding pleasure in the drink, O Tvaṣṭṛ that hast a glorious following of gods and (their) wives." sumád-gaṇaḥ is, as already observed, a synonym of bhadrá-vrāta which occurs in 10, 47, 5: bhadrá-vrātam vipravīram svarṣām.

- 3, 3, 9: vibhāvā deváh suráṇaḥ pári kṣitir agnir babhūva śávasā sumád-rathaḥ | tásya vratāni bhūri-poṣiṇo vayám ùpa bhūṣema dáma ā suvṛktibhiḥ ||
- "The bright happiness-bringing god with the beautiful chariot, Agni, has, through his might, encompassed protectingly (all) men. Of him who nourishes many, we shall honour the ordinances with hymns in our dwelling." With regard to sumád-ratha, compare the epithets suratha, hiranya-ratha, and candra-ratha applied to Agni in 4, 2, 4: sv-ásvo agne suráthah surādhā éd u vaha suhaviṣe jánāya; 4, 1, 8: sá dūtó viśvéd abhí vaṣṭi sádmā hótā hiranyaratho rámsujihvah; and 1, 141, 12: utá nah sudyótmā jirāsvo hótā mandráh śrṇavac candrárathah.
  - 8, 56, 5: ácety agnís cikitúr
    havyavát sá sumádrathah |
    agníh sukréna socísā brhát súro arocata
    diví súryo arocata ||
- "Agni, the carrier of offerings, wise, who has a beautiful chariot, has been perceived. Agni shone high (as) the sun with bright light; he shone in heaven (as) the sun."
- 8, 45, 39 : å ta etå vacoyújā

  yád īm brahmábhya íd dádaḥ ||
- "I take hold of these thy two bay horses with the beautiful chariot (i.e., that draw the beautiful chariot), that yoke themseves at word, and that thou gavest to the priests." Compare, in respect, of pādas a and b, 7, 36, 4: girā yá etā yunājad dhārī ta indra priyā surāthā sūra dhāyū; compare also 1, 56, 1: dākṣam mahé pāyayate hiranyāyam rātham āvɨtyā hāriyogam ibhvasam and other similar passages in which Indra's chariot is drscribed as 'golden'.

- 1, 142, 7: å bhándamäne úpāke
  náktoṣấsā supéśasā |
  yahvi ṛtásya mātárā
  sidatām barhír å sumát ||
- "May Night and Dawn, refulgent, near to each other, adorned with jewels, always moving, mothers of rta, sit on the beautiful barhis." barhih sumat='das schöne barhis,' as Geldner (RV. Ueber.) has rightly translated. Compare the expressions syonám barhih in 10, 110, 4; surabhi bhūtv asmé. barhih in 10, 70, 4 and the epithet su- in the term subarhis which occurs in 1, 74, 5 and 8, 20, 25. The meaning of yahvá is not quite certain and my translation, 'always moving,' is merely tentative.
  - 1, 162, 7: úpa prágāt sumán me 'dhāyi mánma devánām ášā úpa vītápṛṣṭhaḥ |
    ánv enam víprā ṛṣayo madanti
    devánām puṣṭé cakṛmā subándhum ||

"He [sc. the sacrificial horse] has gone—a fine hymn has been made and offered by me—to the region of the gods, he who has a comfortable back. The inspired seers glorify him. We have made him our mate in the nourishing of the gods." Regarding sumat manma, compare the expressions cārur matih and sundhyūr matih in 9.91, 14: hṛdā matin janaye cārum agnāye; 6, 8, 1: vaisvānarāya matir nāvyasī sūcih soma iva pavate cārur agnāye; 7, 88, 1: prā sundhyūvam vārunāya prēṣthām matim vasiṣtha mīļhūṣe bharasva and the terms sūktā, suṣṭutī and sumatī (for references see Grassmann s.v.) meaning 'beautiful hymn.'

"Drink, O ye two Asvins, the sweet Soma juice. Sit on the beautiful barhis. Making our hymn glorious, come ye here from heaven (as swifty) as two buffaloes go to the hole (filled with water; to slake their thirst)." irinam= hole (filled with water); see Pischel, Ved. St. 2, 224. The tertium comparationis in the simile here is swiftness; compare 8, 4, 3: yáthā gauró apá kṛtám trşyann éty ávérinam | āpitvé nah prapitvé tūyám ā gahi kánveşu sú sácā piba. And hence it also becomes plain that it is not to the hymn, sustuti (as Sāyaṇa, Ludwig and Pischel l.c. opine) that the Aśvins are exhorted to come quickly, but to the Soma juice mentioned in pada a; compare also in this connection 7, 69, 6: nárā gauréva vidyútam trsānā 'smākam adyá savanópa vātam and 8, 35, 7-9: sómam sutám mahiséváva gacchathah. The word sustutim is to be construed with vāvrdhānā which is used in the causative sense (and upa with gantam); compare 10, 25, 10: matim víprasya vardhayat and 8, 36, 7: índra bráhmāni vardhávan. The meaning of the expression sustutim vāvydhānā is 'making glorious the hymn'; that is, 'making known that the hymn is potent and has achieved its object by bestowing favours upon us.'

"I saw him very splendid-looking like a noble herd moving away from the field. They (fem.) did not seize him, for he was born; the grey-haired women became young." Hymn 5.2, in which this verse occurs, is obscure and very diverse views have been expressed about its import; see Sieg's Sagenstoffe des RV., p. 66 ff.;

Oldenberg, SBE. 46, 368; and RV. Noten, I, 311, and the literature cited therein. I am not therefore at all certain that the translation given above is in conformity with the idea which the poet had in his mind when he composed the above verse. I do not know who are meant by tāh in pāda c, nor what connection they have with the 'grey-haired women that became young' (or 'the youthful women that became grey-haired') mentioned in pada d. The comparison in the first hemistich, too, is obscure; and in fact, Oldenberg, RV. Noten, l.c. doubts whether there is a comparison there. Compare, however, Kirātārjuniya, 4, 10: upāratāh paścima-rātri-gocarād apārayantah patitum javena gām tam utsukās cakrur avekşanotsukam gavām ganāh prasnuta-pīvaraudhasah in which the herds of kine moving away from the fields in which they had grazed (towards home) are described as making Arjuna 'desirous of seeing them,' i.e., as having been 'worthy of being seen' or 'beautiful.'5

Tone particular beauty that is referred to by the above verse as being worthy of admiration in the herds of cows, is their large udders that were oozing milk. The large udder of the cow is mentioned in Raghuvamáa 2, 18: āpīna-bhārodvahana-prayatnād grṣṭir gurutvād vapuṣo narendraḥ | ubhāv alamcakratur añcitābhyām tapo-vanāvṛtti-patham gatābhyām also. In ibid, 1, 82-84:

anindyā Nandinī nāma dhenur āvavṛte vanāt || lalāṭodayam ābhugnam pallava-snigdha-pāṭalā | bibhratī śveta-romānkam sandhyeva sasinam navam || bhuvam koṣṇena kuṇḍodhnī medhyenāvabhṛthād api | prasraveṇābhivarṣantī vatsāloka-pravartinā || not only the large udder overflowing with milk, but the white crescent-like mark on the forehead are mentioned as points of beauty.

The large udder, it may be observed, is associated with the moving away (towards home) from the grazing pasture, because it is only after the cow has grazed its fill that its udder becomes filled with milk and large in size. Hence the express mention of 'moving away from the field' in RV. 5, 2, 4 and in the verses cited above from the Kirātārjunīya and Raghuvamśa.

With sumat in 5, 2, 4, should be compared the word anindyā (Mallinātha: anindyā prasastā) in Raghu. 1, 82 cited above, and punya-darsanā in ibid, 1, 86.

"That the son should remember the birth of his parents,—this has seemed to me more remarkable than what is remarkable. The beautiful wife marries the husband with a shout; a splendid wedding has been made ready for the man." The sense of this verse is not very clear; see Oldenberg, RV. Noten, II, 237. vapuṣo vapuṣṭaram=citrāc citrataram or most remarkable. vagnu, shout, in pāda c, denotes perhaps a 'shout of joy' and sumat, in the same pāda, refers, I conceive, to jāyā rather than to vagnu as Sāyaṇa and Geldner (Ved. St. 2, 190) opine. It corresponds to bhadrā vadhūḥ in 10, 27, 12: bhadrā vadhūr bhavati yát supéšāḥ and sumangalīr vadhūḥ in 10, 85, 33: sumangalīr iyám vadhūr imām saméta páṣyata.

smádūdhnīḥ pīpáyanta dyúbhaktāḥ | parāvátaḥ sumatím bhíkṣamāṇā
ví sindhavaḥ samáyā sasrur ádrim |

"The lowing milch-cows of rta (i.e., that follow rta) that are bestowed by heaven and have fine udders, have oozed (milk). Begging for favour from afar, the rivers have burst though the midst of the rocks." smádūdhnīh:= sobhanodhnīh, having fine, that is, large, udders; see note on p. 250 above, and compare also Raghuvamśa 2, 49: gāh koţiśah sparśayato ghaṭodhnīh. The verse is addressed to Agni and refers to the milch-cow and the waters that are necessary for the offering of oblations. vāvaśānāh in pāda a is ambiguous; it may mean 'lowing' (as translated above) or 'longing for: eager.' See pp. 85 ff. above.

7, 87, 3: pári spášo váruņasya smádistā ubhé pašyanti ródasī suméke |

rtavanah kaváyo yajñádhirah prácetaso yá isáyanta mánma ||

"The swift-moving spies of Varuṇa survey the two beautiful worlds, Heaven and Earth,—they who inspire thoughts, who are wise, far-seeing, followers of the Law, (and) knowers of the sacrifice." smadiṣṭāḥ=śobhana-gamanāḥ as Sāyaṇa has explained; that is, swift-moving. Compare the epithets bhūrṇayaḥ, iṣirāsaḥ and svañcaḥ that are applied to spaṣaḥ in 9, 73, 4: ásya spáṣo ná ní miṣanti bhūrṇayaḥ and 9, 73, 7: rudrāsa eṣām iṣirāso adrúhaḥ spáṣaḥ sváñcaḥ sudṛṣo nṛcákṣasaḥ.

8, 25, 24: smádabhīśū káśāvantā
viprā náviṣṭḥayā mati |
mahó vājināv árvantā sácāsanam ||

"O ye wise [Mitra and Varuṇa], I have, through my latest hymn, obtained plenty of wealth and two fleet racers with beautiful reins and whips." smád-abhīśu=sv-abhīśú; compare 8, 68, 16; 18: suráthāï ātithigvé svabhīśúïr ārkṣé | āśvamedhé supéšasaḥ || aiṣu cetad vṛṣaṇvaty antár rṛréṣv áruṣī | svabhīśúḥ káśāvatī.

The word viprā in pāda b has caused some difficulty to the exegetists. Sāyaṇa regards it as accusative dual and explains it as-viprā viprau medhāvinau | medhāvī stotā yathā stutyam devam stutiblih prīnayati tadvat samtoşakau. So also does Ludwig who however translates the verse as, 'zugleich gewann ich die beiden [göttlichen] Brāhmaņa mit hieher gewandtem zügel mit der geiszel in der hand und die beiden groszen kraftvollen renner' and thus makes out that the vipra or two Brāhmaņas formed part of the gift which the poet received! Grassman (s.v. viprā) and Oldenberg (RV Noten, I, 83), on the other hand, regard it as feminine instrumental singular (and attribute of mati). It seems to me however that the most natural course by far is to regard it as vocative dual, referring to Mitra and Varuna to whom the hymn is addressed; compare for instance 8, 68, 15; rjrāv indrotá ā dade hárī ṛkṣasya sūnávi | āsvamedhásya róhitā and 6, 47, 22: prastoká in nú rādhasas ta ındra dása kósayīr dása vajino dāt in which the vocative indra is used in Dānastutis. Compare also 1, 2, 9: kaví no mitrāváruṇā tuvijātā urukṣáyā and 5, 71, 2: vísvasya hí pracetasā váruṇa mítra rājathaḥ in which the epithets kavī and pracetasā, meaning viprā, are applied to Mitra and Varuṇa and also 6, 68, 3: tā gṛṇīhi namasyèbhiḥ sūṣaíḥ sumnébhir indrāváruṇā cakānā | vájreṇānyáḥ sávasā hánti vṛtrám síṣakty anyó vṛjáneṣu vípraḥ and 7, 88, 4-6: stotāram vípraḥ sudinatvé áhnām . . yandhí ṣmā vípra stuvaté várūtham in which the epithet vipra is applied to Varuṇa.

smádrātiṣāco agnáyaḥ |
pátnīvanto váṣaṭkṛtāḥ ||

"Varuṇa, Mitra, Aryamā, the Agnis, with their splendid gifts, and their wives,—to them is vaṣaṭ called (i.e., to them are oblations offered)." As already observed, smádrātiṣācaḥ is equivalent to surātáyaḥ occurring in 9, 81, 4 cited above; and hence it is very probable that the word is here an attribute, not only of the Agnis, but of Mitra, Varuṇa and Aryaman also.

8, 34, 6: smátpuramdhir na á gahi
divó amúşya sásato
divám yayá divāvaso ||

"Come to our help, thou with glorious blessings that hast thoughts on all sides; the rulers of this heaven have gone to heaven, O Divāvasu." Or, should we interpret smát-puramdhih as 'he whose wife is handsome'? Compare in this connection 3, 53, 6: kalyānir jāyā surāṇam gṛhé te' A handsome wife is (thy) joy in thy house'; 10, 86, 11: indrāṇim āsú nāriṣu subhágām ahám aśravam' Among these women, I have heard that Indra's wife is (the most) handsome'; and TB. 2, 4, 2, 7;

indrāni devi subhāgā supātnī. As in 1, 156, 2 and 5, 61, 4 (see p. 246 above), it is possible that the prayer addressed to Indra to attend the sacrifice includes his wife also. Compare 1, 82, 6: pūṣaṇvān vajrin sām u pātnyāmadah 'Accompanied by Pūṣan, hast thou, O Vajrabearer, revelled with thy wife.'

The meaning of the second hemistich which forms the refrain of the first fifteen verses of this hymn is obscure. Sāyaņa explains it as, amuşya amuşminn indre sāsatah sāsati | vibhaktivyatyayah | tatra vayam sukham āsmahe he divāvaso dīptahaviskendra divam svargam yaya yüyam gacchatha | bahuvacanam püjärtham | yad vā | he divāvaso dyu-nāmakam amuşya amum lokam sāsanam kurvanto yūyam divam svargam yaya gacchatha | atra bahu-vacanam pūjārtham. Grassmann translates it as: "Von jenes Herrschers Himmel kamt ihr (i.e., Indra and his horses) zu dem Feste Tageshell", and Ludwig as, "auf jenes Dyaus befel seid ihr auch so falbenl, o Divāvasu, zum himel gegangen." These interpretations are all unsatisfactory and that given by me above is scarcely better though I have adopted in it Oldenberg's suggestion (RV. Noten, II, I05) that sāsatah is nominative plural and not genitive singular.

satyáśuṣmāya tavásc 'vāci | asminn indra vṛjáne sárvavīrāḥ
smát sūríbhis táva sárman syāma ||

"This adoration (hymn) has been recited for the strong bull, sovereign, whose courage is strong; in this distress, O Indra, may we with all our men and with our noble patrons be in thy protection." smát sūribhih, =bhadraih sūribhih, fortunate patrons; i.e., noble and rich patrons; compare the epithet sujāta, noble, applied to sūri in 2, 2, 11: sá no bodhi sahasya prašámsyo yásmin sujātā iṣáyanta sūráyah and 5, 6, 2: sám árvanto raghudrúvaḥ sám sujātāsaḥ sūrāyaḥ; compare also 10, 81, 6: múhyantv anyé abhito jānāsa ihāsmākam maghāvā sūrīr astu. It must be observed however that though I have followed the current practice of Vedic exegetists (Roth, Grassmann, Oldenberg, etc.) in translating the word sūrī here as 'patron,' I am not satisfied that this is the real meaning of the word. Compare also Geldner (RV. Ueber., p. 419): "Die eigentliche Bedeutung von sūrī ist noch unsicher."

"His beautiful thunderbolt, that wins light, roars; the sound is terrible and overpowering like that of Dyaus. Him follow successes and prizes. May Indra with the Maruts come to our help." smat vajrah = sobhano vajrah; compare 8, 70, 2: hástāya vájrah práti dhāyi daršatáh and 9, 97, 1: esá prá kóśe mádhumān acikradad indrasya vájro vápuşo vápuştarah. Regarding the simile in pāda b, compare 1, 58, 2: divó ná sānu stanáyann acikradat; 4, 10, 4: prá te divó ná stanayanti súṣmāḥ; 7, 3, 6: divó ná te tanyatúr eti súṣmāḥ and other similar verses in which the sound of Dyaus, i.e., thunder, is mentioned as upamāna.

smát sūríbhir abhípitve sajóṣāḥ |
ā vṛtrahéndras carṣaṇiprās
tuvíṣṭamo narām na ihá gamyāḥ ||

"And may Tvaṣṭṛ also come to us gladly in the evening with the glorious and gracious gods and goddesses. May Indra, the killer of Vṛṭra, the strongest of heroes, who fulfils (the expectations of) men, come here." The meaning of  $s\bar{u}ri$  is, as observed above, uncertain. We know however that it is used to denote the gods (see Grassmann, s.v.); and since gods and their wives are mentioned in 2, 36, 3 explained above and also in 6, 50, 13: tváṣṭā devébhir jánibhih sajóṣāh and 10, 64, 10: tváṣṭā devébhir jánibhih pitā vácah in connection with Tvaṣṭṛ, I regard the word here as an ekaśeṣa referring to gods and their wives.

"And may the Maruts also, with a great army (i.e., who are many in number and form a great army by themselves),—the beautiful Rodasī (also)—sit, unanimous, on our (barhis), the gods with spotted horses, whose chariots (move as swiftly) as rivers, who are as difficult to check as those joined with their allies." The translation of pada d is tentative as the meaning of risadasah is not certain. I am however inclined to believe that it means 'swift; wild; impetuous; difficult to check' (compare Pischel in Ved. St. 3, 190 ff.) and that the comparison concerns kings on the offensive who have effected a junction with their allies. Compare 1, 190, 6: durniyántuh páriprito ná mitráh 'difficult to check like an ally who is well-pleased.' smád ródasī = bhadrā rodasī; compare the epithet bhadrajānayah that is applied to the Maruts in 5, 61, 4: párā vīrāsa etana máryāso bhádrajānayah with reference (presumably) to Rodasī.

'That the Grtsamadas, O Agni, attacking secretly, may, through thee, overcome (their) neighbours (and become) possessed of fine sons (and) conquerors of enemies—bestow such strength on the noble patrons and on the praiser (i.e., priest)." The sense of pada b is obscure. The epithet guhā vanvantah 'attacking or winning secretly' is one that is more suited to the enemies of Agni's worshippers rather than to such worshippers themselves. The verb as with abhi, too, in the sense of 'overcome' takes generally in the RV objects like pṛtanāyūn (3,1,16: abhí ṣyāma pṛtanāyūnr ádevān), satrūn (1, 178, 5: tváyā vayám maghavann indra sátrūn abhi syāma), rakşasah (10, 132, 2: yuvóh krānāya sakhyair abhi syāma raksúsah), and similar words; and it is strange to meet with the word uparan here as its object. Geldner therefore translates (RV. Ueber.) the pada as, 'die Nebenbuhler (?) heimlich überwinden' and observes, "úpara scheint hier und 6, 2, 11 eine von der sonstigen abweichende Bedeutung zu haben. In 7, 48, 3 (wo uparátāti, vgl. av. uparatát—) spricht ihm arváh, also entweder rivalis, Nebenbuhler oder (mehr in Anlehnung an den avest. Sinn von upara) überlegen."

- 5, 41, 15: padé-pade me jarimā ní dhāyi
  síṣaktu mātā mahī rasā naḥ
  smát sūríbhir rjuhásta rjuvániḥ ||
- "At every step has old age been placed. May the great mother Rasā, mighty, bestowing beneficent gifts, with beneficent things in her hands, who protects us with protections, help us (and) our noble patrons." jarimā in pāda a means perhaps 'long life'; compare 10, 59, 4: dyúbhir hitó jarimā sū no astu and Oldenberg's observation thereon (RV. Noten, II, p. 197), 'jarimān wohl in günstigem Sinn als "langes Leben" zu verstehen, vgl. 10, 87, 21 [sākhe sākhāyam ajāro jarimņé 'gne mārtān āmartyas tvām naḥ].' Compare also 1, 116, 25: utā pāsyann ašnuvān dīrghām āyur āstam ivēj jarimānam jagamyām.

Being of the same mind as the great Vișnu (i.e., in combination with the great Vișnu), keep away from us, by your great power, (all) evil things, as good charioteers (keep away from difficult roads)." Regarding the simile in pada d, compare 8, 47, 5: pári no vrnajann aghā durgāni rathyò yathā "May distresses keep away from us as charioteers keep away from difficult roads." evayāmarut in pāda b occurs as refrain in all verses of the hymn and has been left untranslated by me. It has no connection with the other words of the verses, and seems to be used as a sort of interjection. See PW and Grassmann. smád rathyàh= prasastā rathyah as explained by Sāyaṇa, that is, clever charioteers who know how to drive.

The word purah, 'citadels,' has to be understood here after adhrstāh; compare 7, 15, 14: ádhā mahi na áyasy ánādhrsto népītaye | pur bhavā satábhujih and 10, 101, 8: púrah kynudhvam áyasir ádhrstāh and also pāda d of the preceding verse: śatám pūrbhir ayasībhir ni pāhi. Regarding the expression pūrbhir uruşyāh, compare 1, 58, 8: ágne gruántam ámhasa urusvórjo napāt pūrbhír ávasībhih; and regarding gira uruşyāh, compare 10, 177, 2: tām dyótamānām svaryàm manīsām rtásya padé kaváyo ní pānti; 10,93,11: etám sámsam indra . . . sádā pāhi; and 7, 56, 19: imé [sc. marutah] śámsam vanusyató ní pānti. smát sūrín= bhadrān sūrīn.

"The liberal ones (i.e., worshippers) who adore the Maruts, who serve (i.e., worship) the gracious ones that rain blessings,—turn. O ye youths, even from thence (i.e., from heaven) towards us with very gracious mind." sudānavah is an epithet of worshippers; compare 8,103,7: ásvam ná gīrbhī rathyàm sudānavo marmṛjyánte devayávah and 9,74,4: samīcīnāh sudānavah prīnanti tám nárah. smat= bhadrān; compare the epithet subhaga applied to the Maruts in 5, 60, 6: yád uttamé maruto madhyamé vā yád vāvamé subhagāso divî ṣṭhá. The epithet mīļhuṣaḥ is applied to the Maruts in 1, 173, 12 also: mahás cid yásya mīļhúṣo yavyá havíṣmato marúto vandate giḥ. ye in the first hemistich seems to have as antecedent naḥ in the third pāda.

The words arhanti and caranti in the first hemistich are perplexing and I follow Sāyana in interpreting them as pūjayanti (cp. 10, 77, 1: sumārutam nā brahmānam arhāse) and saparyanti (cp. the verb paricar) respectively. Grassmann (no. 640) translates the hemistich as, "Die reich an Gaben selbst den Maruts kommen gleich, und zu den gnäd'gen gehn im Chor," and Ludwig (no. 702) as, "die Marut, die treflich begabten, die hieher regnend gehn, sie die anspruch haben."

"And this Śvetayāvarī with a golden path, that among rivers, flows the best for ye, by this beautiful, well-famed Śvetā, drive with my prayer, O ye Aśvins with a splendid team." śvetā=Śvetayāvarī, and śvetayā, 'by Śvetā,' means probably 'to the bank of Śvetā,' where, according to Sāyaṇa, the rṣi was invoking the Aśvins.

This verse, as in fact, the whole hymn in which the verse occurs, is obscure. I translate tentatively, "Like a bull in a race, he threw forth froth; the handsome one went away weak in mind. He walked with the right foot turned away, as it were, thinking 'The Prsanis have not got hold of me.'"

The word smat occurs further in 10, 49, 4 (túgram kútsāya smádibham ca randhayam) in the compound smádibha ('having a fine elephant') which is generally regarded as a proper name (PW, Grassmann, Sāyaṇa, Pischel and Geldner in Ved. St., 1, p. xvi.).

The word sumat too occurs, further, in the compound sumádgu in AV. 5, 1, 7 and in the compound sumát-ksara in three Praisa formulæ (VS. 21, 43-45; TB. 3, 6, 11, 1; MS. 4, 13, 7; KS. 18, 21). AV. 5, 1, 7, as in fact, the whole of the hymn 5, 1, is very obscure (Whitney, in his AV. Translation, remarks of it that it is 'intentionally and most successfully obscure'). Whitney has translated sumádgu there as 'with kine'; but there seems to be nodoubt that it means 'having fine cows,' and that it is the equivalent of sugú in RV. 1, 125, 2: sugúr asat suhiranyás svásvah. sumátksara (which is an epithet applied to the offering of fat and cooked flesh made to the gods) is explained by Roth (PW) as 'träufelnd, vollsaftig.' This explanation is unsatisfactory, and the word really signifies beautifully melting', that is, 'melting delightfully in the mouth ' or ' delicious.' 6

In conclusion, I would observe that, in the verses in which the words smát and sumát are used by themselves uncompounded, it is difficult to determine with what word they are to be construed. Thus in 10, 32, 3, I have construed sumát with jāyā while Geldner (Ved. St. 2, l. c.) and Sāyaṇa construe it with vagnúnā. In 2, 4, 9, Sāyaṇa construes smát with váyaḥ, and in 1, 100, 13, with krandati while I have construed them with sūribhyaḥ and vájraḥ. Similarly, it is possible to construe it with sárman in 1, 51, 15 (compare the words su-sárman and su-sáraṇa) and with nipāhi in 7, 3, 8 (compare su-gopāh; su-ūti). I have therefore in the translations given above construed it in what seemed to me to be the best way.

There has been much dispute about the interpretation of this word which occurs in six verses of the RV and in two passages of other texts; for literature in connection with it, see Oldenberg in ZDMG. 63, 300.

padbhih is mentioned in the Nighantu in 4, 2, along with other difficult words; and Yāska, in his Nirukta (5, 3), explains it as pānair iti vā spāsanair iti vā. Sāyaṇa explains it uniformly as pādaih in his RV commentary; and so apparently do Uvaṭa and Mahīdhara in their commentaries on VS. 23, 13.

These facts, namely, Sāyaṇa's unvarying explanation of paḍbhiḥ as pādaiḥ and the similar explanations of Uvaṭa and Mahīdhara, lead me to conjecture that this explanation was borrowed by these commentators from Yāska, that Yāska, in fact, explained the word as pādair iti vā spāśanair iti vā, and that the word pānaiḥ found in the MSS is a corruption of the original reading pādaiḥ.

In other words, I am inclined to believe that Yāska looked upon padbhih (1) as equivalent to pādaih, or (2) as derived from the root spas. According to Devarāja (l.c.), this root spas signifies 'to bind' and padbhih is equivalent to bandhanaih. According to Wackernagel (Ai. Gr., I, 172), Macdonell (Ved. Gr., 34) and other Durga's commentary on the Nirukta shows that he did not know of this explanation. On the other hand, Devarāja's explanation of pathhih in his scholium on the Nighanțu (p. 408 of Satyavrata Sāmaśramin's ed.) shows that the words sparśanair iti  $v\bar{a}$  formed part of the Nirukta in his time. For the rest, the explanations of both these writers show that the Nirukta codex which they had before them had the reading pānaih.

The explanation sparsanair iti  $v\bar{a}$  is found in some manuscripts of the Nirukta after spāsanair iti  $v\bar{a}$ ; see Pischel, Ved. St., 1, 228, n. 2. It is not found in the majority of the manuscripts, and there can therefore be no doubt that it is an interpolation.

exegetists however, padbhih is derived not only from pas 'to bind' but also from spas 'to see.' And thus there are altogether three meanings proposed for the word padbhih.

The European exegetists differ from one another by preferring or rejecting one or more of these three meanings. Thus, Roth, in the PW, says that padblish denotes pādaih generally, but that the word used in RV. 4. 2. 12 is derived from spas 'to see' and signifies 'glances' or 'eyes' 2. Ludwig, in his RV. Ueber., 4, 309, questions both these derivations and says that padbhih is derived from  $pa\dot{s} = p\bar{a}\dot{s}a$  or rope; later however, in 5, 626. he is inclined to admit the derivation from spas 'to see' in connection with 4, 2, 12; 14. Bartholomae too, in Bez. Beitr. XV, 3 ff., similarly rejects the meaning padbhih or pādaih and derives the word from pas 'glance' and from pas 'rope.' Pischel, Ved. St. 1, 228 ff. admits all the three meanings, while Bloomfield, in AJPh. 11, 350 ff., opines that padbhih signifies pādaih everywhere and that it is not the instrumental plural of pas 'glance (eye)' or pas 'rope.' This is the opinion of Oldenberg also (ZDMG. 63, 300 ff.) who however interprets some of the verses in which padbhih occurs differently from Bloomfield. Similarly Geldner<sup>3</sup> too, in his RV. Ueber. (I, 376), has translated padbhih as 'with feet.'

Now, it cannot be disputed that padbhih means 'with feet' in Kauś. Sūtra 44, 17: yad vaśā māyum akrata uro vā padbhir āhata | agnir mā tasmād enaso viśvān muñcatv amhasah which is to be recited when the vaśā is being slain. Not only does the meaning 'with feet' fit well here in the context, but the parallel versions of this mantra in TS. 3, 1, 4, 3; Sāma-mantra-brāh.

2, 2, 11; Kāt. ŚS. 25, 9, 12; Śāńkh. ŚS. 4, 17, 12; Mānava-$S. 1, 8, 3, 34 and Gobh. GS. 3, 10, 28 actually read padbhih here without cerebralization; so also do in fact many MSS of the Kausika-sūtra itself. The meaning of the mantra therefore is: "If the vasā has cried or beat (its) breast with (its) feet,-may Agni free me from that sin and all (other) sins." Similarly, there can be no doubt that padbhih=pādaih in VS. 23, 13 (=$ata. Br. 13, 2, 7, 6): esá sya ráthyo vŕsa padbhis catúrbhir éd agan. The expression catúrbhih padbhih here is, as already pointed out by Pischel (l.c. 352), parallel to the expression catúrbhih padbhih in AV. 3, 7, 2: ánu tvā harinó vŕsā padbhis catúrbhir akramīt and AV. 4, 14, 9: padbhis catúrbhih práti tistha diksú; and the passage therefore means: "This excellent chariot-horse has indeed come with four feet."

The meaning pādaih however does not suit the context in RV. 10, 79, 2: átrāny asmai padbhíh sám bharanty uttānáhastā námasā 'dhi viksú; for, it is difficult to imagine food being carried to Agni with feet by his worshippers. Bloomfield proposes therefore to interpret padblih as 'nimbly' here and explains (l. c. 352-3) thus how the word comes to have this meaning: "The phrase padbhis catúrbhih expresses the simple notion that the speed of animals is due to their character as quadrupeds. Animals run swiftly with their four feet, and because of their four feet. If the notion is generalized, padblús, when used of human beings, may have been felt in contrast to padbhyām to mean 'with (four) feet ' and thus ' quickly, nimbly, briskly,' etc. RV. v. 64. 7 cd å padbhir dhavatam nara bibhratav arcananasam 'run hither nimbly, O ye two heroes, to preserve Arcanānas.' RV. x. 99. 12, evā mahó asura vaksáthāya vamrakáh padbhír úpa sarpad indram 'thus, O Asura, did great Vamraka quickly come to Indra for prosperity.' It seems difficult to imagine another meaning of padbhis in these two passages, especially the last. Pischel has left it untranslated, though admitting that padbhis comes from pād 'foot;' it seems simply inane to translate 'Vamraka went to Indra with his feet (plural!).' We venture the same exegesis for padbhis in RV. x. 79. 2: átrāny asmāi padbhih sám bharanty, uttānáhastā námasā 'dhi vikṣú 'nimbly do they carry together fuel for him,' etc. Bartholomae and Pischel follow Ludwig in regarding padbhih as a ritual expression, equivalent to idhmasamnahana, and translate 'they bring together his fuel with ropes,' etc. But the hymn is mystical, and it seems unlikely that a dry technical detail of the ritual should appear singly in such connection."

This explanation is more ingenious than convincing; for, even granting that padblih 'with feet,' when used with verbs of motion in connection with human beings, means 'briskly,' 'nimbly,' one fails to see why it should have this meaning in 10, 79, 2 where there is no verb of motion. Similarly, the explanations of Ludwig and Pischel (l. c. 237) that padblih means 'with rope' here and refers to the idhma-samnahana-rajju (or string with which the samidhs are tied together) are unconvincing. Likewise, it is also evident that the meaning 'eyes' or 'glances' does not fit the context here at all. Hence it is clear that padblih in 10, 79, 2 must have a signification different from the three mentioned above.

Now, Amarasimha, in his lexicon, mentions (1, 4, 1) among synonyms of mati the words buddhi, manīṣā, dhiṣaṇā, dhi, prajñā, semuṣī and prekṣā, of which the last-mentioned word prekṣā is derived from pra+īkṣ 'to see'; similarly, he mentions in 2, 7, 5f., the words dūradarśin, dīrgha-darśin, and vicakṣaṇa, all derived from roots meaning 'to see,' among synonyms of dhīra and manīṣin 'weise, verständig, nachdenkend'; and most of the verbs meaning 'to see' in Sanskrit, as for instance,  $\bar{a}+lok$ ,  $\bar{a}+loc$ ,  $\bar{i}kṣ$ , dṛṣ, lok, signify 'to understand, to comprehend' also; '\* see Apte; see also Grassmann s. v.  $\bar{i}kṣ$ , ci 2, dṛṣ, vi+cakṣ, vicakṣaṇa, etc.

It is my opinion that the word pas, derived from spas 'to see', is, like the above-mentioned word prekṣā, a synonym of mati, dhī, manīṣā, dhīti, etc. paḍbhiḥ thus is equivalent to matibhiḥ, dhībhiḥ, dhītibhiḥ or manīṣābhiḥ; and I shall now show that this meaning fits well into the context in all the six RV verses in which the word occurs.

padbhih=matibhih 'with hymns'; compare in this connection the following verses—7, 4, 1: prá vah sukráya bhānave bharadhvam havyam matim cagnaye supūtam; 1, 153, 1: yájāmuhe vām maháh sajósā havyébhir mitrāvarunā námobhih | ghrtair ghrtasnū ádha vád vām asmé adhvaryávo ná dhītíbhir bháranti; 5, 7, 1: sákhāyah sám vah samyáñcam ísam stómam cagnáye vársisthaya ksitīnām ūrjo naptre sahasvate [bharata] and 5, 12, 1: pragnáve brhaté vajnívava rtásva výsne ásurava mánma ghrtám ná vajñá asyè súpūtam gíram bhare vrsabhaya praticim; all these verses speak of food (havya, ghrta, is) being brought (bhrta) to Agni and Mitra-Varuna with hymns (mati, dhīti, stoma, gīr). Compare also 1, 136, 1: prá sú jyéstham nicirábhyam brhán námo havyám matím bharatā mrlayádbhyām; 6, 1, 10: asmá u te máhi mahé vidhema námobhir agne samídhotá havyaíh | védī sūno sahaso girbhír ukthaír á te bhadráyam sumataú yatema; 2, 35, 12: asmai bahūnām avamāya sákhye yajñair vidhema námasā havirbhih sám sānu mārjmi didhisāmi bilmair dádhāmy ánnaih pári vanda rgbhíh; 8, 19, 5: yáh samidhā yá āhuti yó védena dadāša márto agnáye | yó

námasā svadhvaráh; and 8, 19, 13: yó agním havyádātibhir námobhir vā sudákṣam āvívāsati | girā vā 'jirásociṣam all which verses speak of Agni being worshipped in reverence (námasā) with food and hymns.

vamrakāḥ paḍbhir úpa sarpad indram |
sā iyānāḥ karati svastim asmā
iṣam úrjam sukṣitim visvam ābhāḥ ||

"Thus, O great one, did Vamraka, for the strengthening of (thee) that art strong, approach with hymns, (thee) Indra. He, being approached, makes happiness for this (Vamraka); (he) has brought food, vigour, fine dwelling and all."

It is the opinion of Roth (in the PW) that vamraka in pāda b means 'ant.' This view is justly criticised by Pischel who writes thus on p. 238, l. c.: "Dass Vamraká nicht, wie Roth meint, "Ameischen" bedeutet, geht klar aus dem Beiworte mahá hervor. "Ein grosses Ameischen" wäre doch gar zu sonderbar und nicht weniger seltsam wäre es, mahás als Genetiv sing, zu fassen, zu vaksáthāva zu ziehen und auf Indra zu deuten. Dass ein Ameischen dem Indra zum gedeihen verhelfen sollte, ist schwer zu glauben und wird direkt widerlegt durch den folgenden Vers sá iyānáh karati svastím asmā işam ürjam sukşitim visvam abhah. sá kann nur Indra, asmai nur Vamraka sein. Vamraká ist Eigenname and wohl identisch mit Vamra 1, 112, 15 (10, 99, 5?)." Similarly, vamraká is regarded as a proper name by Bloomfield (l.c.), Grassmann and Ludwig. Sāyaṇa too regards it as a proper name, and identifies, as I think, quite correctly, this Vamraka, with the Vamra Vaikhānasa who, according to the Sarvānukramanī, is the seer of this verse.

In pada a, the vocative asura refers naturally to Indra who is the deity of this stanza and is mentioned in pada b; compare in this connection 1, 154, 3; 1, 174, 1

and other verses (see Grassmann s. v.) in which this epithet is applied to Indra. The word maháh is apparently regarded as a dative by Ludwig who translates mahó vaksáthāya as 'zu grossem wachsthum,' while Grassmann opines that it is a genitive and refers to Indra. It is, as we have seen, looked upon as nominative singular by Pischel and also by Bloomfield (l. c.) and interpreted as 'great.' This view seems to me to be incorrect; for, nowhere else in the RV do we see a priest or singer characterised as 'great'; on the other hand, some of the seers call themselves nādhamāna 'distressed' (see Grassmann s.v.). I believe therefore with Grassmann that maháh is a genitive and refers to Indra, and I hence supply after it the word te; compare 4, 24, 7: vrddhásya cid vardhatām asya tanúh stómebhir ukthais ca sasyamānā 'May the body of this (Indra), though he is strong, become strong (er), being praised with hymns of praise.' After indram, too, I supply, following Sayana, the word tvām.

That the hymns recited by priests or singers put strength into the deities that are praised, is an idea that is commonplace in the RV. The phrase padblih vakşáthāya upasrp 'to approach with hymns for strengthening' in pada b gives expression to such an idea; it is equivalent to the phrases matibhih, (girbhih, stomaih, manasā, brahmaṇā, etc.) vardhay, vājay, or mahay that are used in many verses. Compare for instance 5, 14, 6: agnim ghrtena vāvrdhuh stómebhir visvácarsanim svādhībhir vacasyúbhih; 7,12,3: tvám váruna utá mitró agne tvám vardhanti matibhir vásistháh; 7,77,6: vám tvā divo duhitar vardháyanty úsah sujāte matibhir vásisthāh; 8, 44, 2: ágne stómam juşasva me várdhasvānena mánmanā; 1,91,11: sóma gīrbhis tvā vayám vardháyāmo vacovidah; 10, 73, 2: purū sámsena vāvrdhus tá indram; 8, 100, 3: prá sú stómam bharata vājayánta indrāya satyám vádi satyám ásti; 6, 19, 4: tám va indram catinam asya sākair iha nūnam vājayanto huvema;

8, 3, 16: indram stómebhir maháyanta āyávah priyámedhāso asvaran; 6, 15, 2: sá tvám súprito vitáhavye adbhuta prásastibhir mahayase divé-dive; 3,3,3; vípraso agním mahayanta cittibhih; and 5, 31, 4: brahmana indram mahávanto arkaír ávardhavann áhave hántavá u. The word padbhih is equivalent to stomebhih, girbhih, cittibhih, matibhih, mánmanā, prásastibhih, and arkaih in the above verses. The expression padblir úpa sarpat in b is parallel to girbhir imahe, girbhir ayan, etc., in 8, 68, 10: tám tvā vajñébhir īmahe tám gīrbhír girvanastama; 10, 98, 9: tvám půrva rsayo girbhir ayan tvám adhvarésu puruhūta visve; 2, 2, 5: tám u havyair mánusa rnjate gira; 1, 36, 1: agnim sūktébhir vácobhir īmahe; 8, 43, 31: agnim mandrám purupriyám . . hrdbhír mandrébhir īmahe and other similar verses. Compare also AB, 7, 17: sa Prajāpatim eva prathamam devatānām upa-sasāra kasya nūnam . . ity etayarcā . . Agnim upasasārāgner vayam . . ity etayarcā . . "When (the Dawn) with bright cows dawns for me in the sky, come with thoughts, running, O ye (two) heroes that are worshipful, to Arcanānas as to the (Soma juice) pressed by dexterous (priests), protecting."

yajatā in a is nominative dual and qualifies [yuvām] that is the subject of ādhāvatam in d and refers to Mitra and Varuṇa who are the deities of this verse. rúsadgavi 'having bright cows' denotes the goddess Uṣas; cp. 5, 75, 9: ábhūd uṣā rúsatpasur āgnir adhāyy rtviyaḥ "The Dawn who has bright cows has appeared; Agni has been set up (i.e., kindled) at the proper time" and Nighaṇṭu 1, 15: aruṇyo gāva uṣasaḥ.

deváksatre in pāda b is obscure: Diverse suggestions have been made that it should be interpreted as (1) yajña (Sāyaṇa: devānām kṣatram balam yasmin yajñe tad devakṣatram); (2) 'Himmel' (Pischel in p. 238, l. c); (3) funter göttlichen Herrschaft stehend '(Roth in PW), that is, presumably, 'the Dawn' or 'sky'; 5 (4) 'Herrschaft der Götter, Götterreich ' (Grassmann); (5) ' reich der götter ' (Ludwig); (6) deva-kşetra (Böhtlingk in Pw); (7) accusative dual, attribute of havisi (the dual is used because two portions are offered, one each to Mitra and Varuna who are entreated to come to such food as gods go to the Soma juice), and meaning 'eine die Herrschaft über die Götter verbürgende Opfer-speise' (Oldenberg in RV. Noten, I, p. 348, n. 1); and (8) locative, attribute of 'rite' and denoting 'in the rite which portrays the dominion (of Mitra and Varuna) over the gods' (Oldenberg, l.c.). Further, after expressing his dissatisfaction with all the above explanations, Oldenberg (9) points out (l. c.) that kṣatra is preeminently the possession of Mitra and Varuna (who are the very deities of this verse) in the RV and that they are described as having kşatra over the gods in 5, 68, 3: mahí vām kṣatrám devéṣu and 6, 67, 5: vísve vád vām . . . k satrám deváso ádadhuh sajósāh, and opines that deváksatre is a corruption of devákṣatrā, nominative dual (the corruption is caused by the attraction of the locative case of the word rúsadgavi that follows immediately after), and that it is an attribute of Mitra and Varuṇa and signifies 'who have dominion over the gods.'

A similar explicit statement is not made of the sky. But the sky is said to have been established in its place or to be supported or upheld by Mitra and Varuna (5, 62, 3; 5, 69, 1; 4; etc.); Savitr (4, 53, 2; 10, 129, 1; 4; etc.), Indra (2, 12, 1; 3, 30, 9; 2, 17, 5; etc.) Viṣṇu (7, 99, 2; 3), Agni (6, 8, 3; 1, 67, 5), Bṛhaspati (4, 50, 1), Soma (9, 101, 15), Prajāpati (10, 121, 5), Sūrya (10, 85, 1) and perhaps by other gods; and one can therefore deduce from this that the sky is under the dominion of the gods and obeys the laws laid down by them.

The word devaksatra occurs in two passages of the Kāth. Sam. in 21, 11 (p. 52, 9): devaksatram vai stomas ca vajuś cāntata eva devaksatram prāvasyati and 33, 8 (p. 34, 5): devaksatram vā āyusas stomā devaksatram eva tad abhyārohanto yanti. Not much light is thrown on the meaning of the word by the first, but the second indicates that devaksatra is a place to which people 'mount.' Since the word div and its synonym nāka occur more than once as objects of the verb āruh in the KS (see 8, 16; 18, 4 etc.) and also in the RV (see Grassmann s. v. ruh), I believe that Pischel is right in interpreting devákṣatra as 'Himmel.' As we have seen above, the sky is under the dominion of the gods, and the epithet devákṣatra 'under the dominion of the gods' is not therefore an inappropriate one. Compare in this connection 1, 92, 1: etä u tyä usásah ketúm akrata purve árdhe rájaso bhanúm anjate; 7, 79, 2: vy ànjate divó ántesv aktún .. usásah; and 1, 113, 14: vy àñjibhir divá átāsv adyaut in which Usas is said to have illumined the sky with her rays.

The expression paḍbhir ādhāvatam in d is equivalent to dhībhir ādhāvatam; compare 8, 8, 5: á no yātam úpaśruty áśvinā sómapītaye | svāhā stómasya vardhanā prá kavī dhītíbhir narā; 8, 8, 7: diváś cid rocanād ádhy á no gantam svarvidā | dhībhir vatsa-pracetasā stómebhir havanaśrutā; 8, 24, 7: víśvāni viśvámanaso dhiyā no

The corresponding passage of the Maitr. Sam. however, namely, 3, 4, 2 (p. 46, 21): stomas ca yajus cety annañ vai stomas ca yajus cānnañ vā etad ātman dhitvā 'do bhūtvā devakṣetram antatah prāvasati has devakṣetram. This word signifies svarga or heaven; and the reading of the MS makes it probable that devakṣatra = devakṣetra, and thus lends support to Pischel's explanation of devakṣatra as 'Himmel.'

vṛtrahantama | úgra praṇetar ádhi ṣū vaso gahi; 8, 27, 5: â no adyá samanaso gántā visve sajóṣasah | ṛcā girā máruto dévy áaite sádane pástye mahi; 8, 27, 8: ā prá yāta máruto viṣṇo áśvinā pūṣan mākīnayā dhiyā; and also 6, 50, 10: utá me hávam ā jagmyātam nāsatyā dhībhih.

The meaning of this expression padbhir adhavatam 'come running with thoughts' is somewhat ambiguous. The thoughts referred to may be 'benevolent' thoughts, sumatavah, i.e., favours or blessings (what Sayana calls anugraha-buddhi and Grassmann 'wohlwollendes Aufmerken) of the deities; compare 8, 26, 9: sumatibhir úpa viprāv ihā gatam; "Come, O ye two inspired ones, with favours here"; 8, 3, 1: asmān avantu te dhiyah 'May thy (Indra's) favours help us'; 7, 67, 7: áhelatā múnasá yātam arvāk "Come hitherward with favourable thought"; 7, 37, 2: ví no rādhāmsi matibhir dayadhvam "Bestow gifts on us with favours"; and 2, 10, 5: arakşásā mánasā táj juşeta "May he (Agni) enjoy it with favourably-inclined mind"; or they may be the promptings or volitions of such deities; compare 1, 3, 5: indrá yāhi dhiyeşitáh . . úpa bráhmāni vāghátah 'Come, O Indra, impelled by thy thought, (that is, with eagerness), to the hymns of the priest'; 3, 11, 1: indrāgnī ā gatam sutám gīrbhír nábho várenyam | asyá pātam dhiyéşitá 'O Indra and Agni, prompted by your thoughts (i.e., eagerly) come to this excellent [Soma] juice that has been expressed with hymns and drink of it'; 1, 3, 2: nárā śávīrayā dhiyā | dhíşnyā vánatam girah 'Cherish (our) hymns with strong thought (i.e., most eagerly), O ye two heroes that are liberal (?)'. They may also be the 'pious' thoughts, i.e., hymns or praises, of the priests, which are conceived of as impelling the deities to come to the sacrifices, etc.; compare 1, 135, 6: a vām dhiyó vavrtyur adhvarān úpa "May our hymns turn you two to our sacrifices"; 1, 139, 6: gīrbhir girvāhas stavamāna ā gahi; 1, 144, 5: tam īm hinvanti dhītāyah; 8, 44, 9: tvām agne manīsinas tvām hinvanti cittibhih; and 10, 88, 5: tám tvāhema matibhir gīrbhir ukthaih. Lastly, though this is less probable, padbhih may denote hymns that are conceived of as being the praises of the bards (vandinah, sūtāh or māga-dhāh) attending on kings, and mentioned on p. 210 above. 7 It must be noted in this connection that the epithet rājan 'king' is, in the RV, most often applied to Mitra and Varuṇa who are the deities addressed in this verse.

It is very probable that the ná in pada c, sutám sómam ná hastíbhih has really the force of ca 'and'; compare the instances given on pp. 25, 145 above. Similarly, it is also very probable that the simile in pada c refers to swiftness. Compare, for instance, 1, 2, 5: vāyav indras ca cetathah sutānām vājinīvasū | tāv ā yātam úpa dravát; 1, 3, 8: visve devāso aptúrah sutám ā ganta tūrņayah | usrā iva svásarāni; 10, 112, 2: yás te rátho mánaso jáviyān éndra téna somapéyāya yāhi tūyam ā te hūrayah prā dravantu; 7, 59, 4: tūyam yāta pipīṣavaḥ and other similar verses in which Indra, Vāyu and other gods are exhorted to come quickly to the Soma juice. Pādas c d e therefore mean, 'Come running swiftly, with thoughts, O ye two heroes, protecting, to Arcananas and to the Soma juice pressed by clever priests.' hastibhih=by clever (priests); see Pischel, p. 238 l. c.

<sup>7</sup> We read in 3, 58, 1: uṣásas stômo aśvínāv ajīgaḥ; 7, 67, 1: yô vām dūtô ná dhiṣnyāv ájīgaḥ; 10, 29, 1: śácir vām stômo bhuraṇāv ajīgaḥ and other similar verses that the hymn or chant awakened the gods. Is it possible that in such verses too the hymns are conceived of as the praises sung by the bards in the early morning? As we know from Raghuvamsa 5, 65: tam karna-bhūṣaṇa-nipīḍita-pīvarāmsam śayyottaracchada-vimarda-kṛṣāṇgarā-gam | sūtātmajāḥ savayasaḥ prathita-prabodham prābodhayann uṣasi vāgbhir udāra-vācaḥ; Māgha 11, 1: śruti-samadhikam uccaiḥ pañcamam pīḍayantaḥ satatam ṛṣabha-hīnam bhinnaktkṛtya ṣaḍṭam | praṇijagadur akāku-śrāvaka-snigdha-kaṇṭhāḥ pariṇatim iti rātrer māgadhā Mādhavāya and other similar passages, it was the duty of the sūtas and māgadhas to awaken kings in the morning with songs.

It is the opinion of both Pischel and Oldenberg that ādhāv in pāda d is used in a twofold sense (śleşa); but the two savants differ in their interpretation of padas cde. Pischel writes: (p. 238 l. c.) "Varuna und Mitra sollen su den gepressten Soma herbeieilen, wie die Adhvaryus zum Spülen des Somas eilen. Der Vergleich ist passivisch gewendet= yáthā hastíbhir á dhāvyáte táthä ā dhāvatam narā" and translates the verse as, "Wenn am Himmel die Morgenröte aufleuchtet, dann kommt ihr Heilige zu meinem gepressten Soma, wie die Adhvaryus (zum Spülen des Somas), o ihr Männer, Arcananas hegend." Oldenberg has, on the other hand, observed: "Wie ich GGA, a. a. O. gezeigt habe, steht á-dhāv zugleich in der Bedeutung "herbeilaufen" und "reinigen", jenes das Werk der Füsse, dieses der Hände: "wie (man) den von geschickth ändigen (Priestern) gepressten Soma (mit eben diesen geschickten Händen reinigt, å-dhav), so eilt herbei (å-dhāv; vielleicht auch hier zu verstehen: zum Soma) mit euern Füssen, ihr Männer.' B Der Vergleich zwischen dem Reinigen und dem Herbeilaufen beruht darauf, dass beides å-dhāv heisst, vgl. zu I, 64, 2."

These observations do not seem to me to be convincing, and I therefore believe that the verb  $\bar{a}dh\bar{a}v$  in d has the sense of 'running' only and has no connection with pāda c. It is possible however to construe padbhih in d with sutâm in c. padbhih sutâm= $dh\bar{a}bhih$  sutâm; 'pressed with (i.e., to the accompaniment of the chanting of) hymns;' compare 3, 12, 1 (cited above):  $indr\bar{a}gn\bar{a}$

gatam sutâm gīrbhír nábho várenyam "Come, O Indra and Agni, to (this) excellent (Soma) juice pressed with hymns"; 3, 12, 2: ayā pātam imám sutâm "Drink this (Soma juice) pressed with this (hymn)"; 8, 48, 7: iṣiréna te mánasā sutâsya bhakṣīmáhi pitryasyeva rōyāh "May we partake of thee, pressed with devoted (or vigourous) hymn, as of paternal wealth." Compare also Caland-Henry, L'Agniṣṭoma, § 127 ff. and the literature cited therein. The meaning of pādas cde in this case would be, 'Come running quickly, O ye two heroes, to Arcanānas and to the Soma juice pressed by dexterous priests to the accompaniment of hymns, protecting.'

When explaining pada c of this verse on p. 146 above, I have, following Pischel, Bloomfield, and other interpreters, construed padblih with gidhyantam and interpreted the expression as 'speeding with a will.' Though this is not wrong (padb/ih has, as we have seen on p. 272 above, the sense of 'eagerly,' 'with a will,' etc., also), I am now inclined to believe that it is much more preferable to construe it with the word (anu) madati (in pāda b) as is done, in the case of gīrbhih, stómebhih and other synonyms of padblish, in many RV verses. Compare for instance, 1, 9, 3: mátsvā sušipra mandíbhih stómcbhir visvacarsane "Rejoice, O thou (Indra) with beautiful lips, that are honoured by all men, in (these) pleasing hymns"; 1, 51, 1: abhí tyám mesám puruhūtám remíyam indram gārbhir madata "Cheer with hymns that Indra worthy of praise, invoked by many, the goat"; 8, 6, 39: mátsvā vivasvato mati "Rejoice in the hymn (sung) from (the abode of) Vivasvat"; 10, 104, 3: indra dhénābhir ihá mādayasva dhībhir viśvābhiḥ "Rejoice now, O Indra, in all these hymns and praises"; 10, 116, 2: svastidā mánasā mādayasva "Rejoice, O Indra that bestowest well-being, in (this) hymn"; 3, 53, 10: mádanto gīrbhir adhvaré suté sácā. "Rejoicing with hymns in the Soma-sacrifice"; and particularly 5, 36, 2: ánu tvā rājann árvato ná hinván gīrbhir madema puruhūta viśve "O thou king that art invoked by many, may we all cheer thee with praises as one does who impels race-horses."

I therefore translate the verse as follows: "Whom, running (swiftly) like (water) down an incline, rushing forward like a valiant soldier in battle, surpassing chariots (in speed), and speeding like the wind, every Pūru (i. e., every one of the Pūru clan) rejoicing, cheers with praises."

This verse, and also the other verses of this hymn, are addressed to Dadhikrā or Dadhikrāvan, the swift horse whom Mitra and Varuṇa presented to the Pūrus (cp. 4, 39, 2: yām pūrūbhyo dīdivāmsam nāgnīm dadāthur mitrāvaruṇā tāturim), that is, to their king Trasadasyu, and whose achievements on the race-ground are described in hymns 4, 38-43.

The expression padblir anumadali in the first halfverse is exactly parallel to the expression gīrbhir anumadema (hinvantaḥ) in 5, 36, 2 cited above; the meaning of the expression is, '(Every Pūru) cheered with praises and impelled (the horse) to further exertion.' Compare in this connection 7, 7, 1: prâ vo devâm cit sahasānām agnīm āśvam nā vājīnam hiṣe nāmobhiḥ "Like a strong horse, I impel with praises the vigourous god Agni for you"; and 10, 156, 1: agnīm hinvantu no dhiyaḥ sāptīm āśūm ivājīṣu "May our praises impel of the pada is a shortened form of hinvantah (plural), and the half-verse means, "O thou king that art invoked by many, may we all cheer thee with praises and impel thee as (people do) race-horses". hinvantah is an attribute of vayam.

Agni, like a fleet courser in the races" in which the verb hi, together with words meaning 'praises,' is used in connection with race-horses. A similar usage is observable in 9, 68, 7; 9, 64, 16; 9, 8, 4; 8, 44, 19; 1, 143, 4; 1, 144, 5; 10, 88, 5 and 10, 140, 3 also. Wards denoting 'race-horses' however are not used in these verses, but are to be understood.

It thus becomes evident that the expressions girbhir arvatah anumadanti and girbhir arvatah hinvanti are synonymous of and signify 'they cheer the race-horses with praises and thereby impel them to further exertion.' The full formula to be employed in this connection is thus girbhir anumadanti hinvanti ca; but, as we have seen, it is only in one verse (5, 36, 2 cited above) that both the verbs are used; the other verses use one verb only, either anumad or hi, to express this idea.

pravátā in pāda a is construed in connection with the course of Dadhikrā by Grassmann (who translates the expression praváteva drávantam as 'Dem, wenn er läuft gleichwie im jähen Sturze'), Ludwig ('an dem wie auf abschüszigem pfade laufenden'), and Macdonell (Ved. Myth., p. 148: 'every Pūru praises him as he runs on a precipice as it were'). "This seems to me to be a mistake, and I believe that the simile in pāda a is a luptopamā, the elided word being (the upamāna) āpah. Compare the simile āpo ná pravátā yatīh that is used in 8, 6, 34; 8, 13, 8 and 9, 24, 2 in all which verses the sāmānya-dharma is swift going; cp. also 9, 6, 4: ánu drapsāsa indava āpo ná pravátāsaran; 7,18,15: indrenaité titsavo véviṣāṇā āpo ná sṛṣṭā adhavanta nicīh; 9, 17, 1: prá nimnéneva síndhavah. . sómā asṛṛram āśávah; 9, 60, 7: síndhor iva pravaṇé nimná āśávah; 1, 57, 1-2; 10, 148, 5, etc.

There can be no doubt that, like the other epithets pravateva dravantam, rathaturam and vātam iva dhrajantam, the epithet medhayum na śūram grdhyantam too describes the swiftness of Dadhikra. The meaning of the expression is, 'speeding like a valiant soldier in battle'; and it is my belief that the root grdh does not signify 'to be greedy' here and that the translations of Geldner (RV. Ueber.: 'mit den Füssen (kampf) begierig wie ein Held nach der Meisterschaft begierig'), Grassmann ('Im Laufe strebt er, wie ein Held nach Beute'), Bloomfield (p. 353 l.c.: 'impatient with his feet, as a hero (is impatient) when eager for strife'); and Ludwig ('der wie mit schlingen bestrebt zu erfassen, als lanzenkundiger held') as also Pischel's explanation (l.c., p. 232: dass Dadhikrāvan im Laufe ungeduldig die Riemen erfasst und sie schüttelt wie ein streitlustiger Held die Zügel) are all wide of the mark. Regarding the simile, compare 1, 85, 8: śúrā ivéd yúyudhayo ná jágmayah 'Going swiftly like valiant men ready for the battle' and 1, 158, 3: úpa vām ávah saranám gameyam súro nájma patáyadbhir évaih 'May I go to your shelter as a hero goes to battle with flying feet (?)' in which verses too the upamāna is śūra and the sāmānyadharma swift going.

átas tvám dŕšyān agna etán
padbhíh pašyer ádbhutān aryá évaih ||

The first half of this verse is unambiguous and may be translated as, "The undeceived wise ones instructed the wise one, establishing him in the dwellings of Ayu."

ádabdhāḥ kaváyaḥ in a refers to the gods (devāḥ) who brought Agni down to the earth and established him in the dwellings of men so that he may guard these dwellings and also carry the offerings made by men to the gods; the word śaśāsuḥ refers apparently to these injunctions (that Agni should be the grhapati and havyavāṭ) and also perhaps to his officiating as hotr on behalf of men. Compare Sāyaṇa: śaśāsuḥ hotā bhaveti śaśamsuḥ.

The second half-verse is ambiguous and can be interpreted in two ways:

(1) We may regard it as a paraphrase of the first half of the preceding verse, cittim ácittim cinavad vi vidván prsthéva vītā vrjinā ca mártān | rāyé ca naḥ svapatyāya deva ditim ca rāsvāditim uruṣya. The words citti and acitti here are explained by Sāyaṇa and Geldner as puṇya and pāpa (Recht und Unrecht) or jñāna and ajñāna (Verstand und Unverstand) while Grassmann, Ludwig and Oldenberg (SBE. 46, 317) give the latter explanation only. citti denotes 'pious thought, i.e., piety,' here and acitti, 'impious thought, impiety;' and the meaning of the verse is, "May he, the knowing one, distinguish piety and impiety, (and) the (pious and impious) mortals like straight and crooked bācks (of horses). (Help us) to wealth and good offspring, O god; grant us Diti and keep off Aditi." 12

As a paraphrase of the first half of this verse, we may translate the second half of 4, 2, 12 as: "From there, O Agni, mayest thou look at these rich people that are visible by their thoughts and (those also) that are invisible by their thoughts." padbhih = dhībhih; and padbhih dṛṣyān 'visible by their thoughts' means 'those whose thoughts, i.e., hymns or works of piety, are visible or plain to be seen." Similarly, evaih adbhutān denotes the rich people 'whose thoughts (hymns or works of piety) are invisible, i.e., can not be seen,' that is, rich people who perform no works of piety. The expressions padbhir drsya and evair adbhuta in this verse are thus paraphrases of the terms citti and acitti of the preceding verse.

The meaning of evaih is not known exactly and requires to be investigated. For the present however, I look upon it as a synonym of kratu or thought; compare in this connection 7, 62, 2: ebhih stómebhir etasébhir évaih where evaih is used as an epithet of stomebhih.

(2) Secondly, we may regard the second half-verse as containing a virodhābhāsa; that is, it is possible that the epithets dṛṣṇa and adbhuta refer, not to different men (as in the interpretation given above), but to the same men. The half-verse would then mean, "From there, O Agni, mayest thou look with thoughts on these rich men that are visible (and at the same time) invisible (i.e., unfathomable or wonderful) with their thoughts (hymns)." aryāḥ 'rich people' refers to the sacrificers or 'patrons' (see Geldner, 13 RV. Ueber., and the passages referred to by him there) who are visible, dṛṣṇa, to Agni, and are at the same time, invisible, adbhuta, in their thoughts. That is to say, the patrons are visible, while their thoughts are adbhuta.

padbhih is synonymous with dhībhih, but should be construed with pasyeh and not with dṛṣyān. Compare in this connection 1,139,2: yuvór itthádhi sádmasv ápasyāma hiraṇyáyam | dhībhis caná mánasā svébhir akṣábhih sómasya svébhir akṣábhih "Thus did we see, with thoughts, with mind, with our own senses, with the senses of Soma, your golden (throne) in your abodes." The expression dhībhih pas signifies in all probability 'to look with heed or care; and padbhih pasyeh of this verse is thus a synonym of vi cinavat used in the preceding verse.

adbhuta has two meanings, (1) invisible, and (2) wonderful, marvellous: and either of these meanings fits the context in this verse. In the first case, évair ádbhutān means 'with invisible, i.e., hidden, deep or unfathomable thoughts or hymns.' Compare 5, 85, 1: prá samyāje brhád arcā gabhīrám bráhma priyám váruņāya srutāya 'Chant loudly the dear deep hymn for the famous sovereign Varuna'; 1, 35, 7: gabhīrávepā ásurah sunitháh 'The mighty one of deep inspiration and good guidance'; 10, 62, 5: tá id gambhirávepasah 'They (the Virūpas) indeed are deeply inspired'; 8, 8, 2: kávī gámbhiracetasā 'O ye two wise ones whose thoughts are unfathomable'; 1, 24, 9: urvi gabhīrā sumatis te astu '(O Varuna), may thy wide, unfathomable good favour be (for us)'; 7, 87, 6: gambhīrásamso rájaso vimánah '(Varuna) the measurer of space, whose thoughts are unfathomable'; and also 4, 5, 6: idám me agne kívate pāvakāminate gurūm bhārám ná mánma | bṛhád dadhātha dhrsatá gabhīrám yahvám prsthám právasa saptádhatu whose meaning is not clear to me. Compare also the epithet ádbhutakratu that is applied to Agni in 8, 23, 8: vajñébhir ádbhutakratum yám krpá sūdáyanta ít and to Mitra and Varuna in 5, 70, 4: må kásvādbhusakratū yakşám bhujemā tanúbhih. I have interpreted this term on p. 184 above as 'having wonderful strength'; but it seems preferable to interpret it (as Roth and Grassmann have done) as 'having wonderful thoughts', i.e., as the equivalent of évair ádbhutān in 4, 2, 12d and of gambhīracetas and gambhīrasamsa in the verses cited above.

According to this interpretation, evair adbhutān is, so to say, equivalent to kavitamān or vipratamān and can be used (like these words) to describe gods as well as priests and patrons (yajamāna).

If we regard adbhutān as equivalent to citrān, evair adbhutān means 'with wonderful thoughts (hymns)'; compare, 6, 66, 9: prá citrám arkám. márutāya svátavase bharadhvam "Offer the wonderful hymn to the very strong host of the Maruts"; and 5, 18, 4: citrā vā yéşu didhitiḥ "in whom (sc. yajamānas) is brilliant thought." 14

According to this interpretation, pādas cd of 4, 2, 12 contain virodhābhāsa combined with śleṣa.

Thus, whether we understand adbhuta as 'unfathomable' or as 'wonderful,' pādas cd according to the second interpretation refer to the patron who worships Agni with excellent hymns and are to be read together with the following verse (4, 2, 13): tvám agne vāghāte suprāṇītiḥ sutásomāya vidhaté yaviṣṭha | rátnaṁ bhara śaśamānāya ghṛṣve pṛthú ścandrám ávase carṣaṇiprāḥ. The meaning of this verse is, "Bring, O Agni, youngest, that delightest in giving, whose guidance is good, to the worshipper who has pressed the Soma, who has made ready the sacrifice, broad brilliant treasure in order to help him, thou that fillest (the expectations of) people"; and the worshippers that are referred to here as vidhat, sutasoma and śaśamāna are the same as the evair adbhutā aryaḥ of the preceding verse.

Concerning the use of the instrumental in evair adbhutān and paḍbhir dṛṣyān, compare § 92 in Delbrück's Ai. Syntax, and particularly Sata. Br. 1, 8, 1, 9: bahuḥ prajayā paṣubhir bhaviṣyası and ibid. 2, 1, 4, 28: yathāsau dyaur bahvī nakṣatrair evam bahur bhūyāsam cited by him there.

paḍbhír hástebhis cakṛmā tanūbhiḥ |
ṛtám yemuḥ sudhyà āsuṣāṇāḥ ||

<sup>14</sup> citra occurs as an epithet of dhī in 8, 66, 8: sémám naḥ stómam jujuṣāṇá ā gahindra prá citráyā dhiyā and 8, 66, 14: tvám na ati táva citráyā dhiyā síkṣā śaciṣtha gātuvit. But the word dhī in these verses, or at least in the latter, signifies not 'hymn,' but 'benevolent thought' or 'favour' of the deity invoked.

"And (all), O Agni, that we have, with thoughts, hands (and) bodies done for thee, with effort, like those who turn the wheel between the shafts,—(in all this), the pious-minded have held up the Law, aspiring after it."

In connection with padas ab, compare TA. 2, 3, 1: yád vācā yán mánasā bāhúbhyām ūrúbhyām asthīvádbhyān šišnair vád ánrtam cakrmá vavám agnir mā tásmād enaso gárhapatyah prámuñcatu "If we have committed sin with speech, thought, with arms, thighs, knees (or) genital organs, may Agni Gārhapatya free me from that sin"; TA. 10, 24 (31): yád áhnā pāpam akārsám mánásá vácā hastābhyām | pádbhyām údárena šisná | áhas tád avalumpátú "The sin that I have committed by day with thought, speech, hands, feet, stomach and genital organ,-may the day destroy (or, stifle) it "; Mukundamālāstotra 15: kāyena vācā manasendriyair vā buddhyātmanā vā prakrtes svabhāvāt | karomi yad-yat sakalam parasmai Nārāyanāyaiva samarpayāmi "Whatever I do, with body, thought, speech, sense-organs, mind, spirit, or according to nature, all that I make over to the great Nārāyaṇa alone"; Śivāparādha-kṣamāpaṇa-stotra 14: kara-carana-kṛtam vā karma-vāk-kāyajam vā śravana-nayanajam vā mānasam vā 'parādham | vihitam avihitam vā sarvam etat kşamasva jaya jaya karunābdhe śrī-Mahādeva Śambho; 15 and the expression mama janma-prabhrty etat-ksana-paryantam madhya-vartini kāle rahasi prakāse ca mano-vāk-kāya-karmabhih jñānato'jñānatas ca sambhāvitasakala-dosa-parihārārtham that occurs in the samkalpa 16

<sup>16</sup> A samkalpa is a formula recited before performing vratas, giving gifts, bathing in rivers, etc., in which, after mentioning exact particulars of the time and place, the performer sets forth his 'intention', that is, what he is going to do, with what object and how. In a formula that I have often heard recited in the Kannada country, there occur the following (or similar) words in the place printed on pp. 1300 ff. of the Telugu edition (Mysore, 1914) of Nrsimha's Prayoga-pārijāta, Şodasakarmakānda.

Compare also Manu 1, 104: mano-vāg-dehajaih karma-doṣaih; MBh. 3, 146, 89: karmasu deha-vāk-citta-dūṣiṣu; ibid. 1, 62, 25: sarīrena kṛtam pāpam vācā ca manasaiva ca and the other passages cited by Pischel on p. 230, l. c. in which human actions are divided into three groups kāyika, vācika, and mānasika. The words padbhih and tanūbhih of the above verse refer to two of these groups: tanūbhih corresponds to kāya, šarīra and deha in the above-cited passages and padbhih to manas and citta in them.

Regarding bhurijoh, the observations of Pischel on p. 239f. l. c. make it very probable that it denotes "Schleif-apparat; Schleifmaschine", i. e., a machine (something like a grinding wheel) which consisted of a wheel that moved freely between two shafts. It is this wheel that is denoted by the word ratha, either by synechdoche, or because ratha itself has that meaning. 17 of those given above: mama iha-janmani purvajanmani janma-janmāntareşu bālya-yauvana-kaumara-vārdhakyeşu jāgrat-svapna-suṣupty-avasthāsu tvak-cakṣuś-śrotra-jihvā-ghrāṇa-vāk-pāṇi-pāda-pāyūpasthair jñānato' jñānato vā mano-vāk-kāya-karmabhis sambhāvitānām sarveṣām pāpānām. Compare in connection with this AV.6,96,3: yāc cākṣuṣā mānasā yāc ca vācôpārimā jāgrato yāt svapāntah | sōmas tāni svadhāyā naḥ punātu and RV. 10, 164, 3: yād āśāsā niḥśāsā 'bhiśāsopārimā jāgrato yāt svapāntah | agnīr vīśvāny āpa duṣkṛtāny ājuṣṭāny ārɛ asmād dadhātu.

17 ratha in ratha-nābhi similarly denotes 'wheel' in Bṛh. Up. 2, 5, 15: yathā ratha-nābhau ca ratha-nemau cārāḥ sarve samar pitāḥ and in Muṇḍ. Up. 2, 2, 6; Praś. Up. 2, 6; and 6, 6: arā iva rathanābhau. Likewise, ratha=wheel, in Kauṣ. Up. 3, 8: yathā rathasyāreşu nemir ar pitah.

Compare for instance VS. 34, 5: yásminn feah sắma yájūnsi yásmin prátisthitā rathanābháv ivārāh "in which are firmly established the rks, sāman and yajus, as spokes in the nave of the wheel"; 5, 63, 7: sūryam ā dhattho divi citryam rátham "ye have placed in the sky Sūrya, the brilliant wheel"; 18 and 9, 71, 5: sám ī rátham ná bhurijor ahesata dása svásārah "the ten sisters (i. e., fingers) have set in motion (Soma) like the wheel of a grinding machine." ápasā denotes the effort that one has to make in turning the wheel.

The simile rátham ná kránto... is to be construed with pādas ab; and the meaning of the verse thus is, "O Agni, in all that we have done for thee (i.e., in thy honour and for thy glorification) with thoughts, hands and bodies and with effort comparable to that which one makes when turning the grinding wheel, we have always sought to uphold the law and have aspired after it."

In rtam yemuh in pāda d, there is an abrupt transition from the first person (vayám cakṛmá) of the other three pādas into the third person. There seems to be no doubt however that the sudhyà āśuṣāṇāḥ of d are identical with the priests that are referred to as vayám in a. Compare the next verse, ádhā mātúr uṣásaḥ saptá viprā jāyemahi prathamā vedháso nṛn . . in which the first person is again used and the change again into the third person in vv. 16, 17.

r/ám in d is to be construed with both yemuh and  $\bar{a}sus\bar{a}n\bar{a}h$ , as pointed out by Pischel (p. 230, l.c.); compare 4, 23, 10 and also 4, 1, 13 and 4, 2, 16.

This closes the list of RV passages in which the word padbhih occurs. In all these, as I trust has been made plain by the foregoing, padbhih has the value of dhībhih, manobhih, dhītibhih, etc., and is a derivative of the root spas 'to see.' The word padbhih that is found used in VS. 23, 13, on the other hand, is the equivalent of padbhih and is clearly derived, as said by Uvaṭa and Mahīdhara, from pad 'foot.' The cerebralization of the letter d is anomalous and perhaps due to false analogy (cp. Lanman, Noun Inflection p. 475).
